VARICOCELE, EMISSIONS AND SYPHILIS CURED.

W. S. COLLINS. W. S. Collins, of Saginaw, Speaks. W. S. COLLINS.

"I am 29. At 15 I learned a bad habit which I continued till 19. I then became "one of the boys" and led a gay life. Exposure produced Syphilis. I became nervous and despondent; no ambition; memory poor; eyes red, sunken and blur; pimples on face; hair loose, bone pains; weak back; varicocele; dreams and losses at night; weak parts; deposit in urine, etc. I spent hundreds of dollars without help, and was contemplating suicide when a friend recommended Drs. Kennedy & Kergan's New Method Treatment. Thank God I tried it. In two months I was cured. This was six years ago, and never had a return. Was married two years ago and all happy. Boys, try Drs. Kennedy & Kergan before giving up hope."

"I live on the farm. At school I learned an early habit, which weakened me physically, sexually and mentally. Family Doctors said I was going into "decline" (Consumption). Finally "The Golden Monitor," edited by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan fell into my hands. I learned the Truth and Grace. Self abuse had sapped my vitality. I took the New Method Treatment and was cured. My friends think I was cured of Consumption. I have sent them many patients, all of whom were cured. Their New Method Treatment supplies vigor, vitality and manhood."

THURSDAY.....JULY 19, 1894.

BLAND calls up his free silver bill again this week.

READ carefully the article on "Income Tax." It has valuable ideas.

PULLMANISM must go. Pullman and Debs should go out and kill each other.

NEW YORK legislature has just passed an arbitration law. All states will follow, no doubt.

CLEVELAND has signed the bill enabling Utah to call a convention to be admitted as a state.

THE conference committee of the House and senate, get on slowly. It is difficult to agree on the tariff rates.

BOLTING republicans nominated Judge Johnson at Valparaiso Tuesday for congress. Now they have two candidates, and the democrats are likely to win.

FIRST Michigan peaches were sent to Chicago Friday last from Benton Harbor. Peaches will be a heavy crop there.

TUESDAY night Co. G. 4th Ind., militia had to fire on a mob near East Chicago as they had wrecked a freight. No lives lost.

SEVERAL strikers from Whiting, near Hammond, are up for trial at Indianapolis for posting "strike notices" in the railroad yards there.

CONN, declines to run for congress in the Elkhart district. Now we are ready to hear from McNagny. The latter need not make an excuse though Conn did.

JASON B. BROWN, present congressman from the Third district failed to get a renomination last week. It went to S. M. Stockslager, a stronger man. Brown used to be known in the state legislature as "Jason Bazoo Brown" as he was a loud and endless talker.

BARR, the Vandalia engineer, it will be remembered was killed in the late coal strike in this state, by a stone thrown into the cab of his engine. Four men have been sent up for two years for manslaughter, though it is difficult to say which one threw the stone.

MEN who one week are calling loudly for work and complaining that many can find nothing to do, the next week abandon the work they have secured and are ready to kill the needy men who are willing to take their place. Such men will be apt to lose the sympathy heretofore extended to them.

PRENDERGAST, the murderer of Mayor Harrison, was hanged Friday. This worthless villain has probably cost Chicago and Cook county $100,000. And he never denied the murder. It was only a plea of insanity. The murder was on Sept. 28 of last year, and they have been "trying" him ever since.

SEVERAL labor meetings in the east hissed every mention of President Cleveland. They objected to his putting a stop to lawlessness and mob rule. He had stopped the wholesale destruction of property by fire and by violence, and they were mad about it. He had opened the traffic of the nation, restored hundreds of factories to work as well as tens of thousands of people who needed the wages they could earn, and these thoughtless persons hate him for it.

PULLMAN has been lauded to the skies as a great benefactor of the laboring man. Whole chapters have been written about the "model city" his company owns. Now the veil is lifted, and Pullman stands revealed as a hard hearted taskmaster who has wrung from his workingmen every penny he could without resort to actual robbery. The romance that has hung about him and his model city is dispelled, and the wealthy nabob and his poor workmen make a sharp contrast in the picture an interested public is now gazing on.

GOV. LEWELLING, populist, of Kansas, proves that the new party is at least as dishonest as the "corrupt old parties." He has just pardoned out of the penitentiary a noted bank, express and train robber, who promised to show him where he hid his stolen money and give him half of it. He was to meet the governor at the place named, but he has not been heard from. Now it will be in order for populists to explain by what right a governor can pardon a noted criminal for the sake of private gain. We suppose it is all right if he is in favor of free silver.

NATIONAL revenues seem to be improving, and expenses under a democratic administration are getting very much smaller. So far in July we have collected from internal revenue about 16 millions as against 4 millions in the same weeks last year. Duties on imports, however, are less. Last year the balance of trade with foreign nations was greatly against us. This year so far it has been greatly in our favor, our exports showing about 200 millions more than our imports. Receipts this month exceed expenses. This will be bad news for republicans and populists.

"UNION" and "non-union" are terms that are becoming a little too common, or rather the abuse of the "union" business is becoming too common. The "union men" at Ashley were determined that U. S. marshals should not be fed. At Terre Haute some dining room girls refused to wait on some "non-union" men because they were "scabs." At different times and places, where railway firemen had struck, the engineers, though not striking, refused to work with "scab" firemen who had been hired to take the place of the strikers. Much of this "union" and "scab" business looks silly to an outsider.

INDIANA State Normal School at Terre Haute had 66 students the first year, 1870, and this year has 1330. This of itself, speaks for the satisfactory work done there.

CARLISLE, secretary of treasury, like all democrats, believes in a liberal amount of new silver coinage. He will probably soon begin and coin about 2 millions a month. That is sensible.

INDIANA militia will not hold a state encampment this year. They get practice more valuable without this as long as the big strike lasts. All the companies but four have now been called out for service.

LATEST from Hammond. All is quiet. Eight new companies of Indiana militia have arrived. They are the companies from Auburn, Waterloo, Angola, Covington, Decatur, Crawfordsville and Ft. Wayne, and a Gatling gun from Ft. Wayne. They are sent there merely to relieve those who have been there so long and are tired out and many sick, for they have had severe service. The new troops will likely stay till quiet is certain.

DEBS and several A. R. U. leaders are in jail as they would not give bonds. The charge is contempt of orders of U. S. court. He had been ordered not to interfere with the working of the North Pacific road, as it was in the hands of the U. S. court which had appointed a receiver. But Debs did not obey, but kept sending orders to the men to make more trouble and to strike. As an example of his orders, here is one send to A. R. U. men in Montana: "Hold out 48 hours, and there will be general paralysis. Potatoes and ice are all gone here in Chicago. Save your money and buy a gun." It is for this sort of treasonable and anarchistic work, that he is held for trial.

REPUBLICAN are likely again to save the democratic party from threatened defeat just as they have already done several times. They put forth assertions that the most ignorant in the land know to be false. This sort of over dose, the people kick against. They go off and of their own accord vote with the democrats. We are reminded of these things, by again being told that "democrats are not willing that foreigners should support our government by paying the tariff taxes." The duty on wool, for instance, is 12 cents; the selling price of wool is about 12 cents. And common people cannot see how the "foreigner" can pay us 12 cents a pound on the wool he sends over here and sells for 12 cents. He would get nothing for the wool.

ARBITRATORS may yet be appointed to investigate the trouble at Pullman. There is a U. S. law enacted in 1888 that empowers the president to appoint such a commission when he thinks there is a need for so doing. He can appoint two men, while the man who is at the time U. S. Labor Commissioner becomes the third man. The three have a right to investigate as a court and put witnesses on oath. President Cleveland has signified his intention to do this. If this is done, the commission will find out whether Pullman lied when he said he was losing money and so had to reduce wages. Since writing the above we have found the law and publish it. It appears from a closer examination that Pullman will not be investigated as the law applies only to railroads. Let the states now make laws to call up Pullman.

THE unmistakable tone of all the populist papers is in favor of Debs and his strikers just as they were in favor of Coxey and his hoboes. Their idea of bettering society, improving our government and purifying politics seems to consist in encouraging idleness, mob law, law breaking, begging and tramping, as well as laying the foundation for confusion and corruption in every branch of government. Their claim of superiority over their neighbors is a humbug and a howling fraud. Their self-righteousness is a sham. Their teachings and tendencies are dangerous to the public welfare and to good government. If anyone had doubted the truth of what we have stated in this article, the events of the last six months have brought out facts enough to convince him. There is sufficient tendency to socialism and anarchy, without having it taught by a political party.

A TERRIBLE accident occurred at Chicago Monday afternoon. Three companies of cavalry and one of artillery, all regulars, were marching along a wide street when an ammunition wagon or caisson exploded blowing men and horses in all directions. Two men on the caisson were blown to pieces, another killed outright and a fourth died that evening. Two more were mortally wounded and ten others more or less seriously hurt. Two women and a boy who were near by were hurt by flying bullets or pieces of shells or glass from windows. Many houses were shattered and not only were windows broken, but articles inside were destroyed. Supposed to be caused by a cap getting loose on one of the shells and so allowing powder to leak out. It is claimed that such an accident never occurred before in our army. The ammunition in the caisson was carefully inspected the night before, as is done every day. But some parts of the pavement were rough and the explosion happened just as a wheel dropped into a rut.

The Big Strike.

Business on most railroads has been resumed, not only as to passenger traffic, but freight. In Chicago, the great center of the trouble, the presence of a large force of troops, both regulars and militia, had a wholesome effect. The various railroads went to work, one after another, mostly with new men, though with some roads the old men were still at work, not having struck. A few roads whose men had struck took them back, though this was rare. Traffic all over the country began at once to pick up. Still there were other points that were still in trouble and at some places where there had been no strike at first the men would be called out and leave their work. Troubles of various kinds were caused in this way. Debs, the president of the A. R. U., made several calls for the men of that order to strike, but in many cases they refused. In the eastern states the men declared they needed the work to support their families and did not propose to give up their jobs for the uncertain chance of helping the Pullman employes. In other cases, however, some of the "brotherhoods" went out and all the business connected with them came to a standstill. As a result of these various strikes, factories, shops and stores all over the land had to stop work or reduce the number of their employes. In one Ohio town nearly 100 women and girls were thrown out of work because no material could be obtained. In California and the Pacific states there has been some rioting, but it is pretty nearly under control. Some of the coal strikes in Illinois are causing trouble, but troops were sent and soon restored quiet. In this state the coal strike was revived in two or three places, but did not stop business very much. At Fontanet, a small town near Brazil in this state, a number of strikers threw a switch out of place on the Big Four and ditched a passenger train. The engineer and fireman were both killed, being crushed under the engine. One of the wreckers is in jail and has confessed.

Pullman has sent out a statement in which he still insists he was paying his men more than he could afford to, and that counting the amount of labor and material in a sleeping car, he had to sell the cars at a loss. He, however, gives no reason why he did not lower the rents of his houses at Pullman. The latest reports from Pullman indicate that the men begin to feel the need of money and will go back to work if they are allowed to do so. Debs has offered to order the A. R. U. to go to work again if the various companies would agree to take all the strikers back. But the companies would not do this. So Debs is trying to keep up the strike by calling out men wherever he can find enough A. R. U. men to amount to anything. But, altogether, the worst seems to be over. Many U. S deputy marshals have been discharged and sent home. This includes a number at Ft. Wayne and at Ashley.

New Law Firm.

There have been two changes in our law firms. One is by the separation of the firm of Hartman & West, Mr. West going into business alone, and the entrance into business of the new firm of Hartman & Hartman. Hon. E. D. Hartman the well known and successful attorney who has been in the law practice in this county for more than twenty-five years, has associated with himself his son Walter C Hartman, who has just finished a full law course at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. He has been studying and assisting more or less in his father's office for a number of years, and now enters fully on the active practice. Both members will practice in all courts, will do collecting and assist in the settlement of estates, etc., and promptly care for all business put into their hands. They occupy the same room in the second floor of the corner across the street north of the Swineford House that has been Mr. Hartman's quarters for many years. Here their patrons and clients will all always find them ready for business.

Obituary.

Elizabeth Long was born in York Co., Pa., May 10, 1834, and died July 11, 1894, her age being 60 years, 2 months and 1 day. She came to Indiana with her father's family in 1853. Oct. 9, 1854, she was united in marriage to Wm. Grube at Auburn, Ind., by Elder S. B. Ward. Seven children are left to mourn a loving mother. She was at all times and under all circumstances, kind, thoughtful and affectionate to husband and children and highly regarded and loved by her neighbors. She had been an invalid for about two years. The funeral was at the home southwest of Auburn on Saturday, July 14, 1894, Rev. W. L. Meese officiating. The interment was in Woodlawn.

CARD OF THANKS.

The family and relatives of Mrs. Wm. Grube take this means to thank most heartily their kind friends and neighbors who did so much to lessen the heavy burden of their recent bereavement. Their kindness will not be forgotten.

Off to the Front.

The Auburn Rifles are off to the front, which means they have gone to Hammond. They have been looking for orders ever since a week ago Monday, when they were held under arms all day. This time it came by a telegram Monday night at about two o'clock, directing them to turn out and be ready to go, and in the morning of Tuesday, a few hours later, the same dispatch came over another line to Capt. Kuhlman. In the meantime he had sent messengers in all directions, including several points in the country, and soon after daylight the boys were on hand with full equipments. Most of the men reside in town, though a number are farmers' sons, and they came in all sunburned and weather stained, but ready and even jubilant. When at nine o'clock they marched to the Jackson station to meet the southbound train, they were forty-five strong out of a possible fifty. The forty-sixth was at Ft. Wayne and he joined them there. Two are at work at a distance and word could not be got too them. One was detained at home by the dangerous illness of his mother and serious illness of his sister.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Eva Christie is plaintiff and Allen Andrews and Sarah E. Andrews are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two thousand seven hundred seventy-nine dollars and eight cents ($2,779.08) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on Saturday, August 4, 1894,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the court house of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section one (1) in township thirty-three (33) north, range twelve (12) east. Also all that part of the east half of said northeast quarter of section one (1) township and range aforesaid, that lies north of the right of way of the Wabash, St Louis and Pacific railroad (Eel River Division) and the west bank of Little Cedar Creek, excepting one and one-fourth (1¼) acres of land from said last described parcel heretofore sold and deeded to Mary Ann Carper by George Clark by deed dated March 24, 1874, all situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

GEORGE C. RALSTON,
Sheriff of DeKalb county.
By R. Blum, Deputy.
Auburn, Indiana, July 11, 1894.
Thomas L. Graves, Attorney for Plaintiff.

L. T. Rice, the photographer who has been located here for so many years, will remove next week with his family to Wabash, and there locate permanently in business. He has there, as he has had here, a good, new ground floor room in a central location in that lively city, and will no doubt step at once into a good business. We hope so at least. He certainly had a good business here, and we suppose he makes this change to increase it, for Wabash is a larger town than this. He has made many friends here by his business-like methods, and he has always been among the foremost in all good works. He is a skilled photographer, and a pleasant man to deal with. We hope the go d people of Wabash will extend to him and his family a cordial welcome, and that they will be prosperous in their new home.

Hillsdale Telephone-News: In some localities in this county a tiny worm is working in the roots of clover, similar in nature to the Hessian fly in wheat. The clover looks as though it had been frosted, but on close examination it proves to be a worm working in the roots, thus hastening it to maturity. Pull up a root and it will be found to be eaten entirely off just below the surface.

Judge Adair, of Columbia City, came up again on Monday evening to hold court here again. It is to continue the work of investigating the legality of the mortgages given in the Davis assignment, at least those given only a short time before the assignment was made. Judge Ninde, of Ft Wayne, and J. E. Rose, of of this place, were attorneys in the Davis interest and Judge McClellan took the other side. Very able and exhaustive arguments were made.

Kendallville Standard:—A little chap at LaGrange and a member of the infant class in one of the many Sunday schools there, was very desirous of obtaining a bicycle. His Sunday school instructor informed him if he would pray for one he might be successful. The little fellow accordingly indulged in supplications in a bicycle strain, which were heard by the father and he immediately procured a tricycle that evening and placed it in one corner of the little fellow's room. Upon awakened in the morning his eyes fell upon the tricycle the first thing. After looking at it for a spell he remarked "Oh, God, can't you tell a bicycle from a tricycle?"

The Lutherans are full of enterprise and do not stop for hot weather or anything else when any improvement is needed. Although the church building is large, they have seen the need of more room, and have just completed an addition to the east end. This is of brick, with slate roof and stained windows, all being the same exterior work and finish as the rest of the church. The brick work was done by the Lawrence boys. Inside, the finishing and woodwork was done by Ed. Dosch and Frank Baughman. It is of beautiful southern pine, highly polished and is of a tasty pattern. It adds greatly to the beauty of the interior. The extra room needed is for the choir and gives them seating a little above, and behind where the minister stands. L. Bowers and Squire Walborn superintended the entire work, and of course helped liberally.

MARRIED:—July 17, 1894, Ernest N. Hutchison, a veterinary surgeon of Odel, Ill., and Bessie Brubaker, of Berlin, Pa. The bridegroom coming from the west and the bride from the east, met at Auburn Junction, where they were united in matrimony, at the hotel, by Rev. Geo. Engelman, pastor of the Reformed church in Auburn.

An alarm of fire, vigorously sounded last Thursday at 11 a. m. called out the fire department and all the rest of the town, at short notice. The engine ran south and everybody, thought it was the Wabash coal house once more. But it proved to be the Wabash Water tank. It was soon put out. But it must be very dry weather when water tanks catch fire from an engine.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Lutheran church elected the following officers last Sunday evening: Pres., Bertha Blaney; vice pres.; Minnie Douglass; sec., Libbie Hosler; treas, Maude Bottenberg; cor. sec., Myrtle Metcalf; chorister, Meda Frederick; organist, Cora Swanders. This society has a large and increasing membership and much interest is manifest in their meetings. They extend a hearty welcome to all to meet with them.

John Weaver, Perry Long, James Pearce and Ora Brandon, who are making the repairs and changes in the Swineford House, started in on Tuesday to remove the front of the part where the office is. It was already a very fine front with its large windows and iron columns. But it is to be entirely changed and a new front of the latest style put in. They put in strong supports to prevent any possibility of damage, and then cut out and removed the whole of the front. In working at this on Tuesday, Perry Long loosened a portion of the brick work, and in falling it carried with it the scaffold on which Ora Brandon and James Pearce were working. They fell to the floor, one inside the room and the other out, but except some slight bruises, were not hurt.

Steuben Republican—W. W. Wyrick, of Ashley, accompanied by M. N. Noble, a representative of the strikers at that place, was in town Monday consulting attorneys on an interesting question of law. Mr. Wyrick runs a hotel there and the strikers demanded that he should refuse admission and accommodations to the United States marshals who have been sent there by the government. Whether Mr. Wyrick con'd comply with this request, even if willing to do so, without laying himself liable was the question to be determined. The attorneys here to whom Mr. Wyrick and Mr. Noble applied for information all concurred in the opinion that Mr. Wyrick could not refuse the marshals admission to his hotel under the circumstances, without incurring liability therefor.

EVERGREEN CEMETERY is incorporated under the laws of Indiana for the purpose of keeping the grounds in repair. The directors are authorized to make assessments against lots and to collect the same either by suit against owners or by advertising and selling lots. As all lot owners are equally interested in keeping the grounds in order at as little expense as possible it is desired that all pay when due without waiting to be notified. A penalty of ten percent is added to all deliquents and must be collected. The directors have extended the time for payment to July 1, and all payments made prior to July 30th, will be treated as having been paid June 30.

There was quite an excitement at the south end Tuesday evening, over a fire down near the B. & O. track, in Stamets' Addition. Scores of people rushed to the scene of destruction, only to find a big brush heap on fire; and each in turn would turn around and laugh at the next victim of the scare.

Rev. Geo. Engleman pastor of the Reformed church here is a busy man. In addition to the services published elsewhere, he has services once during the week both here and at Garrett. He also preaches at Garrett each Sunday afternoon in German, and gives them an English sermon in the evening of the Sundays when he does not preach in English here.

Dr. Joseph E. Morr, one of our DeKalb medics, who had moved to Cecil, Ohio, has found a field that suits him better and has located at Orland, Steuben county. We don't wish the people up there the bad luck to get sick, but if they do, we advise them to consult Dr. Morr, who has the theory and practice of the profession right up to date.

There was no preaching at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening, its place being taken by the regular Christian Endeavor exercises. Both Endeavors took part, the little Juniors doing their part as well as any. James Simons was leader. Some of our older people should attend these C. E. meetings. The earnestness and ability of the young members would be a revelation to them.

D. A. Garwood's new residence is approaching completion and will be a model of comfort and convenience. He has given the matter a great deal of thought and we doubt if a residence in Auburn will be better fitted in all things that go to make a perfect home. Besides, he has filled the grounds up n t less than four feet, for although the lot was a perfectly dry one, it is much better to be raised, and this enables him to have a good high ceiled basement.

Squire Ross had a provoke case tried before him last week. At least the parties tried to try it. Old man Rinehart who had such an unsavory reputation when he lived in Auburn, now lives near Waterloo, and he got it into his head that Bert Weidner's folks had been calling his folks naughty names. He had them arrested for "provoke." Deputy prosecutor West represented the state, and W. H. Less the defense, Rinehart soon saw he had no case and gave it up. But the prosecutor, justice, constable and jurymen are all out of pocket to the amount of their fees, and the constable had to pay for his team. A man like Rinehart should be made to put up enough for costs before getting his neighbors into court.

The Hub's Boy's Head-to-Foot Outfit.

For several months past our readers have seen the advertisement in our columns of "Boys Head-to-Foot Outfit. $5.00." It includes a suit of all wool clothes, Stanley Cap to match the suit, and a pair of stout and shapely shoes. It is sent on receipt of price, or, if the buyer wants to examine the goods before paying for them he sends $1.00 and the outfit is then sent by express with privilege of examination, then if satisfactory the purchaser pays the other $4.00. If not he announces that he does not want the goods and they are sent back to the express company and the Hub sends the dollar back. Nothing could be fairer than this, and the offer comes from one of the biggest houses in the United States.

THE no longer airy, fairy Lillian Russell has tired of her latest husband, the italicized or Italianized American tenor, John Chatterton—Giovanni Perugini—and incontinently cast him off with as little ceremony as she would an old glove. Lillian should really be more careful; the statistics show that husbands of any kind are getting very scarce, while husbands with tenor voices and complaisant dispositions have of late become as scarce as hen's teeth. Chatterton-Perugini may not have been much of a husband, but he must have been better than none at all, and if the plump prima donna had been wise she would have held on to him until something better offered at any rate.

BY the end of the present year we shall probably know, much more exactly than at present, the area of Uncle Sam's territory, and be able to indicate upon our maps the true boundary line between it and the domain of Queen Victoria. The Coast and Geodetic Survey has started upon its third summer's work on the Alaskan frontier, in co-operation with the Canadian Land Survey, and it is confidently expected that the work will be completed this year. We speak of Alaska as our Arctic province, and not altogether inappropriately, since a large part of it lies within the Arctic Zone. Yet almost tropical conditions prevail in the southern part of it. Mosquitoes and other insect pests are inconceivably numerous, and vegetation is jungle-like in its rank profusion. The surveyors have to struggle with obstacles more like those Mr. Stanley found in the Ituri wilderness than those which confront Arctic adventurers.

THE news comes that England has at last decided to begin the construction of an immense dock at Gibraltar. This will put an end to the rumor that Great Britain intends to give the rock back to Spain—to which country it unquestionably belongs—in return for certain advantages on the Morocco coast. The rumor was well founded; the advice of some of England's ablest admirals has been to give up the fortress. But at last the British cabinet, observing that Morocco is to be a bone of contention, perhaps the subject of a great naval war, decides to keep what it has got. In possession of Gibraltar, it controls the entrance to the Mediterranean. If France sets up shop opposite, on the Morocco headlands, which England, of course, will not allow her to do without a fight, there will be all the more need of "Gib." We may see, before the close of the century, the greatest naval battle of modern times under the "Rock."

A WOMAN who has recently written on "The Highest Education of Women" argues that educated women are not paying the debt they owe to society by turning to practical account the education they have received. This is strange ground for a woman to assume. A good definition of practical results of education is "work that adds to the moral, mental, or material wealth of the world." It is not easy to say how much educated women are contributing to the material wealth of the world, but on the moral and mental side they certainly are doing their full share, or perhaps more. To say nothing of the women preachers, lawyers, lecturers and "reformers" of various kinds, we should say that more women than men are engaged in the work of teaching, than which there is assuredly nothing of greater mental or moral value to the world. And not a few women teachers have attained eminence in their profession. A much juster view than that cited would be that women have paid society more handsomely than men for the education they have received—for which, be it said, they owe society precious little, if anything.

THE shocking news of the death of President Carnot, of France, at the hands of an assassin was received throughout Europe with a sense of horror and added fear as to the outlook for the immediate future in the French republic. The incidents leading up to the calamity were of a kind to make the terror of the deed all the more striking. In the midst of a fete at the international exhibition at Lyons, whither the President had gone to assist in the celebrations of the international exposition, M. Carnot was struck down in the act of bowing from his carriage in response to the cheers of a crowd of enthusiastic people. From the fact that the assassin is a young foreigner, and apparently but slightly familiar with the French tongue, it may be supposed that the murder is the work of a madman or of an anarchist rather than the outgrowth of any domestic political intrigues. However that may be, the prospect for France during the coming weeks is a very grave one, and the eyes of Europe will be centered on the republic for some time to come. Torn and rent by political enmities and passions, with many parties of as many different minds, and a number of ambitious men striving for the honors of the Presidency, the outcome of future events in France is beyond any power to foretell. As is well known, M. Carnot had good reason to expect reelection for another term. Hitherto his administration had been marked by conservatism, honesty of purpose and the respect and confidence of even the diverse warring political factions which in France are many and bitterly at variance. With him as President there was at least the prospect of seven years more of stability in the republic. What will follow now it is simply impossible to say, for in the excited temper which the French assume after any public calamity the recurrence of even revolution itself is by no means impossible. Meantime and in the hour of her calamity France has the sympathy of all people throughout the civilized world. In the death of her President she loses an honest and singularly sincere and straightforward official and a man who was a credit to the country which he governed with prudence and patriotic devotion.

She Was Safe.

A Cambridge car had stopped (says the Boston Budget) in front of Black Hall. Mrs. Casey, who sat near the front door, tackled her bundle of washing and started to leave by the front platform. The bundle was rather large and decidedly awkward to handle, and, when she reached the street, it slipped from her grasp and fell upon one of the tracks. She started quickly to recover it, but a sudden apprehension seized her, and she stopped. Looking at the motorman, she said, doubtfully: "If Oi put me fut on the track, will Oi hov a shock?" "No, madam," replied the motorman, gravely, "not unless you put your other foot on the trolley wire."

BIG STRIKE OF 1877.

UPRISING WHICH ENDED IN ANARCHY AND DEATH.

It Began on the B. & O.—Martinsburg, W. Va., Was the Scene of First Violence—Pittsburg Experienced a Reign of Terror—Chicago Put Down the Mobs.

Involved East and West.

The strike growing out of the Pullman controversy recalls vividly the deeds of violence of the year 1877, when the whole country was involved. The strike of '77 occurred also in July and had its beginning in the East. On the 16th of the month engineers and firemen on the Baltimore and Ohio at Martinsburg, W. Va., left their posts, and in less than twenty hours the whole Baltimore and Ohio system was idle. The Pennsylvania and Erie lines soon became involved, and within a week the strike was inaugurated in thirteen States. Before Aug. 1, 15,000 men had resisted constituted authority, blood had been shed in Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri, the President of the United States had resorted to proclamation, calling forth the Federal troops, thirteen Governors had exercised similar powers to summon the militia; trade and commerce were paralyzed and scenes of devastation and murder unequaled in America since the civil war had been enacted at Pittsburg and other cities.

The strike of '77 was caused by a reduction in wages. The B. & O.'s failing revenues was the excuse for a cut of 10 per cent., and at it the workmen revolted. The trouble at Martinsburg was soon followed by bloodshed and the overcoming of the State troops sent to the scene by Gov. Matthews. The Governor appealed to President Hayes, who ordered regular soldiers to Martinsburg and issued a proclamation commanding the strikers to disperse. No attention was given to this proclamation, and in Cumberland, Grafton, Parkersburg, and Camden violence prevailed.

The entire line of the B. & O., between Chicago and Baltimore, soon became involved and the latter city was in a state of riot by July 20. State troops used their guns on the mobs, and as a consequence twelve persons were killed. Three were respectable citizens who had been drawn into the crowd by curiosity. The others were rioters and foreigners. Most of them were members of the "Workingmen's Party of the United States," the American branch of the "internationals," and as events proved this society was largely instrumental in fomenting the riots. The movement was at that time new in America, having been imported by Johann Most and Justus Schwab. The movement was destined to spread and grow until it received its quietus in the Cook County jail ten years later on the scaffold of Spies, Parsons, Engel and Schwab.

A second proclamation was issued. All law-abiding citizens enrolled themselves against anarchy. The Baltimore & Ohio Company made formal announcement that it would make no further effort to run trains.

Meantime a "sympathetic" strike had paralyzed the Pennsylvania company, and the storm-center howled over Pittsburg. The Sheriff of Allegheny County was defied, and three regiments of militia were stationed on the track. The presence of the military only inflamed the mob, which grew in numbers and violence as the hours passed.

Pittsburg's Reign of Terror.

As the night of July 21, 1877, fell in Pittsburg, the streets of the city in the vicinity of the Pennsylvania station and tracks were thronged with a mob that outnumbered the militia three to one. Besides the strikers were the lawless elements of the scums and the still more pernicious agents of the "Internationalists." Women mingled with the men, vying with them in the violence of their words and acts.

It proved a night of terror to Pittsburg and to the State of Pennsylvania. Violence began, even before nightfall, at the Twenty-eighth street crossing, the principal rendezvous of the strikers. The Sheriff of Allegheny County repaired thither to read the riot act. He was accompanied by a posse and re-enforced by a brigade of militia under command of Gen. Brinton. The strikers hooted the Sheriff, and when he attempted to arrest one of their number offered resistance. The militia at once opened fire on the crowd, and sixteen persons fell dead.

This bloodshed was but the beginning of a street war that raged through the night. Not less than 20,000 people surged about the Twenty-eighth street crossing, the scene of the first fusillade. They surrounded the militia, hurling bricks and paving stones into their ranks. Special violence was displayed against the companies from Philadelphia. At 9 o'clock the mob broke into a number of hardware stores and procured arms and ammunition. Thus re-enforced they returned to the roundhouse in which the militia were intrenched, swearing to exterminate them.

All night long the battle raged. At 1 o'clock the fire bells sounded to announce the union station was in flames. It had been fired by the strikers, who with their allies were pillaging the freight houses and robbing the cars. The fire department responded, but was not allowed to play upon the flames. A spirit of fury possessed the mob. Men ran about with torches setting fire to the railway property. Barrels of oil were emptied upon cars of coke and set into disastrous blaze. The 800 militiamen now found themselves surrounded by flames and forced to fight their way out. By a fortunate oversight the Philadelphia companies were able to make their way into Penn avenue, but here their escape was discovered and they were at once charged upon by the mob. They retorted with their gatling guns, but contined in their flight until they reached Sharpsburg, six miles up the river. Eight of their number fell in the flight.

The fire raged all that Sunday, spread by the rioters, involving in its ruin the Union depot and all the offices of the Pennsylvania Company, its sheds and the buildings of its leased lines, besides several hundreds of cars full of valuable freight. The citizens of Pittsburg stood by stunned, watching without attempt at interference men, women and children of the unruly orders pillaging cars and carrying away their loot in their arms. By Sunday night the fires and the mobs had spent their fury, and Gen. Hancock arrived on the scene with a large Federal force—only to find there was nothing for him to do.

The scenes of violence and murder at Pittsburg were copied in small in every important railway center of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, New York and Illinois. There was violence at Buffalo and along the line of the Lake Shore road. The fever spread from Boston to San Francisco as the people realized for the first time the meaning of anarchy.

During the passage of these exciting events the men in Chicago became riotous, and on July 23, the switchmen of the Michigan Central struck. Next day they were followed by the firemen and brakemen of the same road and other roads, and by noon not a road but the Northwestern was moving freight. As in the East, agitation stirred up the people and Federal aid was asked as protection against violence. This did not deter the mob from visiting factories and compelling those at work to leave their jobs. Special police were sworn in and the militia called out. On Thursday, July 26, there were several battles, resulting in the killing of eight persons. Next day, with the help of regular soldiers, the mobs were overawed and the strike practically came to an end without gaining that for which it was inaugurated.

WORKERS FOR CHRIST.

The Christian Endeavor Convention at Cleveland—Twenty Thousand Present.

Notwithstanding the uncertain conditions of travel incident to the great railroad strike, it is estimated that 20,000 strangers attended the Christian Endeavor convention in Cleveland, Ohio. Every one of this number was anxious to secure a place within the doors of the Saengerfest Building, and long before 10 o'clock on the opening day every seat and every available inch of standing-room in the hall was occupied. Those who could not get into the hall were accommodated in a monster tent in the eastern part of the city, having a seating capacity for 10,000. It was the greatest demonstration ever made by the Christian Endeavorers and was a forcible evidence of the growth not only of this organization but of the spirit of practical Christianity. The large percentage of young people in the audience was especially noticeable, the great majority of the gathering consisting of youths and maidens just entering upon the period of manhood and womanhood. The decorations of the hall were expressive of the patriotism as well as the faith of the audience—flags, banners and scriptural mottoes being displayed in great profusion. The address of welcome was delivered by Governor McKinley. The Governor was very cordially received, and his words were applauded vigorously.

In the absence of President Clark, who was unable to be there on account of illness, Rev. Charles F. Dickine, of Boston, presided over the principal meeting at Saengerfest Hall. After vocal exercises by 1,500 trained voices and short addresses by prominent members and leaders of the society, Secretary Baer read his annual report. The report showed the society to be in a very flourishing condition and with an ever increasing membership almost phenomenal in proportions. "The commanding officer," the Secretary said, "finds that this host is not a mere wave of foamy, youthful enthusiasm, a part of it cast upon the shores of Lake Erie. On the contrary, it is an army 'as strong as steel and as flexible as ribbon.' It is a God-given, God-protected, God-advanced army."

The growth of the society during the last twelve months has been the largest since it was organized, thirteen years ago. During that period 7,395 companies have been added to the ranks, against 5,276 companies added to the rolls during the previous year. England has now 1,453 regularly enrolled companies, including 58 in Scotland and 38 in Ireland, or a total of 75,000 individual members. The gains have been very heavy in India, Japan, Turkey, China, France, Spain, Mexico, and other foreign countries. The total individual membership of the society in Canada at the present time is 134,580. In all there are 28,696 companies enrolled in the United States, and the total individual membership throughout the world is over 2,000,000. Thirty evangelical denominations are represented in the society, the Presbyterians still leading, with 6,652 companies. The Congregationalists, the Baptists, Disciples, Methodists, and Lutherans follow in the order named.

A MYSTERIOUS FACE.

Picture of a Suspected Murder Comes Out on a Grave Stone.

The inhabitants of the prairie town of Washta, Iowa, are excited to a fever pitch, says a Chicago paper, over a wonderful occurrence which is said to be now taking place there. Near the town some time ago lived an old German couple called Schultz. One day the old man drew all his money from the bank through fear of a panic and brought it home. The next morning the old couple were found dead, their skulls having been split open with an ax, and their money all gone.

Suspicion at once pointed to the Schultz' hired man, W. S. Florence. He was brought before the grand jury, but as there was no sort of evidence against him he was let go and at once disappeared from the town and has not been heard of since.

The people were disappointed at this, for many believed that Florence was guilty, and a good deal was said about the matter first and last. In the meantime Mr. and Mrs. Schultz had been buried and a marble grave stone raised over them.

Now comes the creepy part of the tale. An old woman a short time after that said that she had noiced a likeness of Florence coming out in black on the Schultz tombstone as a photographer's plate is developed under the action of chemicals. Other people were easily led to see Florence's likeness and all by some strange mental process became more than ever firmly convinced that Florence was the murderer and that the face on the monument is a direct proof of his guilt. As the face continues to get plainer and plainer, it is said, feeling gets stronger there, and if Florence should turn up there is no telling what terrible fate he might meet with.

BABIES YELL AT THEM

SOME RIDICULOUS INVENTIONS FOR THEIR COMFORT.

Combined Cradle and Walker That Worked with a Spring—A Gaudy Jumper Designed to Imitate Trotting on Mother's Knees—Whirligig Creeper.

Many Have Been Patented.

From the baby's point of view the inventor is a mighty mean man and anything but a benefactor to the human race. The numerous double, back-action, spring-lock contrivances piled up in the dingy corners of the Patent Office, every one of which it was intended should be palmed off upon the infant as a substitute for a mother's arms, has prejudiced him against the man with an idea to exchange for an annuity, and he wants none of him or his. A baby wants no patent nurse, even if it may have soft pillows, flimsy canopy and music-box attachment. For him the good, old-fashioned way is best, and when one of the crazy combinations is tried on him it is no wonder he kicks the air with a pair of chubby little feet and yells the roof off the house. Jumpers, walkers, tenders, creepers, cradles, and several too complicated to belong to any special class are just a few of those things which have combined to make the baby's life a sore trial.

WINDS UP LIKE A CLOCK.

The first American production, really the genesis of the cradle, was never patented, though it was used extensively in some portions of the country. This was the sugar trough, made and used at a time when the sturdy father was literally hewing a home out of the forest. A length of the maple tree, split in the center, stripped of its bark and hollowed out—that was all there was to it, but, crude as it was, it served the purpose and allowed the mother to attend to other duties in this busy time of home-making. In spare moments, the father constructed a more elaborate affair, box-shaped and fitted with roughly fashioned rockers, and then the trough was relegated to its former service of holding the sweet sap from the sugar tree. At this stage the inventor got a firm hold on the idea, and it was no time at all until there were enough articles in this line to make two generations of babies miserable.

J. H. Brown, of New York, got an early start with his combined cradle and walker. He abandoned the old-fashioned rocker and made his little machine work with a spring so it would go up and down with the motion, and noise too, perhaps, of a dump cart. It was only necessary to furnish it with wheels to make a walker out of it, not as good a one or nearly so handy as the ordinary chair, but it gave the inventor the chance to claim a dual virtue for his patent, something essential in addition to an early start. Mr. Brown never tried it again, and if he ever had any more ideas along this same line he trained them into another channel before they reached the patent stage.

J. H. Caldwell, of somewhere in Massachusetts, came off second best with his jumper. He had an idea that the happiness of the average young American would be complete and the invention a decided success, if he could mechanically produce the motion of a mother's knee when she is "trotting" her offspring. But it wasn't. Although fitted out like a modern hobby and painted in gorgeous colors it couldn't sing a lullaby or recite Mother Goose, and where is the pleasure of being bounced up and down if these are to be left out? Baby just looked at it and then cried, and this was the commencement of a boycott which made Caldwell's venture unprofitable.

P. H. Hurd, out of the two or three hundred who were at that time regularly producing something that was of no account, got clear off the track when he patented his whirligig, which was supposed to teach the baby to creep, and later to walk. There was never any litigation in regard to infringement of this patent; its life was as short as that of a sand-fly, and it didn't take the inventor much longer than that to find out that the million dollars or so which loomed up on the horizon the day he made application had taken wings.

J. S. Brown, of Michigan, who, by the way, is no relative of the Brown of walker and cradle fame, had a similar experience with his baby tender. It was a thrashing-machine looking affair that worked with a treadle and might have been constructed from the remains of a dilapidated feed-cutter, for all the beauty and symmetry it combined, but he got a patent on it. Any self-respecting infant would raise the whole neighborhood if such a thing were wheeled into his presence, says the Chicago Tribune, and the irate father would probably hunt for the inventor with a large double-barreled gun, so it is just as well, or better, for Brown No. 2 that the demand for his tender was exceedingly limited.

Along about this time the paragon of the whole lot was born, but like its predecessors it vanished before any great number of people had an opportunity to test it and say swear words at the originator. It was all thought out in the Maine woods. In that country babies and dairies are unmistakable signs of thrift and E. Whitman couldn't understand why the cradle and churn should not be more closely affiliated, so he combined the two. It might have worked all right and the hand that rocked the cradle in addition to ruling the world could, at the same time, have carried on the more vulgar occupation of making nice prints of yellow butter for the huckster, only the cream was never ready to churn when the baby cried, and when the dasher was fitted in and everything ready in the manufacturing department the baby was invariably asleep or on its good behavior. This is the little point that E. Whitman failed to consider, so he buried his regrets and went back to the plow, leaving a clear field.

As a usual thing when inventors find a clear field they tax their twenty-candle power ideas to covering the entire ground, so as to leave nothing for the man in their wake but lawsuits. J. Erickson was one of these. He invented a baby-walker with a barrel-stave crib combination warranted to take all care and worry from a mother's mind—that is, providing the little monarch of the household would put up with it. But, like E. Whitman, he overlooked one important feature. The walker should have been adjustable for the use of the father until the baby was large enough to push it around and break all the bric-a-brac in the house.

Rabbits in Australia.

Mr. Walter Dalrymple Severn recently delivered an illustrated lecture to a large audience at the Imperial Institute, London, on "The Rabbit Plague in Australia." The lecturer said it was at the period of the highest prosperity of Australia and New South Wales that a patriotic gentleman thought it would be a good thing to import a few rabbits into the colony, as they would serve for food and for sport.

He accordingly imported three pairs of rabbits, and they were turned loose. It was not long before it was found that the district in question had been transformed into a gigantic rabbit warren. Indeed, it was discovered that a single pair of rabbits, under favorable circumstances, would in three years have a progeny numbering 13,718,000. Sir Saul Samuel, in moving a vote of thanks to the lecturer, said the government of New South Wales had 1,800 schemes sent in when the £25,000 reward was offered, but none of them were really of a practical nature, and the reward was withdrawn.

Match Making.

A single match requires from 1-200 to 1-100 of a grain of phosphorus for its production, yet the consumption of matches is so large that it is estimated that the total of 1,200 tons is less than the amount consumed in Europe in their manufacture.

Rubber Tires.

In the use of rubber tires for bicycles it must be borne in mind that no oil, varnish or grease should be allowed to touch them. Oil is an enemy to rubber. Care in this respect should be had in applying the oil to bearings.

Vast Interests.

Commissioner of Labor Wright reports that there are 5,833 building and loan associations in the United States, with total net assets of $540,667,594.

Which Was Which?

"Do you know, my friend," said the profound-looking man to the dumb-looking fellow, "do you know that there are tendencies at work in this country which, vampire-like, are sucking the life-blood of our institutions?

"No," said the dumb-looking fellow.

"Do you know that the artistic and æsthetic sense of our population is being strangled by a sordid and crass materialism?"

"No," said the dumb-looking fellow.

"Do you mean to say," asked the profound-looking stranger, "that you are not aware of the baleful influences which are at work, the occult, but no less deadly, agencies which antagonize our integral perpetuity?"

"No," said the dumb-looking fellow.

"Are you not alarmed, then, my friend, lest these agencies undermine and overthrow this glorious national edifice which our fathers have builded, and for which statesmen have wrought, and yeomen have toiled, and patriots have died?"

"No," said the dumb-looking fellow.

Just then a man came from the rear platform, held out his hand to the dumb-looking fellow, and said:

"Hullo, Jim! How's your dog?"

"Gosh, Bill, you oughter see that dorg," said the man who looked dumb no longer. "You ought to see him. There never wuz a dorg like that dorg sence the fust dorg was built. He's got more sense than you an' I an' this 'ere dood together." And he pointed his thumb over his shoulder toward the profound-looking stranger. "More sense than all on us. Set him on track of a rabbit, nose to the groun', tail up, eyes squirtin' lightnin', howlin' like a good un, he's a sight wuth travelin' roun' the world to see. Best dorg you ever see. Got a brain on him like Disraeli, but he's got fleas. Say, mister," and he addressed the profound-looking man, "do you know what will cure a dog of fleas?"

"No, sir," said the profound-looking stranger.

"Don't know any kind of 'intment nor nothin' that'll kill 'em off?"

"No, sir."

"No dorg-wash nor anythin' er that sor?"

"No, sir."

"No kind er pizen nor nothin'?"

"No, sir."

"Take no interest in dogs?"

"Not the slightest."

The train stopped here, and the profound-looking stranger got out.

"Stupid clown!" said he to the brakeman as he glanced at the man of dogs.

The man of dogs turned to his friend and said:

"Duffer, ain't he?"

Exquisite Witticisms.

Of Douglas Jerrold, the late Edmund Yates graphically related that, as he was escorting the wit one night to the Bedford Hotel, "up New street we met two or three drunken roisterers, one of whom, after tumbling up against me, apologized and asked the way to the 'Judge and Jury,' a popular entertainment of the day. Instantly Jerrold bent forward and addressed him: 'Straight on young man; continue in the path you are now pursuing and you can't fail to come to them!' It was to Peter Cunningham, mentioning his fondness for calves' feet, that Jerrold said 'Extremes meet!' To Mrs. Alfred Wigan, expressing her fear that her hair had been turned gray by the application of some strong stimulant, he said: 'I know, essence of thyme.'" One evening Yates and Jerrold were at a ball, when Yates inquired: "Who is that man there, dancing with Mrs. Jerrold?" "God knows, my dear boy," Jerrold replied, looking around for an instant; "some member of the Humane Society, I suppose." A week before Jerrold died, Yates met him at dinner, where also was Albert Smith, whose engagement to the lady he afterward married was then rumored. The host having asked Smith to ring the bell for dinner, Jerrold said: "Yes, Albert, why don't you ring that belle?" Of his godfather, Edmund Byng, Yates told this anecdote: Byng once asked a guest at his own table: "How did you like that dish?" "It was very good." "'Good,' sir? Of course it was good! Everything is good that comes to this table. I didn't ask you if it was good; I asked you if you liked it."

It Was Mathematical.

Said a well-known recounter of snake stories the other day, by way of a wind-up to several:

"I can't call any more to mind just at present. My wife knows a lot of snake stories, but I've forgoten 'em. By the way, though, I've got a regular living curiosity down at my place. One day my eldest boy was sitting on a stool in the back yard, doing his sums, and he couldn't get 'em right. He felt something against his face, and there was a little snake curled up on his shoulder and looking at the slate. In four minutes he had done all the sums. We've tamed him, so he keeps all our accounts, and he is the quickest head at figures you ever saw. He'll run up a column eight feet long in three seconds. I wouldn't take a prize cow for him."

"What kind of a snake is he?" inquired the listener curiously.

"The neighbors call him an adder."

"Oh, yes," said the other, a little disconcerted. "I've heard of the species."—Chicago Times.

Counselor "Therefore."

Sergeant Kelly, a celebrity of the Irish bar, had a remarkable habit of drawing conclusions directly at variance with his premises, and was consequently nicknamed "Counselor Therefore." In court, on one occasion, he thus addressed the jury: "The case is so clear, gentlemen, that you can not possibly misunderstand it, and I should pay your understandings a very poor compliment if I dwelt upon it for another minute; therefore, I shall at once proceed to explain it to you as minutely as possible."

SPEND YOUR OUTING ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Visit picturesque Mackinac Island. It will only cost you about $12.50 from Detroit; $15 from Toledo; $18 from Cleveland, for the round trip, including meals and berths. Avoid the heat and dust by traveling on the D. & C. floating palaces. The attractions of a trip to the Mackinac region are unsurpassed. The island itself is a grand romantic spot, its climate most invigorating. Two new steel passenger steamers have just been built for the upper lake route, costing $300,000 each. They are equipped with every modern convenience, annunciators, bathrooms, etc., illuminated throughout by electricity, and are guaranteed to be the grandest, largest and safest steamers on fresh water. These steamers favorably compare with the great ocean liners in construction and speed. Four trips per week between Toledo, Detroit, Alpena, Mackinac, St. Ignace, Petoskey, Chicago, "Soo," Marquette and Duluth. Daily between Cleveland and Detroit. Daily between Cleveland and Put-in-Bay. The cabins, parlors and staterooms of these steamers are designed for the complete entertainment of humanity under home conditions; the palatial equipment, the luxury of the appointments, makes traveling on these steamers thoroughly enjoyable. Send for illustrated descriptive pamphlet. Address A. A. SCHANTZ, G. P. & T. A., D. & C. Detroit, Mich.

A Curiosity of the Law.

Additions to rented premises, when made by the tenant, should never be fastened with nails, but with screws, says a St. Louis lawyer. The reason for this lies in the fact that should he wish to move away and take with him the boards and other lumber composing the improvements he has made, he can simply draw out the screws and take the planks. If he fastens them with nails, however, he can remove nothing, and the improvements become the landlord's property. The fact results from a legal quibble, insisting that articles fastened with screws are for temporary use, and if put in place by the tenant are his own property.

Following a Prophet.

A false prophet has arisen on the island of Jamaica. He teaches that God has given him the power to make a new Bethesda of a small river on the island. Every Wednesday he stands on a rock in the stream and blesses the waters, which are then supposed to have the power of healing any disease. The natives are crazy in the fanatic belief in the new prophet, and twenty thousand pilgrims a day bathe in the waters.

LONG STEP AHEAD.

FEATURES OF THE NEW TARIFF SCHEDULE.

With Ad Valorem Duties, Free Wool, Free Lumber, Lower Rates, and the Income Tax, There Is Light Ahead for Agriculturist and Merchant.

Tariff Reform Gains.

While it is too soon to estimate all of the prospective gains of tariff reform, it is not too soon to declare that the gains will be greater, rather than less, than in the Senate bill which is now in conference. What, then, are some of the distinct gains certain to follow the passage of the Wilson bill?

1. One of the greatest gains comes from the greater use of ad valorem instead of specific duties. It is not easy for those who have not given special attention to the subject to realize the great difference between these two methods of collecting taxes. Specific duties collect as much taxes from the cheap goods of the poor as from the costly goods of the rich. A tax of $1 a yard may double the cost of an inferior suit of clothing, while it adds but one-tenth to the cost of a first-class suit. If the first-class suit wears three times as long as an inferior suit, the poor man who wears the inferior suit will pay three times as much taxes as the rich man who wears the first-class suit. The injustice of specific duties is so great that it would make them intolerable if they were applied to direct taxes, where their effects would be seen by all. Thus, a tax of $50 a piece on dwelling houses, which would bear lightly upon the palaces of our millionaires, would make rebels and anarchists out of our millions of day laborers who live in houses that cost from $50 to $500 each.

It is not, however, because specific duties discriminate in favor of the rich that they are the rule in the McKinley bill. It is because they afford more certain and increasingly greater protection. Specific duties take no account of the natural decline in prices of goods. As prices fall the rate of protection increases. A duty of $50 per ton when steel rails are selling for $100, gives only 50 per cent. protection. The same duty gives a protection of 200 per cent. when the price has declined to $25. The tendency of these duties to give increasing protection is demonstrated by the McKinley bill. In 1891 the average rate on dutiable imports was 46.28. In 1892 it had increased to 48.71, and in 1893, to 49.58. The tariff of 1883 behaved in the same way, though it contained fewer specific duties. With ad valorem duties the rate of protection is practically stationary. Under the ad valorem Walker bill the rate varied only about 1 per cent. during the seven years from 1848 to 1854.

2. Free wool and greatly reduced duties on woolens will be a boon to the 99 out of every 100 persons who have to consider prices when making purchases. Nor is it at all probable that free wool will injure the wool grower or the woolen manufacturer. It is quite certain to benefit the textile workers of this country by giving them steadier employment. Free wool will give new life to the woolen industry, just as free hides, in 1873, gave new life to the leather dressing and leather consuming industries. Under protection the price of wool has declined until under the McKinley bill we have reached a free trade basis and are selling our wools in Europe. The farmer, therefore, even if he be a wool grower, has nothing to fear from free wool. If he is not a wool grower he most certainly will lose nothing and will save perhaps 25 per cent. in what he pays for woolen goods. Our exports of woolen goods, which have already begun under taxed raw materials, may be expected to increase manifold with free materials. The Wool and Cotton Reporter of July 5 tells us that during the first week in June and the last week in May we exported to Great Britain carpets valued at £2,610 ($13,000). This is at the rate of over $300,000 a year. It says that our export trade in carpets has become firmly established and that one firm "of late has alone shipped more carpets to Great Britain than the English and Scotch manufacturers combined have sent to the United States." With free wool the demand for carpet weavers will surely increase.

3. Free lumber will protect the home industry of building homes. While the benefits will be but slight in many parts of the United States, in some parts they will be considerable. All kinds of sawed, planed or grooved boards, as well as shingles, laths, pickets, shooks, staves, etc., have been made free. The value of the dutiable imports of the wood schedule was over $13,000,000 in 1893. Under the proposed bill it will be less than $2,500,000. The saving of duties will benefit all, except the holders of timber lands, who are usually rich speculators often with dishonestly acquired titles. If free lumber causes their land to decrease slightly in value it will still be worth, in many instances, several times what they paid for it.

4. Reduced duties on all manufactures and raw materials except sugar, will lower prices and stimulate industry. While these duties have not been reduced as much as was expected they will still be light as compared with the heavy McKinley duties.

5. The adoption of a tax on incomes will do much to equalize the burdens of taxation. This tax will never rest upon the poor, who pay 75 per cent. of our tariff and internal revenue tax. It has come to stay until supplanted by some better direct tax.—Byron W. Holt.

Democratic Fortifications.

The great battle of 1896 will, unless the Democrats are inconceivably stupid, be fought with the advantage strongly on their side. The passage of a tariff bill even far below the hopes and expectations of thorough-going reformers will be accepted by the people as a settlement of the question for the present. It will at least put the Republicans in the attitude of agitators and disturbers of business should they assail it. A campaign for the increase of taxes and the unsettlement of industrial conditions, so soon after a long period of uncertainty and depression, cannot be a popular one. The people will be tired of the question. Capital and labor will unite in demanding a period of repose and of activity.

In the nature of things the stagnation of business cannot continue much longer. Already there are signs that the passage of the tariff bill and the confirming of the fact that our currency is to suffer no serious disturbance will mark the beginning of a sure if slow revival of industry and trade. The party in power in 1896 will gain as much from the prosperity of the country as it is now losing from its adversity.—New York World.

Three Unprotected Industries.

The only three articles largely produced in this country, and also largely imported into this country, upon which protective duties are not levied, are gold, silver and human beings. A proposition to put a duty on silver has more than once been made in an informal way, and the Senate has voted down propositions to levy an import duty of $50 and of $25 on immigrants. But we have already excluded the Chinese, and immigrants of all sorts who come under contract, and Senator Chandler says that legislation still further restricting immigration is to be looked for before the end of this Congress.—Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin.

John Sherman on Monopolies.

The Republican Senator for Ohio, John Sherman, knows a monopoly when he sees it—sometimes. Sometimes he does not. That depends on the political situation as John Sherman views it.

Last Thursday he introduced a resolution directing the Committee on Interstate Commerce to inquire into the advisability of regulating by law the use of sleeping and parlor cars. In an interview which was printed in the Herald he explains that he is after the Pullman monopoly with both eyes, and this little resolution as a spiked club in his red right hand. Among other things he says: "I regard the Pullman Company and sugar trust as the most outrageous monopolies of the day. They make enormous profits and give their patrons little or nothing in return in proportion."

When the Ohio Senator couples the Pullman Company with the sugar trust and proclaims them to be the two "most outrageous monopolies of the day" he invites particular attention to the sometimes peculiarity of his eyesight when monopolies are within the range of vision.

Four years ago and a little more he introduced and pushed to its passage an anti-trust bill. With this club he was going to pound the life out of a great number of monopoly combinations, among which he named, and with characteristic vehemence denounced, the sugar trust. A few months later, as a member of the conference committee on the McKinley bill, he insisted on giving that same outrageous monopoly 60 cents per 100 pounds on refined sugar instead of the 40 cents voted by the McKinley House. He finally yielded so far as to make it 50 cents, with an additional 10 cents on sugar from bounty paying countries, meaning German sugar, which was practically the only kind competing with the trust product.

What was an outrageous monopoly in June ceased to be an outrageous monopoly in the October following, in the view of John Sherman. In September he secured for the trust a duty which, according to President Havemeyer, gave it an enormous profit of between $30,000,000 and $35,000,000 in three years. John Sherman saw no outrageous monopoly and no enormous profits in this in September, 1890, although he had denounced the trust as an outrageous monopoly four months before.

Why? Well, John Sherman is a thrifty man, politically and otherwise. He can see a monopoly when he thinks it expedient to look that way; he can see none when he thinks it expedient to look in some other direction.

Just now he sees an outrageous monopoly in the Pullman Company. He thinks it expedient to look that way. Why? Because some thousands of workmen are waging war on that company. An election is approaching and these men have votes. If he makes ligislative war on the Pullman Company and gets the credit of it, so much the better for John Sherman, and incidentally for his party.

That is the Sherman style of statesmanship. When he thinks it will pay to see a monopoly Sherman sees it with both eyes; when he thinks it will not pay Sherman does not see it with either eye. He thinks he knows when to face monopoly, and when to turn his back with his hands behind.—Chicago Herald.

Their Only Hope.

The people are clear-sighted and intelligent. They understand that Democracy cannot properly be held accountable for the imperfections or even the treachery of some of its trusted agents. They know that for present hard times the blame properly rests upon the unwise and unpatriotic Republican legislation which brought about this condition of things. They know that all that has been done or attempted for the relief of the country is the work of Democracy. If they think the results too small, they see clearly that they have been made so only by betrayal of the Democratic purpose in the upper house of Congress, where the majority is so narrow that the surrender of even a few men to the trusts renders it impossible to enact such reforms as the Democratic party in the popular house seeks, or such as must surely come as a result of prolonged Democratic ascendency.

The Democratic party is the party of the people. However imperfect an instrument it may now and then be, it is absolutely the only instrument of reform there is. In its triumph, in its lasting control of affairs alone is there hope of the accomplishment of that release of the people from injustice and oppression for which so overwhelming a majority voted in 1892. The vitality of Democracy lies not in leadership, and not in organization, but in its steadfast adherence to the cause of the people in opposition to the schemes of conspirators against the popular welfare.—New York World.

The Rich Man's Tax.

Under the methods pursued by the protectionists in the levying of customs duties the burden of the poor man has been greater than that of the well-to-do, because the heaviest duties have been laid on the article of more common and universal consumption. An income tax brings the rich man in and compels him to pay his share or something near it. Is there any injustice in that? Or is it any answer to the demand that he shall be required to pay his share that he will probably evade as much of it as he can? If that were an answer there would be the same argument against the imposition of any tax whatever, for it is notorious that under the best system which the wisdom of man has yet been able to devise there is a vast deal of evasion.—Detroit Free Press.

Still Kicking Themselves.

Concerning the future of the Republican party the Cincinnati Tribune (Rep.) says: "Is not the sentiment of the people of the United States growing more and more favorable to lower duties? We think it is, and we know that opinion is held by many Republicans of national reputation. The people of this country expect the Republican party to reform the tariff and to make the duties as low as possible. Had the party done this after the election of 1888 the ground would have been cut from beneath the feet of the Democrats and they would have had no campaign ammunition for the election of 1892."

Will Line Up in 1896.

Despondent Democrats should bear in mind that the party is simply revolting against the men who are betraying it. Democrats are neither going to jump from the Gorman frying pan to the McKinley fire, nor are they going over into the Republican party. The Democracy in 1896 will line up in solid phalanx with grim determination to crush out the traitors within its own ranks.—Oakland County Post.

DEBS UNDER ARREST.

LEADERS OF THE STRIKE ARE INDICTED.

Charged with Conspiracy Against the United States—Released in $10,000 Bail—Letters and Papers Are Seized at the Union's Headquarters.

Work of the Federal Grand Jury.

Four of the general officers of the American Railway Union were arrested in Chicago Tuesday afternoon on the charge of conspiracy against the United States of America in interfering with interstate commerce, with the passage of the mails and with governmental officials. They are:

EUGENE V. DEBS, president.
GEORGE W. HOWARD, vice president.
SYLVESTER KELIHER, secretary.
L. W. ROGERS, a director and editor of the order's official organ, the Railway Times.

They were indicted by the Federal grand jury, were taken into custody and afterward released on bail furnished by William Skakel and William Fitzgerald, and will some time next fall be placed on trial. It is understood that the government will press the charge of high treason against the leaders of the union that is attempting to enforce the boycott against the cars of the Pullman Palace Car Company. The general offices of the organization were stripped of their contents which are to be used in evidence against the prisoners.

PRESIDENT DEBS.

Mr. Debs was seen during his temporary detention and, after expressing much indignation at the seizure of his private letters and papers, said for himself and his fellows: "If we have broken any law of the United States we will take our punishment like men. But this action is without parallel in any strike ever known in the history of the American people, whether on railways or not. We shall make no change in our methods, being convinced that they are perfectly legal, and the work will go on exactly as it was begun without reference to these unprecedented arrests."

Washington dispatches say the news of the indictment of Debs and his associates was received with undisguised satisfaction by the President and members of his Cabinet.

The position of the government is that officers of the body which ordered the boycott, Debs and others can be held responsible for whatever has or may grow out of it, whether any member of the American Railway Union is directly involved in acts of violence or not. This much was clearly made known by the language of Judge Grosscup's charge, which, though setting forth in unmistakable terms the position of the Government, recognized the rights of the workingmen to organize for their better advancement. He defined insurrection against government and plainly stated the limit to which labor leaders should go. It is understood that Attorney General Olney himself outlined the plan of procedure. President Debs was not at all afraid of the threatened indictment.

DRINK LEMONADE.

Dignified Senators Get Away with Twenty-five Gallons Daily.

Five or six dozen quarts of apollinaris water and about a box of lemons are consumed every day in making lemonade for the use of the Senate in hot weather.

The cooling drink is made in the basement and brought into the cloakroom by the bucketful, and served in earthenware coolers, holding about three gallons each. Two men are kept busy squeezing lemons and mixing the juice with the sugar and of apollinaris. This is Uncle Sam's treat out of the contingent fund. There is no alcoholic liquor in this preparation. Every care that a thoughtful country can devise is taken to relieve them of the necessity of taking off their clothes in the Senate chamber. The bath rooms in the basement are provided with every comfort from ice water to Turko-Russian steam, and from violet water to bay rum for an after sousing, and in the sergeant-at-arms' office are quinine pills for malaria and Jamaica ginger for cramps, and several preparations suitable to relieve a disordered stomach or an aching head. For any bruises that may be inflicted during the session, gallons of witch-hazel are kept in the store room.

Rockefeller's Money Must Be Paid.

John D. Rockefeller, the Standard Oil millionaire, will have to give his $950,000 to Chicago University. When he made the donation it was on condition that the University trustees raise $350,000 to make the sum an even million. This has been done, the last subscription needed, $15,000, having been paid.

Brieflets.

TWO LARGE dynamite bombs have been found in New York City.

LORD AND LADY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL have arrived in New York.

JOHN MCHUGH, of Cresco, Iowa, has resigned as national bank examiner.

CADET W. S. VALENTINE has been ordered courtmartialed at West Point for hazing.

MINERS at Spring Valley, Ill., voted to reject the Columbus scale, but at Streator it was accepted by a majority of 175.

BY a French decision it is declared that Mrs. Parnell and Timothy Harrington have no power over the "Paris fund."

LAWYER M. J. STEIN, a New York politician, has been arrested for swearing falsely at the trial of Michael Donnelly.

IN preparation for war with Japan, it is said the registration of Chinese merchant vessels has been transferred to Germany.

AN unfinished pavilion in the exhibition grounds in Bucharest, Roumania, collapsed, burying twenty-eight workmen. Four of them were fatally injured.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

In the Senate Monday Mr. Peffer offered a resolution providing: 1. That all public functions ought to be exercised through public agents. 2. That all interstate railroads ought to be brought under one control. 3. That all coal beds ought to be owned and worked by the Government. 4. That all money used by the people ought to be supplied only by the Government of the United States, and that the rate of interest ought to be uniform in all States. 5. That all revenues of the Government ought to be raised by taxes on real estate. The resolution went over without action or comment. The navy appropriation bill was passed, as was also a House bill to amend the law relative to mining claims. Mr. Blackburn announced the death of Representative Marcus C. Lisle, of Kentucky, and after the adoption of the customary resolutions the Senate adjourned. Monday was District of Columbia day in the House, and a bill to provide for an immediate revision and equalization of real estate values in the District was taken up for consideration. Most of the afternoon was spent on this bill, which was finally passed.

In the Senate the railroad strike was discussed and the postoffice appropriation bill was passed. The House passed a bill opening the Uncompahgre and Uintah Indian reservations in Utah, allotting lands in severalty to the Indians and restoring about 3,000,000 acres to the public domain. Most of the day was devoted to debate on a bill extending the act of 1890, declaring lands granted to railroads not then constructed forfeited to the government, so as to forfeit the lands of railways whose roads were not completed within the time specified in the land grants. It excluded from the operation of the act, however, lands acquired in good faith by purchase from railways, confirming such titles. The bill involves about 54,000,000 acres. It was not disposed of. The title of Mr. Enloe to his seat as representative from the Eighth Tennessee, which was contested by R. E. Thrasher, was confirmed without opposition, the Committee on Elections being unanimous in the opinion that Mr. Thrasher had no ground for contest.

The Senate is making up for lost time, and is now disposing of the appropriation bills at a rapid rate. The record for Wednesday is three—the diplomatic and consular, the invalid pension and the military academy appropriation bills. In the House the McRae land grant forfeiture bill was passed. The bill amends the act of September 29, 1890, which in substance declared the forfeiture to the United States of lands theretofore granted to States and corporations to aid in the construction of railways to the extent only of lands opposite to and coterminous with the portions of such railways as were not completed and operated at that time. The bill passed Wednesday extends the forfeiture to the portions of the several railways to aid in the construction of which the grants were made which were uncompleted when the time expired within which the roads were respectively required to be completed by the several laws making the grants. The Senate bill granting a right of way through the White Earth and Fond du Lac Indian reservation to the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway was passed; also a bill to authorize the Biloxi and Backbay Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Bay of Biloxi in Mississippi.

Thursday two more important appropriation bills were passed by the Senate, the army and the fortifications appropriation bills, while some progress was made on the river and harbor bill. The only interesting discussions of the day occurred during the consideration of the army bill. Several bills of minor importance were passed, and conferrees were appointed on the military academy and diplomatic and consular appropriation bills. The House agreed to the Senate amendments to the bill for the admission of Utah as a State, and, after discussing a bill for retiring officers of the revenue cutter service, under the special order adopted Wednesday, it proceeded with the consideration of bills reported from the Foreign Affairs Committee. Eleven bills were passed, none of national importance.

In the Senate the river and harbor bill was passed Friday without debate and other important bills taken up. The House agreed to the report of the conferrees on the pension appropriation bill. It makes but slow progress with the tariff. The remainder of the day was devoted to the consideration of private bills. Although several were debated none were passed. At 5 o'clock the House took a recess until 8. The evening session was devoted to the consideration of private pension bills.

An African Pest.

With regard to the utility of the crocodile there are diverse opinions. It is certainly a scavenger, though when the rapid currents of most rivers are taken into consideration the importance of his mission dwindles. The author of "In the Morambala Marsh" says that along the banks of African streams it is dangerous to approach the river edge. Water for domestic purposes is obtained from the top of the banks by means of a cup attached to a bamboo pole twenty or thirty feet in length and in spite of all these precautions the death roll is a most ghastly one. The primitive dugouts used by the natives for traveling on the rivers are in many cases merely death-traps. While the man is paddling along, barely two inches above the surface of the river, the crocodile seizes his hand and drags him to the bottom.

On one occasion I sent down some letters by a Hindoo merchant and a few weeks later heard that both letters and postman had been devoured by crocodiles. At another time I was strolling along the bank, and hearing cries, arrived at the water's edge in time to seize a boy whose leg had been caught by one of these brutes and torn from him. He escaped with his life, thanks to my timely arrival.

In some places one sees thousands of crocodiles on a mud bank, most of them scarcely two inches in length, evidently just hatched. A week does not pass but in some river village wails and lamentations are heard for a fresh victim to the crocodile's insatiable appetite.

HISTORICAL.

AMBITION is the mind's immodesty.

LAY figures for fitting on ladies' dresses were invented in France about 1390.

GREEK ladies had steel and brass mirrors, parasols, fans and smelling bottles.

CORSETS have been found on the mummies of Egyptian princesses of the royal family.

IN 1516 Francis I. gave to his queen the equivalent of $16,000 in our money to buy a hat.

WIRE hairpins were invented in England in 1545. Before that time the female coiffures were held in place by fine wooden skewers.

THE postage stamp is not much more than a half a century old. On the 6th of May, 1894, it celebrated its fifty-fourth anniversary.

THE longest train on record was that of Catherine de Medici on the occasion of her marriage. It was forty-eight yards and borne by ten pairs of pages.

IT is now well known that flounders and other flat fishes, whose eyes are on the left side of the head, and which swim on one side, are, when young, perfectly symmetrical, like other fishes.

Wizards of High Degree.

Russian Fins—or "Roosian" Fins, as Jacky has it—were, and are yet, wizards of high degree, says Lieutenant J. D. Jerrold Kelly in an article on "Superstitions of the Sea," in the Century. Hurricanes blew, calms beset, gales roared, as they willed, and their incantations began to operate by the simple sticking of a knife in the mast. If they wished to drive the rats out of a vessel, they shoved the point of a snicker-snee into the deck, and every rat ran for the sharp blade, and willy-nilly performed hara-kiri. No one ever saw, in sailor lore, a penniless Russian Fin, for by slipping his hand into his pocket he can always produce a gold doubloon—why a gold doubloon, no one seems to know, but it is always that coin; his rum bottle, often consulted silently and alone, is never full nor empty—a gentle plashing of tide—half-tide bringing fat content, and woe be to the incautious mariner who bites the weather-side of his thumb at him, for harm will surely follow.

An Expensive Trifle.

A lady was very solicitous about her health. Every trifle made her uneasy, and the doctor was called immediately. The doctor was a skillful man, and consequently had a large practice. It was very disagreeable to him to be so often called away from his other cases for nothing, and he resolved to take an opportunity of letting the lady see this.

One day the lady observed a red spot on her hand, and at once sent for the doctor. He came, looked at her hand and said,—

"You did well to send for me early."

The lady looked alarmed, and asked,—

"Is it dangerous, then?"

"Certainly not," replied the doctor. "To-morrow the spot would have disappeared, and I should have lost my fee for this visit."

Youth and Old Age.

A young green leaf clings to the stem, but a brown and sere leaf easily drops away. In the morning of life we dread to die, but as age creeps on and nature's forces become spent we care less about the inevitable end. Bishop Horn used this figure: "When we rise fresh and vigorous in the morning, the world seems fresh, too, and we think we shall never be tired of business or pleasure; but by the time the evening is come, we find ourselves heartily so; we quit all our enjoyments readily and gladly; we retire willing into a little cell; we lie down in darkness and resign ourselves to the arms of sleep, with perfect satisfaction and complacency. Apply this to youth and old age—life and death."

A Word of Advice.

We say to the young, do not touch strong drink: it is poison to the body and the soul. The danger of the drink habit is far greater than you can know. You may see no danger in the drink habit. We do, and earnestly warn you of it. The path you propose to travel seems smooth and fair to you, but you may find it, as millions of men and women have, treacherous as the quicksands upon the seashore, which swallow up all who tread upon them, leaving no trace behind.

Far from the Madding Crowd.

This is what many a nervous sufferer wishes himself every day. But there will soon be no necessity to forsake the busy—albeit somewhat noisy—scenes of metropolitan life, if the nervous invalid will begin, and persist in the use of, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which will speedily bring relief to a weak and overstrung nervous system. Day by day the body acquires vigor through the influence of this reliable tonic, and in the vitality which it diffuses through the system the nerves conspicuously share. Sleep, appetite, digestion—all these are promoted by this popular invigorant, and if they are, who can doubt that the acquisition of health and nerve quietude will be speedy and complete? Constipation, biliousness, malaria, nausea, sea sickness, and cramps in the stomach yield to this remedy.

For War Purposes.

A device for stopping up shot holes in war vessels, invented by a marine engineer and accepted by the British Government, has been tested by the United States cruiser Chicago. It resembles a parachute with a rubber cover supported by steel ribs. It is pushed through the hole made by the shot, when it expands and clings close to the outside of the vessel, preventing an inrush of water.

A Happy Country.

Serious crime is almost unknown in Norway. The punishment for murder is decapitation at the block by the public executioner; but during the five years I lived there (says a traveler) there was but one murder and no execution, for the simple reason that the murderer was never identified.

TIME flies after you are 40, and Christmas come round before you have your presents ready, but all the machinery gets another good greasing after you are 50.

THERE are lots of people who talk too much, but remain in blissful ignorance of the fact until they get married, and their husbands or wives tell them so.

AMONG THE FLOCKS of people who visit the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., are many who are sent there, by those who have already, from personal experience, learned of the great Triumph in Conservative Surgery achieved by the Surgeons of that famed institution. Little heroic, or cutting surgery is found necessary. For instance, TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are removed by Electrolysis and other conservative means and thereby the perils of cutting operations avoided. PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife. RUPTURE, or Breach (Hernia) is radically cured without the knife and without pain. Trusses can be thrown away! STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and safely removed without cutting. STRICTURES of Urinary Passage are also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For Pamphlets, numerous references and all particulars, send ten cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Just as Recommended

Last fall I was taken with a kind of summer complaint, accompanied with a wonderful diarrhœa. Soon after my wife's sister, who lives with us, was taken in the same way. We used almost everything without benefit. Then I said, let us try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which we did, and that cured us right away. I think much of it, as it did for me what it was recommended to do. John Hertzler, Bethel, Berks Co., Pa. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 30

All the talk in the world will not convince you so quickly as one trial of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for Scalds, Burns, Bruises, Skin Affections and Piles.

For Cholera and Diarrhœa

"My little boy was very bad off for two months with diarrhœa. We used various medicines, also called in two doctors, but nothing done him any good until we used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which gave immediate relief and soon cured him. I consider it the best medicine made and can conscientiously recommend it to all who need a diarrhœa or colic medicine. J. E. Hare, Trenton, Tex. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 30

Small in size, great in results: DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Best pill for Constipation, best for Sick Headache, best for Sour Stomach.

Relieves a Cold

"One of my customers came in to-day and asked me for the best cough medicine I had," says Lew Young, a prominent druggist of Newman Grove, Neb. "Of course I showed him Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and he did not ask to see any other. I have never yet sold a medicine that would loosen and relieve a severe cold so quickly as that Remedy does. I have sold four dozen of it within last sixty days and do not know of a single case where it failed to give the most perfect satisfaction." 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 30

One word describes it—"perfection." We refer to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures obstinate sores, burns, skin diseases and is a well known cure for piles.

Distemper and Coughs

In horses, sheep and hogs positively prevented and quickly cured by using Craft's Distemper and Cough Cure. Safe to use under all conditions. The Coming Wheel.

Ft. Wayne Morning Times.

The league chainless bicylce, which is now in its second season, promises to create a sensation next year. Riders who have given it a trial say it is bound to displace the chain geared wheel. It is light, noisless, absolutely clean, easy running and has absolutely no lost motion. R. W. Cobb is the agent for northern Indiana with headquarters at Auburn. He has appointed John Dennison, "the handy man," to look after his interests here. Mr. Dennison has not got the wheel for sale as the company cannot fill the orders already on file for this season, but he has a sample ladies' wheel on exhibition and for trial. All persons interested in cycling are welcome.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

That U. S. Arbitration Law.

The O'Neill law, approved Oct. 1 1888, provides that when controversies arise between transporation companies in interstate commerce and their employes, obstructing the transportation of property or passengers, an arbitrator shall be selected by each of the parties to the dispute—these two arbitrators to select a third. This board shall, after a full investigation, publicly announce its decision, which, with all testimony, shall be filed with the United States commissioner of labor.

The statute further provides that the president of the United States may select two commissioners, one of whom, at least, shall be a resident of the state or territory in which the controversy arises, who, together with the commissioner of labor, shall constitute a temporary commission for the purpose of examining the causes of the controversy, the conditions accompanying and the best means for adjusting it; the result of which examination shall be immediately reported to the president and congress, and on the rendering of such report the services of the two commissioners shall cease. The services of the commission, to be ordered at the time by the president and consituted as herein provided, may be tendered by the president, for the purpose of settling a controvery such as contemplated either upon his own motion or upon the application of one of the parties to the controversy or upon the application of the executive of a state.

Upon the direction of the president the commission shall visit the locality of the pending dispute and shall make careful inquiry into the cause thereof, hear all persons interested therein who may come before it, advise the respective parties what, if anything, ought to be done or submitted by either or both to adjust such dispute, and make a written decision thereof. This decision shall at once be made public, shall be recorded upon proper books of record, to be kept in the office of the commissioner of labor, who shall cause a copy thereof to be filed with the secretary of the state or territory, or states or teritories in which the controversy exists.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure, and the most dreaded habitual sick headache yields to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cure by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try it once. Large bottles only fifty cents at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. 2

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly For August.

"Road Coaching is pre eminently the sport of millionaires; and few of their many sports are better worth encouragement," writes Martha McCulloch Williams, in a splendidly illustrated paper on "Road Coaching in America," which is the leading article in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for August. Besides this seasonable contribution there are, amongst the pictorially embellished features of this number, "Silver," by Robert W. Sloan; "Closing Scenes of the French Revolution," by M. J. Jordan; "Jules Cheret and Parisian Posters," by Robert H. Sherard; "Isle of the Dead," by Edward B. McDowell; "Chess and Chess Players," by that eminent expert G. H. D. Gossip, accompanied with portraits of Messrs Lasker and Steinitz, and Mrs. Showalter; "Pictures of Wild Orchids," by Helen M. Ingersoll; "Falconry," by Mary V. Worstell; and a continuation of Joseph Becker's thrilling reminiscences of a war artist, devoted this month to "Foft Fisher and Wilmington." There is an excellent variety of short stories by Charles D. Lanier, J. H. Walworth, W. de Wagstaffe, Champion Bissell, and Violet Eytinge Mitchell; and poems by Ellen Thornycoft Fowler, Clara Dargan McLean, Edward A. U. Valentine, Chapman Alderson, Amy Elizabeth Leigh and others.

A Club Run.

Ft. Wayne Morning Times.

The Fort Wayne cycling club under the captaincy of Will Peltier made a run to Blue lake, near Churubusco, yesterday. There were twenty-two wheelmen in the party, among them being Mr. R. W. Cobb, of Auburn, district agent for the league chainless bicycle. The only other chainless in the party was ridden by Will Cohagen who secured one from Mr. Cobb for a trial only. The club passed the day pleasantly fishing in the lake and picnicking on the surrounding grounds. When the party started to return home last evening, Cobb and Cohagen set the pace for the chain wheel riders. Cobb lost considerable time by being obliged to dismount several times to tighten up his pedals which had become loose and required attention. Cohagen kept ahead much to the discomfiture of the chain wheel riders, among whom were several of the crack riders of Fort Wayne. They were determined not to allow the chainless wheel to get into Fort Wayne ahead of them and consequently the ride was a scorcher all the way in. Cohagen, however, kept sawing wood and reached the club house five minutes ahead of his closest follower. The distance is about seventeen miles which he covered in the remarkably short time of fifty-five minutes. It looks as though the league chainless is strictly in it.

DIED.

Alfred Cecil August McClintock was born in Ft. Wayne August 22, 1893, and died in the same place, July 7, 1894, aged 10 months and 15 days. The interment was at Woodlawn, Auburn, July 10, 1894.

Very Refreshing.

In a long and windy article on the judgeship in the Garrett Clipper the following paragraph occurs:

"The Clipper will guarantee that the future court expenses will be reduced one-half if Mr. Cline is elected. To say this of either of the other candidates would be an assertion we would not care to warrant. * * The Clipper has promises from Mr. Cline which he must fulfill. It is our duty to the democracy that he does and we shall attend to it. He cannot afford to make any misrepresentations to the Clipper, etc."

Now, a contract with such a reliable concern as the Clipper ought to place the matter beyond all question. You see, in the first place, they guarantee it. That of course makes it good. Then you see he has got to fulfill his promises; that makes it better. Then you see it is their duty to democracy that he does, and they are going to attend to it; that makes it best. Then you see he cannot afford to make any misrepresentations to to the Clipper; that makes it "more bindinger" still. So, taking it all in all, the die is cast, the jig is up, the dog is dead, buried, "swiped." Seriously, however, such rot as the Clipper puts out is very unfair to a man like Mr. Cline, who is a gentleman, a scholar and a good, decent candidate for a high and important office to which he ought to be elected. It is but charitable to say that the sponsorship of the Clipper was self-imposed and wholly without Mr. Cline's knowledge or consent. And we do hope that for the good of his canvass and the democratic party he will do what he can to prevent any more such slop in the future.

Killed by a Falling Tree.

Last Friday a young man of this place, Dick West, was cutting timber on the Marshall Owens farm southeast of town a few miles, being employed by the Gandy & Nickey Sawmill company. He and another man were falling a tree, and as it started to fall, it split and part flew back. The other man called to West to jump aside, but he jumped back, and in doing so, fell over a log, and just then the tree struck him. It tore the flesh from his arm and hurt him internally. He was picked up, put into a buggy and brought home, but he only lived till about midnight. It is supposed that his internal injuries were the immediate cause of his death, though his other injuries were dangerous. He was a younger brother of Henry and John West, being about eighteen years old.

Fayette is the seat of a progressive and prosperous Normal University. Its success is due to the high aim and far reaching wisdom of its founders. It is a school with a purpose. It has something of importance to say to every prospective student in the country. Normal work is a speciality but there are Preparatory, Commercial, Musical, Elocutionary, Shorthand, Typewriting, and Fine Art Departments, in addition to regular college courses. Chain of Lakes, Waupaca, Wis.

The attention of those figuring on a place for their "summer outing" is called to Waupaca, Wis., located on the Wisconsin Central Lines, about 200 miles from Chicago. It is a delightful spot, surrounded by a beautiful chain of lakes which abound in bass, trout, pike, pickerel and muskallonge. Good hotel accommodations at rates within reach of all. For full particulars, maps and guide books, address Jas C. Pond, Genl Passr, Agt, Milwaukee, Wis. 29

The Keystone Watch Case Co. of Philadelphia, the largest watch case manufacturing concern in the world, is now putting upon the Jas. Boss Filled and other cases made by it, a bow (ring) which cannot be twisted or pulled off the watch.

It is a sure protection against the pickpocket and the many accidents that befall watches fitted with the old-style bow, which is simply held in by friction and can be twisted off with the fingers. It is called the

and CAN ONLY BE HAD with cases bearing their trade mark—

Sold only through watch dealers, without extra charge.

Don't use your knife or finger nails to open your watch case. Send for an opener (free).

The Strike at Ashley.

The Times of Ashley, last week admitted that the strike was mainly over. On Saturday, July 7, deputy U. S. marshals reached Ashley, and began to warn the men that no interference with the road's business would be allowed. They also read them the injunction of U. S. Judge Woods, ordering them not to interfere with the work or trains of the Wabash. As the strikers had already stopped about forty engines and all the trains, these orders only tickled them. But later on they saw a vision. Sunday Supt. Gould and two more U. S. marshals reached the scene, and Monday came forty more U. S. marshals. They arrested a conductor named Agler, the president of the Ashley A. R. U., and took him to Indianapolis, where he was arraigned for making an engineer leave his engine. Tuesday a lot of new men were brought in from the east to take the strikers places. This looked serious to the men who had struck, and they began to ask to get back their old places. But they are likely to be out of a good job for their rashness. The trains are moving again, and work going on about as usual. Agler, the condutor who was taken to Indianapolis, was brought before the U. S. court and examined. The case against him was plain, but it was thought best to let him go on bail, and he came home where he will probably remain till sent for.

The Income Tax.

Louisville Courier-Journal.

Every tax is essentially a tax on incomes. Taxes must be paid either out of incomes or out of accumulated wealth. Now only a comparatively small part of the population have any considerable accumulated wealth. They must therefore, pay their annual taxes of every sort out of the income of the current year. Of that part of the laborer's income invested in dutiable imports an average of 50 per cent. in round numbers, goes to the federal government. Of the first cost of articles on which internal revenue is levied much more than half goes to the government, and much of it goes to states and municipalities in the way of license and otherwise. All these taxes on consumption are paid out of incomes, and the bulk of them out of small incomes. They are taxes on industry, on thrift, and they take a large part of the earnings of the industrious. They tax the average income all that it is able to bear, without causing privation, and not infrequently they go beyond this. Every income up to several thousand dollars is heavily depleted by taxes on consumption. But when the income rises above the point that is sufficient to pay for all articles consumed, it becomes, under existing laws, entirely exempt from taxation. In other words, the income that is requisite to existence is taxed, the surplus is entirely exempted. The tax on this surplus imposes no hardship.

Sweet Peas.

Sweet peas, as usually grown, give but few flowers at this season; but it is an easy matter to have these most charming flowers until the coming of very cold weather. To begin with, the seed should be sown early in the season,—in April, if possible,—in trenches six inches deep. Cover the seed to the depth of an inch only, at first. As the plants shoot up, drawn soil about them until you have the trench filled. When the first buds appear clip them off, and prevent the plants from flowering any before the latter part fo July. It may seem cruel to do this; it may involve some sacrifice on your part, if you are fond of flowers; but what you lose now will be fully made up for later, and I am confident sweet peas in August and September will be more highly appreciated than during the summer, when there are so many other flowers to enjoy. If you do not feel willing to put off the enjoyment of them, have a little patch for early blooming; by picking the blossom constantly, allowing none to go to seed, the blooming season may be greatly prolonged. During the hot, dry, midsummer season, keep the ground about the plants well covered with grass clippings from the lawn. When these decay, dig them into the soil, and spread on fresh ones. In this way the roots of the plants can be kept from getting dry, and this is of the greatest importance. In fact, you cannot grow sweet peas in a dry soil.

When the crop of August flowers begins, go over the plants every day and remove every blossom as it fades. It is very important that no seed be allowed to form. Reserve all the strength and vitality of the plant for the formation of flowers. Sweet peas will be found among the most useful of all flowers for cutting; but never try to "arrange" them. Let them do that for themselves. Gather them with long stems, bunching them loosely in the hand; when you have all you think you need,—do not have so many that they will crowd each other,—simply drop the stems into the vase or bowl and give them a shake, and they "arrange" themselves in a more satisfactory manner than you could attain if you were to work over them all day. Royal Baking Powder ABSOLUTELY PURE

A Small Fling.

The last number of the Press contains a very light little fling at the Auburn Rifles. It says: "The wives of the Auburn Militiamen were walking the streets Sunday p. m. with eyes dimmed with tears." An item like that is silly to say the least. It is of no consequence whether the statement is false or not, because if true, there would be nothing wrong about it, and the Press would only show its bad taste by commenting on it. It happens that quite a number of Capt. Kuhlman's company are married, and have very sensible wives. And a sensible wife very naturally and properly feels an anxiety as to the welfare of her husband. And though no demonstration of the kind took place, no one had any business to find fault if it had. A wife is a proper companion for her husband at all times, and it is one of the most common things in this place on Sunday evenings to see husband and wife walking out together. The people here are accustomed to such sights and do not make light comments on it. If however, the criticism was as appears reasonable, intended as a fling at the Auburn Rifles, our people will be quick to resent it. We feel a just pride in our "Rifles," and we are never ashamed to see them stand up by the best body of citizens soldiers in the state. They have responded with full ranks to every call that has been made on them. And on the occasion alluded to, every man was ready. And there was a quietness and business like way about them that still further commended them our good opinion. There was neither nervousness nor bluster, but they went about their preparations like veterans, and the long wait of ten hours before they were ordered to their homes was passed as quietly and coolly as the same hours had passed with our business men. If the Press did not think itself so smart, it would be a good deal smarter.

A Mail Agent's Experience.

Louis D. Brennecke, Wallhalla, S. C., had rheumatism for fifteen years, and during that time had never been free from pain. He tried the Hot Springs and physician without benefit. After taking two bottles of Drummond's Lightning Remedy he wrote that he was free from pain, and able to take several long walks. If you want a cure, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles—one month's treatment. Agents wanted.

What Ails You?

If you have sudden darting pains in the joints or muscles, and it recurs every time you get cold, and appears in new places without leaving any old ones, the best thing to do this is to send five dollars to the Dammond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, for a month's treatment of Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism. They will send you two large bottles of their remedy by return express. If you have the above symtoms you have the Rheumatism, and should begin at once with the known cure. Delay with any disease is dangerous—with Rheumatism, it is simply suicidal. Agents wanted 30

A Letter From the Front.

HEADQUARTERS POST KIGER, WHITING, IND., July 23, '94.

Special to Editor COURIER:

Our company arrived at Camp Gunder, Hammond, at 3:30 Tuesday afternoon and were assigned to our quarters with Col. J. K. Gore in command. That same evening 28 men of Co. K. were detailed for guard duty. On arriving at Hammond, found everything all quiet and citizens in sympathy with the boys in blue, as they know they have been sent to do their duty. Camp Gunder is located on the west of G. H. Hammond's packing house and only one square from the city hall.

On Wednesday, Col. Gore was ordered home and Maj. Bowman took command of the camp. This seems more like soldier life, or as we have heard our fathers tell when in the war of '61-'65. We live on hard tack, good, strong coffee that would carry a man, corn, beans and the Irishman's bacon—one streak of lean and one of fat. They did some kicking on the diet at first, but have come to the right idea of camp life. Not much work done to-day as we have been changing. Companies are leaving and new ones coming.

Thursday, Co. G., 2d. Reg., camped at Whiting, was ordered home and Co. K, 3d Reg., ordered there. About 3 p. m., we packed our knapsacks, prepared to leave for Post Kiger. The boys expected trouble, as everyone said Whiting was the toughest town in Indiana. We chartered an electric car that runs from Hammond to Chicago via East Chicago, Whiting and Roby. On arriving here we marched down the main street. The place looks like Ashley, only on a larger scale, a new place of four years, and a dirtier place you never saw. Maj. Kiger met us and took us to our quarters down at the L. S. & M. S. depot in five Wagner Palace Coaches, with Co. B, 3d Reg., of Ft. Wayne, to keep company with us. At 6 we had guard mount and detailed a strong guard as this was pay day in the large oil factories and lots of people on the streets drunk and gathering in crowds. But the night passed off quieter than we expected. About 10:30 an L. S. & M. S. freight pulled into the yards and laid here to pass a passenger train. When they went to pull out they found coupling pins pulled and hose cut.

They called for the guard, which was responded to by Corp. Bear and detail. They took the length of the train and brought in one prisoner before the "assemble" sounded. Co. K. was the first out and Co. B. came straggling along behind after Lieut. Lahnum took command of their company, as their captain and lieutenant could not be found and came strolling in after all was over.

On getting our prisoner to the guard house he gave the others away and in less than five minutes our companies were searching along the B. & O. tracks and lake, finding the men as described in the thicket along the lake. We kept them until Friday eve, when a guard took them to Hammond, accompanied by a U. S. marshal, and from there sent them to Indianapolis.

Saturday nothing happened of great moment.

Sunday found every man washed and shaved, leaving mustache and whiskers stand. When a man gets shaved all over he gets thrown up in a blanket. John Lahnum, Ray VanAuken and Roy Garrett came out from Chicago to take dinner with us yesterday. Eli and Chas. Rainier come over to see the boys every evening. Mrs. Roby came over to see the boys Saturday eve and visited at Camp Gunder Sunday. She and Pittsburgh company have made an agreement to purchase medals and present them to all soldiers who come to the strike in Lake county. The boys call her "The Soldier Boy's Mother." She was nurse in the service of '61-'65.

Col. Gore wrote back and told the boys of the grand reception tendered Co. E., of Elkhart, on their return home, as did also Maj. Kiger, of Co. G., of Rochester, and other companies.

Capt. Kuhlman has been in command of Camp Kiger since Friday when Maj. Kiger was ordered home.

Co. B. received a big box of good things to eat and it made our boys' mouths water. Captain says he expects our companies will be the last companies away. Now I think I have given a full account of our week's camp life. If we stay longer, will give a further account next week. Best wishes to all the Auburn people. Yours respt.,

PRIVATE GEO. C. CLARK, Cor. Adjt.

Opinion of Bishop Watterson.

In his sermon at the Cathedral, Columbus, Ohio, on Sunday before last, Bishop Watterson referred briefly to the disturbances that are agitating the country and denounced in vigorous language the crimes that are being committed in labor's name. He characterized the sympathetic strike as a madness and declared that the sooner the deluded workingmen abandoned the false principles of demagogical and designing leaders, the better for their own interests and the interests of the country at large. The tone of the press, he was glad to observe, was on the side of law and order. Should any trouble arise in his own city, he expressed the conviction that no Catholic worthy of the name would be found among the abettors of crime and disorder. The majesty of the law was to be upheld at all hazards by word and example and by personal sacrifice if necessary. Just cases of grievance are not to be righted by lawlessness or organized violence, and it is the first duty of every citizen to maintain the integrity of the law.—Ex.

Chicago Under the Mob.

Frederic Remington, in Harper's Weekly.

I passed hundreds of burning cars, acres of old car-wheels from which the wood-work had gone up in smoke. I saw the soldiers along the track, and we were the only train in that day. Everyone was asking everyone else, "Do you think we will make it?" We did make it, and the following evening I went to Hammond with three companies of regular infantry, to raise the blockade of turned-over cars and spiked switches, and we let the only train out which had been over the road in twenty-four hours.

Of the green of the Lake Front before the Auditorium Hotel burned the campfires of the troops. I went over to them and met men. There was Captain Capron, standing in front of his battery park as natural as when I had last seen him at Pine Ridge, just after Wounded Knee. There were his troops of the gallant Seventh, and acres of infantry. Campfires burned, horses stamped and struck at each other on the picket-lines, the Sibleys loomed, and the sentries paced, while the men lay about in groups. I called the attention of the officers to it, saying, "This is on the Plains, but look beyond at the gray buildings towering into the misty night, with their thousands of twinkling windows, and is not this a contrast?" We all admired; then someone broke the silence, "And this country is that for which our fathers fought!"—and a solemn pause—"I suppose we will have to fight some for it ourselves."

Chicago's mob doesn't like the Seventh Cavalry, or at least what it has seen of it. Captain L. R. Hare, with K Troop, rode through the stock-yards over the tracks, and the mob couldn't get used to his horses, and they didn't stop to try. They called his soldiers vile names, and United States soldiers are not used to being called names, and they get mad about it. The men boil inwardly, but the order "to shoot" didn't come, so the poor soldier had to sit on his horse and frown and "cuss" inwardly. It is awful bad messing for troop-horse, charging on track; it pulls the troop in the frogs of the track, and it slips, but United States cavalry can go anywhere—that's an axiom. After the malodorous crowd of anarchistic foreign trash had run as far as its breath would hold out and the cavalry halted, a real workman came out on a window-landing of a big factory and shook his fist at the flying mob. "Kill 'em—kill everyone of 'em; they are cowardly whelps, and they do me harm who have a wife and children, and wants to make an honest living. Damn 'em, I wish I was a soldier."

Before the charge some men undertook to through stones. Captain Hare raised his arm, and a man, evidently an American, came out of the crowd and harangued it: "Now go away; them's United States soldiers, and they are ordered here, and they'll shoot if they get the order, and if they shoot they'll kill a heap of people; they can't help it; don't curse them; curse Cleveland; he's the man that they represent;" but he was howeled down by a mob too beery to comprehend even that much sense.

When I went with the three companies of infantry to Hammond, they got the order in their camp, were packed in fifteen minutes, and "right forward—fours right," they swung off down the road.

It would do any soldier's heart good, it would fairly fill his eye to see our United States soldiers out here—it is so refreshing to one who knows how to estimate parade-day affairs—the businesslike look, the utter "don't care" of the men, the perfect machine, the tall, brouzed young athletes with the packs and campaign hats, the water and grub and 100 rounds, the officers in flannel shirts with revolver and sword. And right here I must say that I have associated with the enlisted men of our army, and a cleaner, decenter lot of young fellows can't be found anywhere. They are pure and simple of speech, they are honest, and no man can be one who can't pass the most rigid physical examination imaginable; and to see them stand in front of the howling mob—grim, no emotion—a perfect mental calm, generated by the knowledge of the unselfishness of the technique of their trade—to hit a man at 500 yards with a Springfield—is a simple delight. They don't think that the mob have a correct appreciation of their trade, and it piques them. They have lain out on the target-range at 700 yards of a long summer day and calculated the light and the wind, and gotten up quite an enthusiasm over a painted black spot and a little record-book, and when a vicious wretch with no blood circulating above his ears calls them names their sporting blood is aroused.

THISTLE OR LETTUCE—WHICH?

The new Farm Pest that is Giving us Such a Scare.

A. D. Moore, of Moore's Station brought to this office on Monday, a full grown specimen of the new weed that has so suddenly overspread this part of the country. A great many farmers have been of the opinion it is the Russian thistle, while others think it is not. Among the latter is Mr. Moore himself, who, while realizing that it is a pest that should be fought and stamped out, is of the belief that it is a much more innocent affair than the Russian thistle. About two years ago our people were surprised to notice patches of a strange but rank weed growing in waste and odd places along the roadsides, then in fence corners and similar places. Last year it was noticed these patches had increased in size and number, and this season it is found all over the county. And from various parts of the state we have the same reports. As we said, many were frightened and believed it the Russian thistle, that has been causing much trouble in the newer western states, and for the extermination of which the House of representatives has just voted a million of dollars. But it is not the Russian thistle. It is a weed called in common terms, "Wild Lettuce," and has been known as such in many parts of the country. It has some of the characteristics of the thistle, for it spreads by having it seeds carried by the wind, just as the seeds of the thistle family are carried about. It is this ease of getting over the country that enables it to appear so suddenly, and as our country becomes more open and free from timber, we have more winds, and so the area of this weed has suddenly increased. Of course it will prove a pest, but it is easily killed where the ground can be cultivated. But roads, fence corners and odd places must be looked to. We believe it is the law that supervisors of roads must see that the roadsides are kept mowed and clean of weeds. Mr. Moore is of the same opinion, and if this be so, these officers have a job on hand that must be attended to at once, as the work has to be done in June or August. The botanical name of the weed is "Mulgedium," and the kind we find here most frequently is probably the "Mulgedium Leucophæum." This at least seems the correct description, and we are not alone in this opinion. Last week we saw mention of this weed in several of our exchanges, notably in the Albion New Era. In one of these articles that is credited to the Goshen News, the writer believes the plant of the same genus and species that we have given. It adds:

"It is a biennial plant, which means that it does not come to maturing the first year, but goes to seed the second year like the common thistle. The seeds are scattered and disseminatied by the wind like the dandelion, thistle, etc. This year these weeds will go to seed and be scattered no one knows where. Eli Ames, a Jefferson township farmer, tells the News that the new pest, the Russian thistle, is giving himself and his neighbors a great deal of trouble and will continue to thrive and create trouble, unless the farmers take active measures to eradicate the plant and prevent its spread. It grows very rapidly and attains a height of four feet, taking up all available space and throttling the growth of other vegetation.—Goshen News."

The editor of the New Era adds:

"T ere are differences of opinion as to whether the weed described above is what is known as the Russian thistle or not. Many claim that the Russian thistle is an entirely different weed, and one much more to be dreaded by the farmer and others. There are millions of the weed described by the News in this locality."

The second article in the New Era refers to Prof. VanGorder, of Noble county, a well known local botonist, who has analyzed the plant, and also to Prof Arthur, of Purdue. The article says:

"It is Wild Lettuce. A sample of the plant that Dr. Lemmon and others assured us recently was the Russian thistle was sent to the botanist at Purdue University, and his reply shows that Prof. VanGorder was right in his classification of the plant, months ago. Prof. Arthur, of Purdue, says: 'The plant which you sent me is Wild Lettuce. It is a weed which has gradually overspread the west and is likely to be common everywhere. It is not a very serious pest and can be kept in check readily by cultivation. It probably will be found along roadsides and in neglected places, but is not likely to be serious. So far as I know the Russian thistle has not appeared at any point in Indiana up to the present time.'"

So our readers will see that while it is not the pest we have been fearing, it is sufficiently a nuisance to be carefully watched and fought against. We are told that mowing does not kill them; they must be cut off below the ground.

A Lesson of the Great Strike.

From Harper's Weekly.

One feature of the great strike business which will at once strike every fair-minded man as very singular. If the Pullman Company, instead of offering their working-men, in spite of the losing business, continued employment at a reduced rate of wages, had simply said to them, "We are sorry our business has so fallen off that we have no longer employment for you; we are compelled to close the works, and you will have to shift for yourselves until we get profitable orders enabling us to take you back"—if the company had done this cold businesslike way, there would have been no trouble. In fact, the company did this very thing in one instance without stirring a ripple. It closed its shops at Detroit, and transferred the work that might have been done there to Pullman, for the purpose of keeping a larger number of men at Pullman employed. But it was at Pullman, where the workingmen had been kept employed at a sacrifice to the company, that the trouble occurred, not at Detroit, where the operatives were simply dismissed.

The Pullman working-men have thus taught the employers of labor in the country this lesson: When times are hard and work cannot profitably be carried on, employers should carefully abstain from trying to bridge over the hard times for their operatives by offering them employment at reduced wages. That would cause trouble. The only safe policy under such circumstances is simply to discharge the men and let them take care of themselves. How do sensible working-men like this view of the case? Yet they cannot deny that just this is the teaching conveyed by the conduct of the Pullman operatives, and that employers cannot be blamed for acting upon it.

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Collision on the Panhandle Near Griffith, Ohio—Three Killed and Many Injured—Non-Unionists' Houses Blown Up by Dynamite at Dunbar, Pa.—Daring Robbery—A Gold Mill Burned.

KILLED AND HURT.

Such is the Result of a Collision on the Panhandle.

Cincinnati special: There was a head-end collision on the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad at Griffith's station, fifteen miles from this city. Three were killed and ten injured. The express from Chicago was on time, but the St. Louis express, which runs fifteen minutes ahead of the Chicago incoming train, was an hour late. At Griffiths a light engine was running down the gravel bank in charge of Engineer Hart. He forgot his orders. Knowing the St. Louis express was late, he pulled out and was met by the Chicago express. Hart will die, probably without being able to tell how he made the mistake in orders. His fireman, Frank Taylor of Indianapolis, was killed outright, as were also Charles Sherman and another tramp, who were stealing a ride. There are ten reported injured, none fatally except Engineer Hart.

Dynamite Outrages.

Dynamiters made an attempt the other night to blow up the town of Dunbar, Pa. At 1 o'clock a large bomb was exploded under the house of a non-union workman named Vaugh, in the center of the town. The building was blown to pieces and the larger part of the town was badly shaken by the explosion. Windows were broken all over the borough and chimneys thrown from their position. The family escaped without injury, which is considered miraculous. A short time later a dynamite bomb was found under the house of Wm. Boden, another non-unionist. The bomb had evidently been thrown at the house, but did not explode. Excitement runs high.

Wants a Fight.

Shanghai special: It is generally believed here that Japan does not desire a pacific settlement of the Corean dispute. As evidence of this, attention is called to the fact that as soon as one difficulty is overcome, Japan immediately raises another. The latest attitude of the King of Corea in the crisis is supposed due to China's decided measures to uphold her claim to supremacy over the Corean peninsula. Reports that France and Russia will support Japan against China are pronounced absolutely groundless.

Two Heroes Perish.

Two men were killed, one fatally injured, ten houses valued at $10,000 destroyed, and much household property consumed by flames in a fire that occurred on Van Horn Street, in the heart of the Bohemian Colony, Chicago. Moritz Arka and Frank Cizek are dead, after attempts to save Bohemians from the fire. Twenty families were rendered homeless by the fire, which was started by four children of Antonio Cizek. They were playing with matches in a shed.

Cattle Needed in Switzerland.

United States Consul General at Zurich believes that this is an opportune time for cattlemen to place surplus cattle in Switzerland. Owing to the hay famine last year all surplus stock was killed, and now there is a great scarcity. Beef on the hoof brings $15.40 per 220 pounds, and dressed beef $30.88 per 220 pounds. The Consul suggests that American stock shippers communicate with the president of the Swiss Butchers' Association.

Tried to Wreck a Pay Car Train.

An attempt was made to wreck and rob the pay car of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton recently. As the special train hauling the pay car was approaching Chillicothe, Ohio, the engine collided with a number of freight cars run out on the main track. The engine was partially wrecked and Engineer Sweetman and Fireman Kircher were badly injured. It is believed the freight cars were run down the freight track by some miscreants.

Daring Robbery in Indiana.

Dick Gales, a restaurant man at Frankfort, Ind., was waylayed by robbers, who after robbing him of $400, took him to Lake Alhambra, a half mile from the city and threw him in the water. His strength held out until he could reach the shore, but he is in a dangerous condition from the shock. No clue to the robbers.

A Gold Mill Burned.

At Cripple Creek, Col., fire destroyed the Rosebud Mill, one of the most complete gold ore reduction plants in the country. The mill, which was owned by a French company, had only just been put in running order. The loss is fully $150,000.

A Brakeman Killed.

A brakeman named Atkinson, was killed in the Nickle Plate yards at Fort Wayne, Ind. He missed his footing and fell under the engine.

Kills His Wife and Himself.

At Morris, Ill., Thomas Brown, a Coal City miner, shot and instantly killed his wife and then himself. Jealousy was the cause.

Slaughtered in a Texas Wreck.

A special from Texarkana says: Limited reports reach here of a serious wreck on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, near Queen City, Texas, in which the engineer, express messenger, fireman, and the train porter, with three passengers whose names are unobtainable, were killed. The wrecked train was the north bound passenger from Dallas. A relief train boarded by Dr. J. A. Lightfoot and a sufficient corps of aides left here for the scene.

Quite Romantic.

Chicago special: Through the publication of his name as one of the slightly injured in the explosion of the caisson of Battery F, Second Artillery, the whereabouts of Paul Panuska, who disappeared from his home in a Chicago suburb six months ago, has been discovered. Panuska left home without warning, and his family and friends searched for him unavailingly until the story of the explosion revealed the fact that the young man was enlisted in Battery F, United States Army. As a result of the riots, Panuska's battery was permanently located at Ft. Sheridan, near here, his home. A touch of romance is added to the story by the report that Panuska will shortly be married to an old-time schoolmate.

A $600,000 FIRE.

Central Market, at Minneapolis, Destroyed.

Minneapolis special: The Central Market, occupying an entire block of ground between Second and Third avenues north, and Sixth and Seventh streets, was totally destroyed by fire, together with several small dwellings and a livery stable. The total loss will be in the neighborhood of $600,000. The market house was a three-story brick structure. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it was discovered in the court about 9 o'clock. An alarm quickly followed by a second and third and in a few minutes by a general alarm, but the building was doomed before a stream of water was turned on the flames, and the firemen turned their attention to the buildings across the street. Near where the fire started stood Mattieson's livery stable and here a great danger menaced not only the firemen, but valuable property as well. Immediately adjoining the stable was a huge reservoir belonging to the Minneapolis Gas Light Company, in which was stored 62,000,000 feet of illuminating gas. To keep the flames from reaching this was the hazardous undertaking of a large detachment of the fire department. The firemen did their work well, and although the intense heat set fire to the cupola of the building, the fire was kept from the highly inflammable material within. Next to the livery stable toward the Seventh street side were several small frame dwellings and a tenement row which, with the greater portion of their contents, were destroyed.

While clearing up the wreck after the fire Myron C. Finley, a lineman employed by the Brush Electric Light Company, came in contact with a live wire and died while being taken to the hospital.

ROLLING IN RICHES.

Desperadoes Rob the Wells-Fargo Express Company.

Red Fork (I. T.) special: The office of the Wells-Fargo Express Company and the south-bound train on the Monet division of the 'Frisco road were robbed by Bill Cook and his gang of six desperadoes. The seven men entered the express office adjoining the depot and ordered the agent to throw up his hands. Two of the men guarded the agent and the remainder went through the express safe and packages. The amount taken is not large. The robbers then mounted the south bound train on the Monet division and rode a short distance out where they compelled the engineer to stop the train. Messenger Chapman, a brother of the Missouri and Pacific messenger who was killed a year ago, by train robbers, had charge of the express car. He was made a prisoner and the valuables in the car were sorted over by the robbers.

The amount taken is not known. The robbers fled from the train and were seen in the moonlight to mount horses and start north. Already a posse is in pursuit.

St. Louis special: General Manager Simpson, of the Wells-Fargo Express Company, states that delayed remittances on account of the railroad strike may have made the raid at Red Fork a valuable one for the robbers, as present shipments are large.

DUN'S REPORT.

Business Waiting on Tariff Legislation, Whose Uncertainties Have Increased During the Week.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Review says: The effects of the two great strikes have not yet entirely worn off, and meanwhile the disagreement between the two houses of Congress has made tariff uncertainties more distant and impressive. It follows that customary tests of the condition of business are less instructive than usual.

The financial situation is somewhat less favorable, because exports of gold have been resumed and are $3,300,000 for the week, but the Treasury receipts have been $2,046,391 for customs against $2,951,574 last year, and $7,474,553 internal revenue against $2,979,518 last year. The extraordinary payments to anticipate the increase of taxation on whisky are rapidly locking up a large amount of capital and taking from the Government a part of the expected increase of revenue, while the current loss in custom receipts is largely due to postponement of imports in expectation of lower duties hereafter. Thus the treasury has been gaining in balance, although at the expense of some loss in revenue hereafter. Wheat has been skating on thin ice, with chance of breaking through, making the lowest record ever known. It has declined 3 cents for the week.

SHOOK THINGS UP.

Four Hundred Pounds of Powder Explodes and Two Persons Are Injured.

Savannah special: An explosion of 400 pounds of loose powder at Fort Pulaski, fatally wounded Ordnance Sergeant William Chinn, seriously injured Mary Washington, his mother-in-law, and set fire to the fort, causing intermittent explosions of fixed ammunition and doing much damage.

Just after breakfast Sergeant Chinn went into the store room and took a handful of the powder from one of the open casks, wet it at the pump and then placed it in the middle of the room, to drive out the mosquitoes. He had left a trail of dry powder from the middle of the floor right up to it. As soon as he had ignited the powder it burned along the train and the 400 pounds exploded. Two tons of powder and 500 pounds of dynamite were all the while within easy reach of the fire. Sergeant Chinn, who was in charge, is of the Twenty-fourth Infantry. He was burned and blistered over three-fourths of his body and will die.

It Didn't Work.

Garfield Wilkinson, a 14-year-old boy living thirteen miles south of Wichita, Kas., was shot and instantly killed by his brother, Willie, a boy 11 years of age. The circumstances are somewhat peculiar. Garfield has been reading about bullet proof shields invented and recently tested in Germany. He concluded to make one like them and having completed it, he put it on and asked his brother to fire a shot at him. The little brother did so, the bullet penetrating the shield and pierced the boy's heart. The shield was made out of a coffee sack, and filled with scraps of barbed wire and wool. The accident drove the mother of the boys insane.

It Looks Like War.

Shanghai special: The report that war has been declared between China and Japan is not yet confirmed, but China is preparing for war. The Chinese are blocking the northern passage of the Yang Tse Kiang, the great river of China. Incoming vessels are thus compelled to pass nearer the Woosung forts. Telegraphic communication with Pekin has been stopped on account of the flood. Japan has chartered all the Mitsui Bussan Company's ships, in addition to the sixteen already chartered from the Wusen Kaisha Company. Japan has prohibited the departure of the Yusen steamers.

Struck by Lightning.

During a monster celebration at the formal opening of Ring Rocks Park, near Pottstown, Penn., seven persons in the midst of the multitude were stricken down by a bolt of lightning that followed an electric light wire. Two were killed and five injured. All had sought refuge from a severe electric shower, and stood near the doors of the park cafe and pavilion. At both ends of these buildings the electric light wires entered over the doors: the current turned on, on account of the temporary darkness, proved a strong conductor, and the lightning leaped in bolts from the wires to the people inside.

Old Soldiers Honored.

Medals of honor have been awarded to the following members of the volunteer storming party at Vicksburg, 1862: Jasper N. North, private, D, Fourth Virginia Volunteers, now in Bloomingdale, Wis.; Charles W. Rundle, private, A, One Hundred and Sixteenth Illinois Volunteers, now at Grand Junction, Col.: Thomas J. Ward, private, C, One Hundred and Sixteenth Illinois, now at Anaconda, Mont.; Martin K. Davis, private, H, One Hundred and Sixteenth Illinois, now at Demorest, Ga.; David H. Helms, private, B, Eighty-third Indiana, now at Hillsboro, Ind.

Wreck of an Excursion Train.

A special excursion from Albion, Ill., to Marengo, was wrecked about four miles east of Oakland City, Ind., caused by the breaking of the engine trucks. Several were badly hurt and in all ten or fifteen were slightly injured. The train consisted of an engine, baggage car and four passenger coaches, excursionists, all members of churches or congregations of Albion, Ill., on an annual picnic excursion. The engine broke down, jumped the track and rolled down a steep embankment, pulling the coaches with it.

Cholera in Russia.

St. Petersburg special: The cholera epidemic is rapidly spreading, being aided by extremely hot weather. The disease has broken out in the military camp at Krasnoe-Selo, eighteen miles south of St. Petersburg. There are 1,000 patients, mostly factory hands and boatmen, in the hospitals in this city. The new cases average 200 daily and the deaths 100.

Will Expel Them from the Church.

New York special: Manager Satolli, apostolic delegate, has just rendered a decision condemning the liquor traffic. He approves the expulsion of liquor dealers from Catholic societies. This decision was called forth by an appeal from a ruling of Bishop Watterson of Columbus, Ohio, and sustains the bishop's course.

Fatal Explosion.

At Lynn, Mass., by an explosion of gas in the Strout Building, a six-story structure, E. E. Strout, owner of the building, and Office Arthur Wells were so badly burned that they will probably die, and three others were severely injured. The damage to the building will amount in $50,000.

Arm Torn Off.

John Cooper, employed as engineer with Moffatt's steam thrasher, had his arm torn off by getting it tangled in the machinery, on Englehart's farm north of Winchester, Ohio. A small portion of the flesh was also torn from his shoulder. He is in a critical condition.

Broke His Neck.

Charleston (W. Va.) special: John Thomas and Edgar Poling quarreled and fought on the steamer Lyda, coming to Charleston from Brownstown. Poling struck Thomas on the neck with his fist, breaking his neck, which caused his death.

Town Almost Destroyed.

The town of Somerset, Ind., was almost totally destroyed by fire. The business portion was destroyed with a large number of residences. The loss is heavy with small insurance.

Badly Scalded.

A traction engine, owned by W. R. Winters and operated by him in connection with a threshing machine, exploded near Logansport, Ind., dangerously scalding three men. Two of the victims will probably recover.

Burned to Death.

Gladys, the 2-year-old daughter of William Shumway of Greenfield, Ind., was frightfully burned about the body from a match ignited by the little babe. Death relieved its intense suffering.

Steamship Sunk.

Brest (France) special: A large steamer is reported to have been sunk off this port. No particulars have been received as to name or nationality.

Fatally Injured.

Harvey Michael, a young farmer living near Markle, Ind., was perhaps fatally injured by a runaway.

Pan-Handle Train Did It.

At Springfield, Ohio, Ed Weekly, a 17-year-old colored boy, was killed by a passenger train.

DEATH ON PARADE.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION AMONG UNCLE SAM'S MEN.

Ranks of Federal Troops Shattered While Out for Summer Day Drill Exercise in Chicago—Four Men Killed, Seventeen Injured, and Nine Horses Dead.

Cause of the Disaster Unknown.

By the explosion in Chicago of an ammunition chest belonging to Battery F of the Second Artillery, from Fort Riley, Kan., four soldiers were instantly killed, eighteen other people, soldiers and spectators, were wounded, and nine artillery horses were killed.

The carnage produced by the discharge of the forward gun caisson, loaded with the death-dealing shrapnel shells and steel percussion shells, was frightful. The houses in the neighborhood of the scene of the explosion, which was the intersection of Grand and Oakwood boulevards, were riddled by the projectiles of all kinds from shrapnel bullets and canister and parts of the gun carriages. Two of the soldiers were literally blown to pieces. Their bodies, mangled beyond recognition, were picked up 200 feet or more from where the explosion took place. The people for blocks around were stunned by the concussion. Windows were shattered blocks away from the accident, and the people rushed out into the streets in alarm, thinking it was a dynamite bomb which some one had set off. All except five of the injured were soldiers of the regular army.

The accident occurred at 1:45 o'clock. The detachment, consisting of three troops of cavalry and one battery of artillery, was proceeding south on Grand boulevard to Washington Park. Capt. Dodd from Fort Riley was in command. With him were troop B of the Seventh Regiment, Capt. Varnum; troop E of the Sixth Regiment, Lieut. Hyer; and two pieces of artillery of battery F, under command of Lieut. Gayle.

Soldiers Blown High in Air.

Troop F was in the lead, with troop B following. Behind this came the artillery, and troop E brought up the rear. In this order the soldiers were riding. Just as the artillery reached the intersection of Oakwood boulevard the explosion occurred. First there came a terrific concussion which blew the men seated on the caisson high into the air and prostrated the artillery horses and the nearest cavalrymen. This was followed immediately by a series of lesser explosions. These caused much less slaughter than the first. Donovan and Doyle, two gunners seated on the exploding caisson, were thrown hundreds of feet into the air. Their mangled remains were afterward found 200 feet or more away from the scene.

Equally terrible was the fate of Joe Galler, of Troop B, just behind the explosion. His head was crushed by the shells. The caisson was totally wrecked. Bits of the wheels were driven into the buildings on both sides of the street, and barely enough was left in the roadway to indicate the spot where the vehicle had stood. The four horses were frightfully cut and mangled by the shrapnel. They plunged about in agonies on the ground for a few moments and then lay still. The horses on the second piece of artillery right behind the explosion fared little better. All except one were killed.

The cause of the explosion remains a mystery. As nearly all the cases in the ammunition chest were discharged, the cause of the accident will never be discovered. It is supposed, however, to have been caused by the accidental unscrewing of an imperfect shrapnel shell cap.

JUDGE DEFIES THE ARMY.

Detachment of Regular Troops Ordered from a California Courtroom.

At Sacramento, Cal., during the hearing of a writ of habeas corpus for the release of three Dunsmuir strikers before Judge Catlin, a detachment of regulars marched into the courthouse with the evident intention of taking the prisoners. Judge Catlin immediately arose and called upon persons who were present to resist any attempt of the soldiers to take away the strikers. The excitement in the court-room was intense. Several of the spectators reached for their hip pockets and announced their determination to follow Judge Catlin's instructions to prevent the regulars from taking away the prisoners. Others securely barred the doors leading to the court-room and threateningly declared their intention of resisting the regulars. While the excitement was at fever heat the assistant District Attorney arose and waved the regulars back. He then commanded them to return to their quarters at the depot.

FIGURING ITS COST.

Railroad Losses, in Chicago Alone, Caused by the Strike May Reach $8,000,000.

One of the General Managers in speaking of the cost of the great strike to the railroads in Chicago alone said that the losses to the roads might go as high as $8,000,000. The loss occasioned by suspended traffic will be the largest item, but the destruction of property will be by no means a small one. Nearly 600 Panhandle cars were destroyed in one blaze, and of this number ninety-eight contained merchandise. It will be necessary to learn what these cars contained before any computation of loss can be made. Within the city limits tower houses have been burned and tracks been torn up. Damage has been done in many railroad shops, and enormous sums expended in defending the roads against rioters. What the railroad companies will do in the way of demanding financial redress from the county and city has not been determined by the General Managers, but many suits are expected.

The commission men of South Water street will meet to formulate a plan of action in regard to claims against the railroad companies. It was estimated that the claims would aggregate $500,000, and that the losses of the commission men would not be less than $1,500,000.

In Chicago and vicinity, including Hammond, eight or, indirectly, ten lives were lost, the victims being killed outright or afterwards dying of their injuries, while the number of wounded, as far as reported, was forty-one. At least nine, and probably ten, lives have been lost throughout the West outside of Chicago. This does not include those killed and injured by the explosion of the caisson on a Chicago boulevard.

CONSPICUOUS RAILWAY MAN.

John M. Egan, Chairman of the General Managers' Strike Committee.

John M. Egan is one of the most conspicuous figures in the railroad world by reason of his recent position as Chairman of the General Managers' Strike Committee. Mr. Egan is a native of New England, but is more widely known in the West, having gone there at an early age. He is 46 years of age. When a boy he entered the machine shops of the Illinois Central Railway, and at 19 was a clerk in the freight department. He soon entered the engineers' office, and in 1877 became Chief Engineer of the Southern Minnesota Railroad. Later he became connected with the Southern Pacific, and in 1881 was chosen General Superintendent of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway. In 1888 he assumed the management of the Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City Railroad, and in 1890 became president of the company, a position he held until April of the present year. He knows all about the railroad business, and by nature is peculiarly qualified to fight and put down strikes.

JOHN M. EGAN.

FAVORS ARBITRATION.

Senator George Wants a Board Created with Power to Settle Labor Disputes.

James Z. George, United States Senator from Mississippi, introduced a bill in the Senate to create a board of labor arbitration. Senator George is a native of Georgia, and is 68 years old. His father having died in his infancy, he removed with his mother when he was 8 years old to Mississippi. Though quite young, he served in the Mexican war. In 1854, and again in 1860 he was elected Reporter of the High Court of Errors and Appeals. In 1861 he was a member of the convention in Mississippi which passed the ordinance of secession, and he voted for and signed that instrument. He was a Brigadier General of the State troops, and held other offices during the war. In 1879 he was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Mississippi, but resigned his seat on the Supreme Bench to enter the United States Senate in March of 1881. He was re-elected in 1886, and again in 1892.

JAMES Z. GEORGE.

A DEADLY WEAPON.

The New Riot Gun Which Can Disable 150 Men to the Minute.

The "riot gun" with which United States Marshal Arnold armed his posse of deputies during the recent trouble in Chicago is really a cross between the Gatling gun and the French mitrailleuse. It may be defined as a repeating shotgun, but is the most powerful hand arm ever loaded with powder and shot. The weapon is of larger bore than the average army rifle, but weighs less. Its magazine has room for six 12-caliber cartridges. Each cartridge contains 3½ drams of powder and 12 buckshot. Between the shot and the powder are two eighth-inch compressed paper wads. The shell of the cartridge is of paper, backed by a rim of brass. Its outward appearance is very much like the ordinary shotgun shell, but its surface is thicker and much stronger. The six cartridges may be fired in half as many seconds, thus throwing seventy-two scattering bullets, any of which would inflict a serious wound at eighty yards distance. The magazine may be reloaded easily within a half-minute. It is calculated that with the shot of each cartridge scattering as it is discharged, the gun, in the hands of a fairly accurate shot, is capable of disabling 150 men to the minute. Marshal Arnold claimed that five men armed with these weapons and fairly protected could easily disperse of a mob of 50,000 rioters.

Monument to Be Erected on the Historic Battlefield.

The design given below is for a monument to be erected to the memory of General Washington upon the battlefield at Chadd's Ford, Pa., which is historic by reason of the fact that it is the only engagement of importance of the Revolutionary war in which the colonial forces were defeated when under the command of General Washington. The shaft will cost about $15,000. It is to be sixty feet in height, and weigh about 180 tons. The base will contain a historical room about 13x9 for the storage of relics of the great battle.

THE BLACK PLAGUE.

Its Spread Directly Attributable to Native Superstition.

The spread of the black plague in China was due to a great extent to the superstition of the natives. In Hong Kong it was by a mere matter of accident that the European authorities learned of the disease, as the natives carefully concealed the spread of the contagion. Placards were brought to Hong Kong from Canton, which reveal the deadly suspicion of all foreign means of treatment. These placards warned all people not to go to Hong Kong nor to permit their wives and children to go, because they would fall victims to the foreign doctors, who were chopping up all sick persons in order to make medicine out of their eyes and bones. No amount of explanation has yet sufficed to eradicate the deep-seated suspicion that all foreign doctors are on the still hunt for the eyes of dead Chinese. The people cannot understand that European medicine does not value certain parts of a body for medicine, because their own physicians, who are mainly quacks, insist that by eating certain parts of the bodies of animals one may secure the best qualities of those animals. They cling to this belief, and therefore such absurd stories as those of Christian missionaries killing native children to secure their eyes find ready credence.

In Hong Kong the silly suspicion of foreign doctors led to thousands of unnecessary deaths. When the physicians began house-to-house inspection for patients suffering from the plague there was a tremendous clamor. Placards were posted not to permit the foreign devils to enter their homes, as this search for patients was merely a ruse. These warnings also declared that many who were removed were not suffering from the dread disease, but had been selected as specially suitable for furnishing medicines. In the excited condition of the public these placards and rumors created such an outburst of fanaticism that the doctors were forced to give up the house inspection for two days. Before they relinquished it, however, they were actually stoned by crowds which followed them in the streets. The police detailed armed Sikhs to accompany the doctors, but this was found to promote danger of an insurrection, and it was finally decided to yield to native clamor. After two days the inspection was resumed, the native Governor having issued a proclamation warning every one from interfering with the doctors. All patients, however, were transferred to the native hospitals, as the Chinese absolutely refused to use the European hospital.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

Two more appropriation bills—the legislative, executive and judicial and the District of Columbia—were disposed of by the Senate Monday. This leaves but four more appropriation bills to be considered—the Indian, agricultural, sundry civil and deficiency—and of these only the first has come from the committee. The conference report on the military academy appropriation bill was agreed to. The House, by a vote of 125 to 27, adopted a resolution offered by Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky, indorsing the action of the President and the administration in suppressing lawlessness in connection with the strike. The remainder of the day was spent in an effort to press the Bailey bankruptcy bill, but, although it was engrossed and read a third time, the quorum failed on the final vote.

In the Senate Tuesday, the following House bills were passed: To authorize the construction of a bridge over the Mississippi at Dubuque, Iowa; providing for the resurvey of Grant and Hooker Counties, Nebraska. Consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill was then resumed, and Mr. Hansbrough offered an amendment appropriating $1,000,000 for the destruction of the Russian thistle upon the bill as a "rider." A point of order was made against it by Mr. Cockrell, but by a vote of 26 to 22 the Senate decided the amendment to be in order, and it was adopted, 27 to 24. The House passed the Bailey voluntary bankruptcy bill by a vote of 127 to 81 and devoted the remainder of the day to business reported from the Judiciary Committee. Only two bills, however, were disposed of—one to create an additional Circuit Judge for the Eighth Judicial Circuit and the other making United States railroad corporations, for the purpose of jurisdiction, citizens of the States through which they pass or into which they go.

In the Senate, Wednesday, Mr. Carey called up the Senate bill to reserve for ten years in each of several States 1,000,000 acres of arid lands to be reclaimed and sold in small tracts to actual settlers, and it was passed. The bill applies to the same States as the desert land law and also to Montana and Kansas and to the States that may be formed out of the Territories of Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Utah, when admitted. By unanimous consent bills were passed by the House authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at Lexington, Mo.; also a resolution calling on the Secretary of War for a report on the Government improvements at Saugatuck Harbor, Mich. Under the special order adopted on Monday the remainder of the day was devoted to business reported from the committee on military affairs. Bills were also passed to regulate enlistments in the army, to authorize the Board of Managers of the Soldiers' Home to transfer and maintain the inmates of any branch in case of emergency, to place Major General John L. Green on the retired list as first lieutenant, Napoleon J. T. Dana as an assistant quartermaster, Dunbar K. Ransom as captain, Charles B. Stivers as captain and James William Albert as Major.

The Senate was occupied Friday in finding out "where it was at" on the tariff question. Because of a very small attendance by reason of greater attractions in the Senate the House was able to transact much business in a short time. Half a dozen bills were passed without opposition or debate. Most of the day was devoted to the discussion of the resolution introduced by Mr. Tucker, of Virginia, to amend the constitution by taking away from Congress authority over the election of United States Senators and empowering the States to prescribe the time, place and manner of holding elections for Senators. Before a vote was reached the House was compelled, under the regular order for Friday, to take a recess. The night session was devoted to pension business.

How Miners Are Robbed.

In discussing the treatment received by the miners from the operators in the coal regions, where pluck-me stores, dockage, etc., are common things, Henry D. Lloyd related the following: "The most glaring and outrageous, the most utterly damnable case of systematic oppression ever known was at Spring Valley, Ill., about ten years ago. W. L. Scott—happily he is dead—organized the company and built the town. Miners were lured there by good wages and bought homes. When the men had their homes half paid for 50 per cent. were locked out. When their mortgages had been duly foreclosed the other half were locked out and their homes went to the spoilers. There was no violence, no uproar, no militia. The miners seemed to think it was all right. There was a singular thing happened at Spring Valley. The last lockout left but few men at work. They held a meeting and decided to work only half time—they were earning but $16 per month—and let the men with families stand off starvation a while longer by working the other half. This would not do for the proprietors. When they knew it they shut down work and everyone starved at his leisure."

There is a little dog named Bobby, a Skye terrier, in New York, that should feel extremely happy, and very probably there are many people in the great metropolis and elsewhere who would like to swap places, but of course not forms, with that dog. Bobby, by the will of his mistress, Mrs. Kunegunda Kugler, is left $300 during his lifetime. Of course he hasn't got the money himself, for dogs can't use money; but it is held in trust for him. The will says nothing about his heirs, so probably the trustees will use the balance after Bobby's death. There are a good many people who would hasten the end.

UNITED AT LAST

BY

MISS M E BRADDON

CHAPTER XVIII—Continued.

For some minutes—three or four, perhaps, and so brief a space of time makes a longish pause in a critical situation—Gilbert Sinclair kept silence. Sir Cyprian, standing with his back against one end of the velvet-covered mantel-piece, waited with polite tranquillity. Not by a word or gesture did he attempt to hurry his guest.

"Look you here, Sir Cyprian," Gilbert began, at last, with savage abruptness. "If we had lived in the dueling days—the only days when Englishmen were gentlemen—I should have sent a friend to you to-night instead of coming myself, and the business might have been arranged in the easiest manner possible and settled decisively before breakfast to-morrow. But as our new civilization does not allow of that kind of thing, and as I haven't quite strong enough evidence to go into the divorce court, I thought it was better to come straight to you and give you fair warning of what you may expect in the future."

"Let us suppose that dueling is not an exploded custom. We have France and Belgium and a few other countries at our disposal if we should make up our minds to fight. But I should like to know the ground of our quarrel before we go into details."

"I am glad you are man enough to fight me," answered the other, savagely. "I don't think you can require to be told why I should like to kill you; or, if you have been in doubt about it up to this moment, you will know pretty clearly when I tell you that I saw jump off the balcony of my wife's summer-house this afternoon."

"I am sorry that unceremonious exit should offend you. I had no other way of getting back to Marchbrook in time for my train. I should have had to walk the whole width of Davenant Park and about a mile of high-road, if I had left by the summer-house door."

"And you think it a gentleman-like thing to be in my neighborhood for a fortnight, to avoid my house, and to meet my wife clandestinely in a lonely corner of my park?"

"There was no clandestine meeting. You insult your wife by such a supposition, and prove—if proof were needed of so obvious a fact—your unworthiness of such a wife. My visit to the summer-house was purely accidental. I heard Mrs. Sinclair singing—heard the bitter cry which grief—a mother's sacred grief—wrung from her in her solitude, and followed the impulse of the moment which prompted me to console a lady whom I knew and loved when she was a child."

"And afterwards, when she had ceased to be a child—a few months before she became my wife. Your attachment was pretty well known to the world in general, I believe. It was only I who was left in ignorance."

"You might easily have known what the world knew—all there was to be known—simply nothing."

"You deny that you have done me any wrong? that I have any right to ask you to fight me?"

"Most emphatically, and I most distinctly refuse to make a quarrel on any ground connected with your wife. But you will not find me slow to resent an insult should you be so ill-advised as to provoke me. As the friend of Constance Clanyarde I shall be ever ready to take up the cudgels for Constance Sinclair, even against her husband. Remember this, Mr. Sinclair, and remember that any wrong done to Lord Clanyarde's daughter will be a wrong that I shall revenge with all the power God has given me. She is not left solely to her husband's tender mercies."

Even the dull red hue faded from Gilbert Sinclair's cheeks as he confronted the indignant speaker, and left him livid to the very lips. There was a dampness on his forehead, too, when he brushed his large, strong hand across it.

"Is this man a craven?" thought Sir Cyprian, remarking these signs of agitation and fear.

"Well," said Sinclair, drawing a long breath. "I suppose there is no more to be said. You both tell the same story—an innocent meeting, not preconcerted—mere accident. Yes, you have the best of me this time. The unlucky husband generally has the worst of it. There's no dishonor in lying to him. He's out of court, poor beggar."

"Mr. Sinclair, do you want me to throw you out of that window?"

"I sh uldn't much care if you did."

There was a sullen misery in the answer and in the very look of the man as he sat there beside his enemy's hearth in the attitude of dull apathy, only looking up at intervals from his vacant stare at the fire, which touched Cyprian Davenant with absolute pity. Here was a man to whom Fate had given vast capabilities of happiness, and who had wantonly thrown away all that is fairest and best in life.

"Mr. Sinclair, upon my honor, I am sorry for you," he said, gravely. "Sorry for your incapacity to believe in a noble and pure-minded wife; sorry that you should poison your own life and your wife's by doubts that would never enter your mind if you had the power to understand her. Go home, and let your wife never know the wrong you have done her."

"My wife! What wife? I have no wife," said Sinclair," with a strange smile, rising and going to the door. "That's what some fellow says in a play, I think. Good-night, Sir Cyprian Davenant, and when next we meet I hope it may be on a better-defined footing."

He left the room without another word. Before Sir Cyprian's bell had summoned the smooth-faced valet, the street door shut with a bang, and Gilbert Sinclair was gone. Sir Cyprian heard the doors of the hansom clapped to, and the smack of the weary driver's whip, as the wheels rolled up the silent street.

"What did he mean by that speech about his wife?" wondered Sir Cyprian. "The man looked like a murderer!" He did not know that at this moment Gilbert Sinclair was half afraid that brutal blow of his might have been fate.

CHAPTER XIX.

MRS. WALSINGHAM BREAKS FAITH.

Christmas, which, in a common way, brings life and bustle, and the gathering of many guests to good old country houses, brought only gloom and solitude to Davenant. Mr. Sinclair's visitors had departed suddenly, at a single flight, like swallows before a storm in autumn. Mrs. Sinclair was very ill—seriously ill—mysteriously ill. Her dearest friends shook their heads and looked awful things when they talked of her. It was mental, they feared.

"Poor dear thing! This comes of Lord Clanyarde's greediness in getting rich husbands for all his daughters."

"The old man is a regular harpy," exclaimed Mrs. Millamount, with a charming indifference to detail.

And then these fashionable swallows skimmed away to fresh woods and pastures new—or rather fresh billiard-rooms and other afternoon teas, evening part songs and morning rides in rustic English lanes, where there is beauty and fragrance even in midwinter.

Constance had been missing at afternoon tea on the day of Gilbert's sudden journey to London, but her absence in the cozy morning-room where Mrs. Millamount amused the circle by the daring eccentricity of her discourse was hardly a subject of wonder.

"She has one of her nervous headaches, no doubt, poor child," said Mrs. Millamount, taking possession of the tea-tray; "she is just the kind of woman to have nervous headaches."

"I'll give long odds you don't have them," said Sir Thomas Houndslow, who was lolling with his back against the mantelpiece to the endangerment of the porcelain that adorned it.

"Never had headache but once in my life; and that was when I came a cropper in the Quorn country," replied Mrs. Millamount, graciously.

Vapors have given way to feminine athletics, and there is nothing now so dowdy or unfashionable as bad health.

When the dressing-bell rang and Miss Sinclair was still absent, Melanie Dupont began to think there was some cause for alarm. Her mistress was punctual and orderly in all her habits. She had gone to walk in the park immediately after luncheon, quite three hours ago. She had no idea of going beyond the park, Melanie knew, and she only wore her seal-skin jacket and a garden hat. She might have gone to Marchbrook, perhaps, in this careless attire, but not anywhere else, and her visits to Marchbrook were very rare.

Melanie was puzzled. She went down stairs and sent a couple of grooms in quest of her mistress. The gardeners had all gone home at 5 o'clock.

"You had better look in the summer-house by the fir plantation," said Melanie. "I know Mrs. Sinclair spends a deal of her time there."

The young men took the hint and went straight off to the summer-house together, too social to take different directions, as Melanie had told them to do. They had plenty to talk about—the way their master was going it, the bad luck which had attended his racing stable lately, and so on.

"I think there's a curse on them buildings at Newmarket," said one of the men. "We haven't pulled off so much as a beggarly plate since they was finished."

"There's a curse on buying half-breed colts," retorted the older and wiser servant. "There's where the curse is, Rogers—mistaken economy."

The classic temple was wrapped in darkness, and Rogers, who entered first, stumbled over the prostrate form of his mistress. She lay just as she had fallen at her husband's feet, felled by his savage blow.

The elder man got a light out of his fusee box, and then they lifted the senseless figure into a chair and looked at the white face on which there were ghastly streaks of blood. Mrs. Sinclair groaned faintly as they raised her from the ground, and this was a welcome sound, for they had almost thought her dead.

There were some flowers in a vase on the table, and the elder groom dipped a handkerchief in the water and dabbed it on Mrs. Sinclair's forehead.

"I wish I'd got a drop of spirit in my pocket," he said; "a sup of brandy might bring her round, perhaps. Look about if you can see anything in that way, Rogers."

Rogers looked, but alcohol being an unknown want to Mrs. Sinclair there was no convenient bottle to be found in the summer-house. She murmured something inarticulate, and the locked lips loosened and trembled faintly as the groom bathed her forehead.

"Poor thing, she must have had a fit," said the elder man.

"Apocalyptic, perhaps," suggested Rogers.

"We'd better carry her back to the house between us. She's only a feather-weight, poor little thing."

So the two grooms conveyed Mrs. Sinclair gently and carefully back to Davenant, and contrived to carry her up to her room by the servants' staircase without letting all the house into the secret.

"If it was a fit, she won't like it talked about," said the head groom to the housekeeper, as he refreshed himself with a glass of Glenlivet after his exertions.

"Master's gone up to London, too," said the housekeeper; "that makes it awkward, don't it? I should think somebody ought to telegraph."

Melanie Duport took charge of her mistress with a self-possession that would have done credit to an older woman.

She sent off at once for Dr. Webb, who came post-haste to his most important patient.

The Doctor found his patient weak and low, and her mind wandering a little. He was much puzzled by that contusion on the fair forehead, but Constance could give him no explanation.

"I think I fell," she said. "It was kind of him to come to me, wasn't it, for the love of old times!"

"It must have been a very awkward fall," said Dr. Webb to Melanie. "Where did it happen?"

Melanie explained how her mistress had been found in the summer-house.

"She must have fallen against some piece of furniture, something with a blunt edge. It was an awful blow. She is very low, poor thing. The system has received a severe shock."

And then Dr. Webb enjoined the greatest of care, and questioned Melanie as to her qualifications for the post of nurse. Mrs. Sinclair was not to be left all night, and some one else must be got to-morrow to relieve Melanie. It was altogether a serious case.

Gilbert Sinclair returned next morning, haggard and gloomy, looking like a man who had spent a night at the gaming table with fortune steadily adverse to him. He met Dr. Webb in the hall, and was told that his wife was seriously ill.

"Not in danger?" he asked, eagerly.

"Not in immediate danger."

"I thank God for that."

It seemed a small thing to be thankful for, since the surgeon's tongue was not very hopeful, but Gilbert Sinclair had been weighed down by the apprehension of something worse than this. He found James Wyatt alone in the billiard-room, and learned from him that his guests were already on the wing.

Three days later and Mr. Wyatt had also left Davenant, but not for good. He had promised to run down again in a week or so, and to cheer his dear friend, who, although always treating him more or less de haut en bas, allowed him to see pretty plainly that he was indispensable to his patron's contentment. And your modern Umbra will put up with a good deal of snubbing when he knows his patron is under his thumb.

THE SAME GIRL.

Just Returned with His Bride He Meets a Sympathetic Old Friend.

"Hello, Jack, old boy! Haven't met you in a month."

"No; I just returned from the country with my bride."

"Really? Shake. My congratulations. Come—I'll open a small bottle in her honor. She wasn't a Squedunk girl, where we summered last year, was she?"

"Exactly. You left in July. I lost my heart in August."

"Ah, you old rascal! Well, here's to the bride! Drink hearty. Great town, that Squedunk; full of awfully jolly girls; some of them great flirts too."

"Ah?"

"At least I found them so. I had no end of fiancees, so to speak—sometimes meeting two or three on the same evening by appointment. It was great sport. You see, a man has to go a long way around among so many girls at a summer resort. But they were charmers—no mistake."

"Yes; I found them so."

"And so deuced sentimental, too, by Jove! I remember one in particular—a hazel-eyed blonde with a bewitching air. Gad! She would actually hug herself into hysterics. And such kisses—waow! We used to wander over the lovely mountain paths by moonlight till midnight. A dear girl, too; forgotten her name. Guess you didn't meet her. Let me see—it was Lottie somebody——"

How Rogues Divide.

A band of professional forgers, says Detective Robert A. Pinkerton, before starting out always agree on a basis of division of all moneys obtained on their forgery paper. This division might be about as follows: For a presenter where the amount to be drawn does not exceed $2,000, 15 to 25 per cent.; but where the amount to be drawn is from $3,000 to $5,000 and upwards, the "presenter" receives from 35 to 45 per cent. The price is raised as the risk increases, and it is generally considered a greater risk to attempt to pass a check or draft of a large denomination than a smaller one. The middleman gets from 15 to 25 per cent. His work is more and his responsibility is greater, but the risk is less. There are plenty of middlemen to be had, but the "presenters" are scarce. The "shadow," when one accompanies the band, is sometimes paid a salary by the middleman and his expenses, but at other times he is allowed a small percentage, not to exceed 5 per cent., and his expenses, as with ordinary care his risk is very slight. The backer and forger get the balance, which usually amounts to from 50 to 60 per cent. The expenses that have been advanced the men who go out on the road are usually deducted at the final division.

Odd Superstitions About Animals.

If a white pigeon settles on a chimney it bodes death to some one in the house, while no one can die on a bed or pillow containing pigeons' feathers. According to legend the lion's whelp is born dead and remains dead three days, when the father breathes on it and it receives life. A spider inclosed in a quilt and hung about the neck will cure ague, and if worn in a nutshell will cure fever. Three hairs plucked from the cross marked on an ass' back will cure whooping cough. The pelican feeds its young with its own blood. If you count the number of fish you have caught you will catch no more that day. Applying three of the dog's hairs to a dog bite prevents any evil consequences. To meet a frog is an indication that you are about to receive money. A cow will go dry if the milkmaid neglects to wash her hands after milking. Bees will never thrive if you quarrel with them or about them, and they will forsake their hive if not put in mourning at the death of one of the family.

To Drain a Sea.

The royal commission, presided over by M. Lely, Minister of the Waterstaat, which has long been studying the scheme for the draining and reclamation of the Zuyder Zee, has concluded its labors. Twenty-one members out of the twenty-six composing the commission recommended that the projected work be carried out.

It is proposed to reclaim from the sea about 450,000 acres, the value of which is estimated at 326,000,000 guilders. The cost of this immense work is computed at 189,000,000 guilders, or, with the accumulated expenditure, including measures of defense and the payment of compensation to the fishermen of the Zee, at 315,000,000 guilders. The drainage is to be carried out by means of a sea dike from Northern Holland into Friesland. The commission is unanimous in recommending that the work should be executed by the state.—London Times.

A Boom in the Holy Land.

The East is really waking up. The railroad from Jerusalem to Jaffa is to be extended to Nablus and Gaza, and there is a project on foot for the establishment of a line of steamers on the Dead Sea. The intention is to bring the rich produce of Moab across the sea in a few hours instead of carrying it, as now, around the north and south end of the sea by caravan, a trip of four or five days' duration. The next we hear will probably be news of an uprising on the part of the camel drivers against the innovation which is to take the bread and dates out of their mouths.

A Bridge that Has Killed 22 Men.

In Roseville, N. J., a man named Boylan has a private footbridge over the tracks of the Morris and Essex Railroad. Since its erection it has been the cause of the death of twenty-two men. The last victim was George Garrison, a brakeman, who was killed by being crushed between the roof of a car and the bridge lately.

LONDON has only one death per year where it used to have four. The great falling off in mortality is due to the better drainage recently introduced.

MAJ. GEN. SCHOFIELD.

The Man Who Holds the Highest Position in the United States Army.

The calling of the regular army troops to the scene of the recent railroad strike draws special attention to Maj. Gen. Schofield, who holds the highest position in the army, having an authority second only to that of President.

John McAllister Schofield was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., in 1831. He was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1853 and was assigned to duty in South Carolina and Florida. He also held positions as a teacher in important educational institutions. At the opening of the civil war he entered the volunteer service as Major of the First Missouri Volunteers and was appointed chief of staff to Gen. Nathaniel Lyon. He held one important military position after another, and in 1864 was assigned to the command of the Army of the Ohio. With Gen. Sherman he engaged in the Atlanta campaign in Georgia, and when the latter started for the sea Schofield was in Tennessee. Here and in other places Schofield showed himself a gallant soldier and won the admiration of all.

He was present at the surrender of Johnston's army in 1865, and was charged with the duty of carrying out certain details of the capitulation. Schofield succeeded Edwin M. Stanton as Secretary of War in 1868, and held that office for a year, when he was appointed major general in the United States army. He is at present senior major general, and will be retired next year, as he will at that time reach the age limit.

STEAM TREE-FELLING.

Machine Recently Designed in England to Do the Work.

Tree-felling by means other than manual labor has been an engaging subject to many inventors, and for some time past a more or less interesting array of appliances designed to accomplish it has been paraded before the readers of mechanical journals, says Cassell's Magazine. One of the more recent of these machines, brought out in England by Allen Ransome, of Chelsea, reminds one very much in appearance of the now so familiar rock drill—the drill proper, of course, being supplanted by a reciprocating saw blade, substantially in the manner shown in the accompanying sketch. The piston to which the saw blade is attached works in a cylinder of small diameter but rather long stroke, pivotally supported on a pair of wheels, so that the whole arrangement is readily portable. Steam is intended to be supplied to the machine from a portable boiler through a long steam hose, so that the boiler can remain in one place until the machine has felled all the trees within a considerable circle around it, the space cleared, of course, depending upon the length of the hose. Cutting down a tree, however, is not the only function to which the machine is limited. By partially rotating it on its axis the saw can be set to cut in a vertical direction, or at any angle between the horizontal and vertical positions, so that after having been felled a tree may be quickly cut up into desired lengths. It generally happens that when a large tree falls it does not lie flat, as its branches hold the upper part of its trunk from the ground, and in order to squarely cross-cut trees lying in such a position it is necessary to incline the saw somewhat from a vertical line. This is readily done by the adjusting capacity just mentioned.

Old Shoes.

What becomes of old shoes? The Shoe and Leather Reporter tells us that vast quantities are taken to mills, where they are ground into fine dust. To this is added about forty per cent. of india-rubber, and the whole is then subjected to a pressure of 6,000 to 10,000 pounds per square foot. The substance is then colored, and sold at prices some fifty per cent. below that of natural leather. It is manifestly a poor substance, and it is wholly wanting in fiber.

Curious Old Sign.

Probably the only sign in Pennsylvania bearing an authentic portrait of Captain Lawrence of the old Chesapeake, and undoubtedly one of the oldest in the country, adorns the front of the tavern of Abraham Wolf, at East Petersburg, a few miles north of Lancaster. It was only lately repainted, and beneath the features of the gallant naval hero stand out his famous dying words, "Don't give up the ship."

Aluminum.

Experiments are being conducted at the armory in Springfield, Mass., in the use of aluminum for the bayonet scabbards for the new rifle. While the metal works well in bending and is about fifty per cent. lighter than the steel scabbards, no satisfactory method has been devised for soldering the edges together.

A Case of Spellography.

Thomas and John were two brothers in the same class, and they were not the brightest boys in school, although they were not as dull as some.

"How do you spell your name, John?" asked the teacher as a feeler on the first day.

"J-o-h-n," responded John, with pride.

"Right; and now, Thomas, spell yours."

"T-o-h-m-a-s," responded Thomas, with as much pride as John had shown.

"Oh, no; that isn't right," corrected the teacher. "Try again."

Thomas made several tries, and always the same. Then the teacher scolded him a little.

"Well," he said at last, "if J-o-h-n spells John, why don't T-o-h-m-a-s spell Thomas?" And the teacher hasn't been able yet to explain clearly why it doesn't.

Beats the Calliope.

A new musical instrument is the outcome of many years of hard thinking by a Swedish electrician and musician. There is a frame and on it are hung a score of tuned bells, a series of steel bars struck by metallic hammers, a row of steel strings of necessary tension, a xylophone and a fraudulent bagpipe, made out of a bar of steel, and an electric current.

Velocity of Light.

The light from the sun reaches the earth in seven and one-half minutes, though the distance is such that a cannon ball fired from the sun and continuing its velocity unabated would require more than seventeen years to reach the earth.

What Ails You?

If you have sudden darting pains in the joints or muscles, and it recurs every time you get cold, and appears in new places without leaving any old ones, the best thing to do this is to send five dollars to the Daummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, for a month's treatment of Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism. They will send you two large bottles of their remedy by return express. If you have the above symtoms you have the Rheumatism, and should begin at once with the known cure. Delay with any disease is dangerous—with Rheumatism, it is simply suicidal. Agents wanted 30

THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....JULY 26, 1894.

Now let congress make more stringent laws against the immigration of worthless foreigners.

SATURDAY the House of representatives passed a bill looking to such changes in the constitution as would enable the states to choose senators by a direct vote of the people.

A REPUBLIC has been proclaimed for the Sandwich Islands. This was done July 4, and will probably end an annoying struggle in which at one time the United States came near being involved.

MAN at Muncie, last week drank two gallons of water on a wager. The funeral was held two days later. Some Muncie people are not used to water as a beverage, and experiments of this kind, will work disester on their large republican majority

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE Wm. Seely will sell the personal property of the late Philander Smith, at auction, at the late home of deceased, a mile east of Newville on Saturday, August 25. A great variety of articles will be sold including cabinet maker's tools, farm implements etc. 30-33

IT IS CERTAIN that the strike threw out of employment a hundred times as many innocent working people, both men and women, as it would have slightly benefited had it succeeded. As it did not succeed in benefiting a single person, some other way should be devised for settling labor troubles.

SPENCER, pension agent at Indianapolis, says 1406 new pensioners have been placed on the rolls in this state alone during the past year. As this is under a democratic administration which republican editors say hates the soldier, we respectfully ask them to explain how it has happened.

PEOPLE who do not read the COURIER are just finding out that steel is cheaper than ordinary iron, or at least most of the grades of steel are. Several years ago, republicans started in to call attention to this and claimed that the blessed tariff was what made it cheaper. We undertook at the time to explain that it was improved methods and scientific discoveries that enabled them to produce steel cheaper than iron. In fact, the metal is now made into cheap steel first, and must undergo an additional process before it becomes good iron.

A MEMBER of the New York legislature has been arrested for smuggling 100,000 pounds of wool into the country. The duty would have been $12,000 or about 12 cents a pound. Now we want to ask the few republican editors who are starting up again the old assertion that the foreigner pays the tax. how it came that the foreigner did not advance this $12,000 and save the honorable member from committing a crime? Besides, if the foreigner pays it, why need the government arrest this man? Why not arrest the foreigner fsr refusing to pay?

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S letter to Congressman Wilson, the author of the house tariff bill, will be found on our inside pages. It is a ringing letter and contains a great deal of truth. But as it scores the senate, many of the senators are very angry about it. They are the ones that have already delayed the bill so much. In fact, they are really republicans so far as a tariff is concerned, and they may be able to prevent all tariff legislation. It is hoped, however, that some bill better than the present McKinley bill will be passed.

Good Words for Cline.

We copy the following complimentary notice from the Fremont, Steuben county, Eagle, an independent paper. It is a neat compliment to our candidate for Judge:

"In the nomination of Cyrus Cline for Circuit Judge the democratic convention probably made the best selection possible. Mr. Cline is 41 years of age, and is well and favorably known in this county. He was for several years County Superintendent of schools. As it is claimed by many republicans that Mr. Penfield was not by any means the choice of his party it will be no surprise to us if Mr. Cline is elected by a good majority."

Our Critics.

It is very touching to see the deep and very disinterested sympathy that several democratic editors feel for the editor of this paper. And the newer and fresher they are to the political atmosphere of the Twelfth district, the deeper and more disinterested (?) is the sympathy they appear to feel, and the freer and greater in volume is their advice. We are sorry to admit—but a love of truth compels—that we are illy prepared to appreciate this unexpected gush of sympathy, or to accept so generous an amount of unsought advice. And besides, it is all devoted to a subject scarcely worth the time and waste of heartstrings they are devoting to it. It is all about "McNagny," the man at present engaged in the herculean task of drawing the Congressional stipend that belongs to the Twelfth Indiana District. We say the subject is hardly worth a discussion. Still, we suppose these worthy gentlemen would like to talk about it through their papers. It would seem as if the proper persons to be considered, whose advice would be considered valuable to a newspaper man in DeKalb county, would be the intelligent democrats of DeKalb county. Of these, we have talked with many, and we feel free to say, that in opposing McNagny we speak their sentiments fully. They know the sentiment of their neighbors and so on over the county, a matter on which these outside critics are profoundly ignorant. And we have reasons to know the feeling against McNagny exists to as great an extent all over the district. Our critics cannot help but know this as to their own localities, and we know it as to ours. Why then should they take so great an interest in it? Especially why should they take so great an intesest in the editor of this paper? The editor of this paper has been closely identified with the democratic party for twenty-five years, and knows the condition of the party here better than does any other man. This is not a boast. It is a fact, stated without any feeling or prejudice against anyone. A great majority of the influential democrats of DeKalb county are opposed to McNagny, while of the few who are really his friends, the greater part are men with little or no influence—men who could not control votes if they tried. So it will be seen that we are talking for the democrats of DeKalb county. And we know what we are talking about. We have other interests here besides congressional interests. But what do these critics care for that? If they want McNagny to go in and be defeated, and possibly work injury to many local candidates, let it be done. We can stand it. But we wish our position to be fully understood, that we may wash our hands of any evil consequences. And we wish to be placed on record as believing that the interests of the whole party are of more value than the interests of any ONE of its members. There is but one other word we care to say, and we care little for that. It is in reply to the very ungenerous allusions these critics make as to our motives. We do not care what opinion they have as to the motives. All action is based on some motive. And if the failure to receive a favor makes it wrong to oppose a man, then the success in obtaining a similar favor is just as wrong a motive on which to base one's action. A man who objects to shabby treatment has as worthy a motive as he who fawns cringingly on the one from whom he has received all he asked. Each is to a certain extent selfish. The former has the advantage of retaining his independence of spirit, while the latter loses it, and in losing it, loses what influence he would have had under other circumstances.

FOR AUDITOR OF STATE.

The Only Democratic Candidate From Marion County.

[From Indianapolis Sentinel, July 17, 1894.]

Joseph T. Fanning has announced his candidacy for State Auditor on the Democratic ticket. He enjoys the distinction of being the only candidate from Marion County, the largest county in the state. Such a thing is unique and has probably never before occurred in the history of Indiana politics. He is making his campaign in a quiet, gentlemanly way, saying nothing but good words for other candidates, and merely speaking for himself. Marion County is conceded to in the convention, for here, where he is best known, it is recognized that by education and practical experience he is eminently qualified to acceptably fill the office. Mr. Fanning was born on a farm in Ohio, thirty-six years ago, though the most of his life has been passed in Indiana. He possesses a good education, has a large acquaintance, and is deservedly one of the brightest and most popular of the young Democrats in the State. For several years he was employed in the office of the Auditor of the Belt Railroad, this city. He was Deputy Clerk and then Clerk of the city of Indianapolis. In 1885 he was Assistant Clerk of the House of the Indiana Legislature. Subsequently he served as deputy under County Auditor Taggart. From this position he took service under Auditor of State Henderson as Chief Deputy nearly four years ago, which position he still occupies. For many years he has been prominent as a worker and leader among the Marion County Democrats.

Free and Partial Scholarships.

For years past the Chicago Musical College has assisted hundreds of deserving pupils who had no means of obtaining a musical education, and for the coming year this institution will again issue fifteen Free and one hundred Partial Scholarships in the different departmen to talented and deserving pupils who are unable to pay for a music education.

Applicants must register on or before August first of each year, and must come well recommended by the pastor of their church, or the principal of the school they are attending. It is necessary that the applicant possesses exceptional musical talent and be otherwise entitled to the advantages offered. 30

"What is Beauty?"—Question of a Blind Man!

Replied Aristotle. But Mrs. Sherwood says that it is "dynamite" in her article which opens the interesting pages of the July Cosmopolitan. Beauty is always a fascinating subject, and Mrs. Sherwood's discussion is an especially interesting one. That the Jniy Cosmopolitan is a midsummer number shown in many directions. Three short stories, including one of sport and adventure, two travel articles, and other light matter, make up 128 pages of charming summer reading. The July Cosmopolitan marks the close of the first year since the revolutionary announcement was made that the price of that magazine, already low, had been cut to one-half of three dollars a year. All sorts of predictions have come to be unfulfilled during the year—it would be impossible to maintain the rate—the quality would be lowered—the size would be decreased. But even severe critics admit that with each succeeding number there has been a betterment in the quality of articles and illustrations, and the size has remained unchanged, except the always growing advertising pages. The magazine printed, for the six months embraced in Volume XVI, one million four hundred and nineteen thousand copies, an entirely unapproached record, and has doubled its already large plant of presses and binding machinery. The walls of the magazine's new home are rapidly rising at Irvington on the Hudson Artistically designed by McKim, Mead & White, the new building, with its eight great porticos, will be 279 feet long by 76 feet wide, and one of the most perfectly lighted buildings in the world, having 160 large windows, each nearly double the size of the ordinary window opening.

The Haughty Tramp.

One morning last week, a stout, red-faced tramp called at the residence of A. J. Ralston, and asked Mrs. Ralston who went to the door, for something to eat, making a special request for coffee. The family were then at breakfast and Mrs. Ralston told him if he would sit down on the steps and wait a little she thought she could give him the coffee, and would have a lunch for him anyway. He sat down and waited, as it was a pleasant place, at the rear end of the house. When the family had finished their meal, she got a good cup of coffee, a generous piece of good steak, several slices of toast some bread and plenty o butter. It was a lunch that might tempt any man. The daughter Helen, took it to the door where the man sat waiting and with a courteous greeting held it out to him. But he drew himself up, with a stern manner, saying, "Madam, I would not be seen eating here on the steps for five dollars." The young lady fairly gasped for breath at the fellow's effrontery and took the breakfast back into the dining room. The man went his way. There are tramps, and tramps, and if one could only know which is deserving, it would be a satisfaction to bestow charity. But how does one know, whether he is or is not offering a meal to some Spanish count from Dublin, who is temporarily stranded and expects you to invite him into the parlor and then have the daughter play the piano while he retires into the dining room to enjoy your hospitality. This is the most perplexing social question that now confronts the ordinary citizen. The man above noted, may have been a "general" in some of the Coxey armies. Who can tell?

The Great Strike of 1877.

The great railroad strike of July, 1877, has been vividly recalled by the present troubles in Chicago and throughout the country. When the strike, which was inaugurated in Pittsburg, Pa., spread to the west the railroad men in the employ of the Lake Shore at Elkhart laid down their tools and conductors, brakemen and switchmen left their duties, effectually tying up the road for several days, not a train passing Goshen carrying passengers, but an occasional freight passed over the line to relieve the monotony. On July 30 the strike reached its highest point of excitement in this section and mobs were formed at South Bend and Elkhart, bent on destroying not only railroad property but manufactories and private possessions. The situation in Goshen is remembered as one of the most trying since the days of the rebellion, and many stories are told of the stagnation of business and fears of the people during the trouble.—Ex.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Eva Christie is plaintiff and Allen Andrews and Sarah E. Andrews are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two thousand seven hundred seventy-nine dollars and eight cents ($2,779.08) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on Saturday, August 4, 1894,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the court house of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section one (1) in township thirty-three (33) north, range twelve (12) east. Also all that part of the east half of said northeast quarter of section one (1) township and range aforesaid, that lies north of the right of way of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific railroad (Bel River Division) and the west bank of Little Cedar Creek, excepting one and one-fourth (1¼) acres of land from said last described parcel heretofore sold and deeded to Mary Ann Carper by George Clark by deed dated March 24, 1874, all situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

GEORGE C. RALSTON,
Sheriff of DeKalb county.

By R. Blum, Deputy.
Auburn, Indiana, July 11, 1894.
Thomas L. Graves, Attorney for Plaintiff.

Ashley All Right.

The Ashley Time last week says the strike is over as for as Ashley is concerned. But few of the strikers are taken back but are now out of work and feel blue. The Times hits Debs in the following style:

—The trial of Conductor Agler for contempt of court at Indianapolis, last Thursday, resulted in a continuance. The court heard the evidence and continued the case until the 17th of September for argument of counsel and decision. Mr. Deb's A. R. U. never lifted a hand or offered any service in behalf of Mr. Agler, but left him to the mercy of strangers. The Knights of Pythias secured bondsmen and attorney and we think he has no need to fear the result. We hear men on every side condemning Debs and his order for he succeeded in getting them into trouble and as elsewhere deserts them in their calamity.

He had his troubles growing out of the strike, as well as others. Two of the cars burned at Chicago were loaded with lumber for him. But he did not have to bear the loss. Wednesday he went to Montgomery to load a car there.

EVERGREEN CEMETERY is incorporated under the laws of Indiana for the purpose of keeping the grounds in repair. The directors are authorized to make assessments against lots and to collect the same either by suit against owners or by advertising and selling lots. As all lot owners are equally interested in keeping the grounds in order at as little expense as possible it is desired that all pay when due without waiting to be notified. A penalty of ten percent is added to all deliquents and must be collected. The directors have extended the time for payment to July 1, and all payments made prior to July 30th, will be treated as having been paid June 30. 28-30 F. E. DAVENPORT, Secretary.

Pearl Kelley reached here Friday evening over the Wabash, completing the trip she started to make July 2, when the train was stopped in St. Louis by the strike. The original ticket on which she had gone from Omaha to St. Louis and then back home, was renewed for the trip over again, but she had to pay the pullman sleeper the second time of course. She will remain with the COURIER family for an extended visit.

Dr. Buchtel has been called to his old home, Ligonier, several times lately for advice and assistance in the treatment of of his brother, a young man of about eighteen. Either from accidental poisoning or some disease of the blood, or some local injury, the young man has been having serious trouble with both hands. So serious is it, that the flesh seems decaying to the bones and sloughing off. A number of eminent physicians have the case in charge and so far have not been able to get the disease under control, and great fears are entertained that he will lose his hands. At latest reports he seemed a little better.

Many men think that newspaper men are presistent dunners, says an exchange. By way of comparison let us suppose that a farmer raises 1,000 bushels of wheat a year, and sells it to 1,000 persons in all parts of the country, a great portion of them saying: "I will hand you a dollar in a short time." The farmer does not want to be thought small, and says all right. Soon the 1,000 bushels are gone but he has nothing to show for it, and he then realizes that he has fooled away his whole crop and its value to him is due him in a thousand little driblets, consequently he is seriously embarrassed in his business, because his debtors, each owing him one dollar, treat it as a small matter and think it would not help much. Continue this kind of business year in and year out as the publisher does, how long would he stand it? A moment's thought will convince anyone that a publisher has cause for persisting dunning.—Ex.

Honored the Pastor.

The congregation of the Germon Lutheran church met at the parsonage Tuesday evening, and had a reception in honor of the pastor and his bride. Rev. F. Keller, was united in marriage to Miss Ema Felgenhouer, at Racine, Wis., July 11, and returning, they reached here Friday evening. It was to show their respect and love for their pastor, and to welcome his bride, that the members and friends met them as above mentioned. All had an enjoyable time. And besides, there was the band, which added greatly to the pleasures of the occasion. It was Sheets' band, and congregation wish to express their thanks for their coming. Altogether the occasion will always be pleasant in the memory of those who attended.

Waterloo Opera House Burned.

Tuesday afternoon, as the eastbound train at 3 o'clock went through it is supposed a spark fired the roof of the Opera House, which stands near the track, and across the street from the Locke Hotel. It was soon a blaze, and all efforts to save it failed. On the second floor, were a part of the equipments of the militia company, including a few of their rifles, and many suits of everyday clothes the boys had left there when they started for Hammond. By hard work the saloon west, the Robinson livery barn east and Locke Hotel across north, were saved though somewhat damaged by heat. The loss on the Opera House is put at $2,000; insured $600. The other losses are fully insured. The fire department worked manfully. A part of the water had to be obtained from the Lake Shore hydrant. Will Leas makes a good formean, and the bucket brigade covered itself with glory, for without them the battle might have gone against us.

Base Ball.

We had almost forgotten there was such a thing as the "national game," This week a correspondent from Newville calls attention to the great game between the Newville nine and the Butler nine. It took place last Friday July 20.

"The game was called at 3 and upwards' and was between the 'Jolly Tars' of Butler and the 'Spearheads' of Newville. On account of heavy dew and a water spout by the name of Stokes, backed up by Ben. Stiefel, the game was stopped after three innings apiece, when the score stood 8 to 0 in favor of Newville. It was a very pleasant game, not a loud word was spoken except by the umpire, Mr. Baxter. Everything was as pleasant as if one were at a funeral with the exception that you could see the ball pass back and forth. Once in a while, the whistle from a passing engine would drawn the noise that the Butler boys were 'about to make.' No kids were allowed closer than the catcher. Not a boy said a word only when their flytraps opened. For gentility, Butler takes the cake. The next game they play is with Orangeville." ***

Lightning Did It.

In the sharp storm that crossed the north part of the county last Friday forenoon, the Evangelical church in Waterloo was struck by lightning. It hit the spire and ran down the belfry and tower, but did not set the building on fire. It was a close call and the families who live near by "heard all about it." W. H. Leas also reports that the barn of John Kiplinger on the farm next east of the one he recently bought out east of Waterloo, was hit in the same storm and burned to the ground, as was also a straw stack on the farm next north of that.

THE illustrated press scored a high point in the recent capture, in the Argentine Republic, of the notorious English swindler, Jabez Balfour. An Englishman at Salta, Argentine, saw in the London Penny Illustrated Paper a picture of Balfour, and promptly recognized the original in a new arrival calling himself Samuel Butler. He communicated with the British Consul, and Balfour's arrest followed. The smartest detectives had failed to get track of the absconder.

OKLAHOMA is rapidly becoming of importance agriculturally. Her latest statistics show nearly 2,400,000 acres of farm land in use, with a cash value of more than $13,000,000. Her farm implements are worth $340,000 and she has growing 683,000 apple trees, 648,000 peach trees, 69,000 cherry trees, 51,000 pear trees, and a great variety of other fruit trees and of vines. The whole Territory is adapted to fruit raising, and Oklahoma fruit will doubtless soon appear in the New York markets. This is doing well for a four-year-old.

THIS country will not feel envious toward Mexico if a certain element in our population should be attracted to the sister republic. A treaty between China and Mexico has been drawn which provides that Chinese immigrants in Mexico shall have all rights and privileges accorded to natives. It is thought that this concession will not only attract large numbers from China, but will also lead many Celestials in the United States to migrate to Mexico. In the latter case, both Mexico and the United States should be congratulated.

AN exchange says that a rediscovery of the mine worked by De Soto and his followers three hundred years ago has probably been found. W. C. Padget, a man who operates a sawmill in the mountains of Georgia, has discovered some relics in the shape of stone mortar and other implements. He secured the services of an old mining engineer to inspect the place. In one of the excavations they found the spur of a quartz vein, in which there was a considerable quantity of gold. The old engineer said that it was a valuable find, and believes it is the exact spot where De Soto and his followers located and mined for gold and silver three hundred years ago.

A LONG and flattering invitation signed by an extensive list of prominent Americans has been sent to Mr. Gladstone urging him to visit this country. The invitation is a deserved compliment to the Grand Old Man, but the signers can hardly have contemplated the remotest possibility that he will accept it. It is utterly beyond the bounds of probability. Mr. Gladstone is a bad sailor and dreads the ocean. Even if he were a good sailor, he is a very old man and has many of the infirmities which accompany old age. Twenty years ago such an invitation might have been accepted by him, but it is now too late to expect him to cross the Atlantic and then endure lionizing over 3,000 miles of land, since Canada as well as the United States would claim him. The invitation will be a graceful souvenir which he will prize, but that he will accept it is hopeless.

INCIDENTAL good from the coal strike can hardly be thought a compensation for the enormous waste and misery caused by such an unfortunate complication. The ill wind may not be looked upon as anything but ill, but perhaps it might be endured with more patience if it resulted, as it promises, in compelling the railroads to use anthracite coal on a larger number of their trains. Soft coal is an unmitigated nuisance on a passenger engine, and its use can only be pardoned where hard coal cannot be obtained or where traffic is so light as to render the expense prohibitory. Many railroads which formerly used soft coal altogether were forced to use hard coal on a few passenger trains, and the comfort of the public was thereby greatly increased. The patrons of a line, once accustomed to freedom from cinders and smoke, will hardly permit a return to the old methods. It is to be hoped that the strike will contribute something to the education of the railroads and people in this direction.

DR. WALTER KEMPSTER, who was one of the government experts in the Guiteau trial, has made a sensational statement relative to the insanity of the assassin of President Garfield. It has always been claimed that the prosecution in the Guiteau case was merciless and that the resources of the government were combined to take his life, justifiably or not. Dr. Kempster states that so far from the truth is this assertion the government instructed its own experts to find Guiteau insane if possible, in order that it should not go into history that a President of the United States had been shot in time of peace by a responsible man. Each expert studied Guiteau for himself, and without knowleege of the conclusion reached by any of his colleagues. Dr. Kempster further alleges that after his death competent and disinterested examination by two specialists showed that the brain of the assassin was free from symptoms of insanity. Dr. Kempster's statement ought to put at rest the widely held belief that there was vindictiveness on the part of the Federal prosecution toward the wretch who inflicted upon the history of the United States so foul a blot.

No Way Out of It.

Judge Bellinger, of the United States district court of Oregon, has decided, in the case of a Chinese woman, who desired to land to join her husband whom she had never seen, that a betrothal at the age of two years, and a marriage six months ago, by sewing together two cards on which the particulars of the engagement had been written, was a valid marriage according to the laws of China, and must be recognized by the United States. In rendering this decision Judge Bellinger said he was aware of the danger of imposition in such cases, but added that such danger exists in all cases where Chinese are landed and must continue to exist until exclusion is made absolute.

ART OF BALL-TOSSING

THE STAR NEW YORK PITCHER TELLS ABOUT IT.

He Writes of His "Inshoots," "Outs" and "Drops"—An Accurate Eye Is Most Important—Studying the Bateman's Weak Points.

Ambition of Boys.

It is safe to say that one of the ambitions of the average American youth is to become a scientific pitcher, writes Lester P. German, the star New York ball tosser. Mind you, I do not imply that they all want to shine as professional pitchers and to adopt base-ball as a professon and as a means of earning a livelihood, but they want to be pitchers. Why? you ask; and I answer, "I don't know." It must be in the air.

LESTER P. GERMAN.

It will be well, I think, to state the requisites of a pitcher in their order and then to illustrate these requisites by a cursory look at the development of the game. The pitcher must be a strong man physically—that is, he must take care of his health. It is no exaggeration to say that the best pitchers go into training on the scale that Sullivan, Corbett and Mitchell did for their bouts.

The next thing is a good eye. The accurate measurement of distance is half the battle. Thirdly, the pitcher must stand the right distance from the home plate. Good delivery is not possible when the plate is too far.

The Star Position.

I started in to say that it is the ambition of every boy to be a pitcher; that is, every boy who is physically able to play the game. Every boy wants to play base-ball, and most of them do so at some time in their lives. Now, the pitcher is the star position on a team, and naturally most people "want to occupy the center of the stage," so to speak. Much depends upon a pitcher, and a team otherwise strong, with a weak pitcher, cannot expect to win many games, and a championship never.

AN IN CURVE.

A pitcher should acquire a springy step. This is an easy matter if a man practices a little. Learn to move all the toes freely. Thus swift delivery is neutralized. There are, of course, many things that can only be learned from experience, such as the proper way to act in understanding signals. The evolution of the pitcher furnishes an interesting study not only to the athlete, but to the scientist. In the days of the old Knickerbockers, when enough runs were made to make a baseball score look like a cricket match, the pitcher was not such an important individual as he is to-day. In those days an underhand sort of delivery was used, and even long after that it was not an unusual thing for a team to score 100 runs in a game.

THE OUT DROP.

Afterward the pitcher was allowed more license, the overhand delivery came in, and this made even more effective the curve, which learned men of science had said was an impossibility. Even after a public exhibition was held and a pitcher sent the curves between two posts, the scientists argued that it was an optical illusion, sticking to their original idea that it was physically impossible for a man to cause a globe to curve in the air. But it was done then, and it is now accomplished by thousands of pitchers.

Pitching comes natural to some players, just as catching does to others, outfield work to others, and infield work to the remainder. To become a successful pitcher a man or boy must have something besides brute force. The day when speed alone would make a reputation for a pitcher is past. To be a strategic pitcher today a twirler must have speed, a perfect command of the ball, and puzzling curves. Another thing which I find of material advantage to me is in studying the weak points in the batsmen who face me. Some batsmen can hit one sort of a ball and they can't hit another, and it is to a pitcher's interest to find out all these little things and utilize them accordingly.

THE OUT CURVE.

There is another point in pitching which beginners should study and that is the position of the feet and hands. A pitcher whose feet get in his way can never expect to become famous as a green diamond twirler. Then a pitcher who allows the batsman to see the ball all the time is at a disadvantage. Of course, the rules will not permit one to hold the ball behind the back before delivering it, as was the case years ago, but if one is blessed with large hands, large palms being plentiful in baseball, it is an easy matter to conceal the ball, or practically so.

Nursing the Arm.

Now as to training—a particularly important duty for a pitcher. A pitcher's arm—that is, his pitching arm—is his stock in trade. He must watch that arm as carefully as a mother does her babe. Most pitchers cover the arm with a sweater or coat when they are not pitching, while others wear flannel bandages upon their arms and shoulders.

Concerning training, moreover, I can say nothing that anyone does not know who has made a study of physical culture. All that is essential is to observe the rules of health and to expand the chest and lungs. A player in active training will find hand-ball an excellent exercise, as it develops all the muscles. Bowling is also a favorite pastime of mine in the winter and spring, as I find that knocking down the tenpins keeps my arm good and strong all the time. A pitcher should be careful about using his full strength in the early spring games. The bones and muscles act contrary, particularly on a very cold day.

It has been said that a pitcher when he goes into a game should be prepared to think that it is his last. I do not believe this, for a pitcher who nurses his strength ought to last for many years. The long and honorable career of Timothy Keefe, John Clarkson, and James Galvin illustrate this point.

'MID FRUIT TREES AND ROSES.

The Poet of the Sierras Lives Simply and Close to Nature.

Near the summit of the green hills which half inclose the city of Oakland, on an eminence from which one may look across the bay, with its ferry-boats shuttling to and fro, upon the Golden Gate of San Francisco, and thence beyond where the white sails shine upon the waters of the Pacific—there, in a garden spot of Nature, lives Joaquin Miller, the quaint and simple poet of the Sierras. Hamlin Garland, the poet and author, has recently visited Miller, and tells us many interesting things concerning the poet and his peculiar, yet beautiful, habits of life. His home consists of a series of four cottages, in which he lives with his aged mother and brothers. The cottages stand in the center of a terraced fruit farm, with roses growing all about them, and the eye of the poet ever rests upon fruit trees, flowers, the mountains on one side and the valley and the waters on the other. Miller believes in individual freedom in living; he thinks most families live too close together, and so, instead of one large house, he has built four little ones. In one lives his mother, where all dine together. In another he himself sleeps and writes; the third is for his brothers, and the fourth for his guests. The doors of his cottage are never shut, and the air in the rooms is as pure as that of the woods. The walls are covered autograph letters, newspaper scraps, and prints of the faces of his friends. A saddle hangs in the corner, bearskins and wolfskins cover the chairs and lie on the floor as rugs.

Miller loves the woods and mountains. He was born in Indiana woods, when a child made the overland journey through the Rockies and his boyhood was spent in the forests of Oregon. His belief is that if Christ were to return to this earth He would not live in a great house in the roar of a city, attended by servants—it would be impossible for Him. He would live near to Nature, would serve Himself to be served by those who loved Him. Miller believes that the one positive law of God to man was this: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." He believes that if this law were absolutely carried out, all inequality, all grinding toil, all the hurry and bitterness and insecurity of life here on earth would vanish.

JOAQUIN MILLER AT HOME.

He is an indefatigable worker. He took this piece of land when it was nothing but barren hillside, incredibly sterile and rocky. With the work of his own hands he led the water down from the canyon. He has terraced the hillsides, built stone walls, hollowed out trout ponds and planted orchards of olives and walnut trees. His habit is to drive away at his writing in the forenoon, while in the afternoon he works with the man to whom he has given a part of his plough land in payment for assistance in the other work about the orchard. Thus it will be seen he has much the same idea expressed by Tolstoi as he walks behind his Russian harrow.

A MONEY SIEVE.

Contrivance for Separating Coin Taken in Church Collections.

Lewis K. Thurlow, of Brooklyn, has recently patented an invention which is likely to revolutionize one phase of church work. Mr. Thurlow is trustee of one of the leading churches of Brooklyn. He counts the collection every Sunday. This consists of a large number of quarters, dimes, nickels and pennies, and it takes much time to sort them out. Counting the money is the least part of the work, the great trouble being to separate it.

Now, Mr. Thurlow has invented a coin separator. It consists of a box or case, in which there are small drawers. Each drawer is perforated with round holes large enough to allow a certain sized coin to pass through. The top drawer will only hold half-dollar pieces, the next drawer quarters, the next nickels, the next pennies and the bottom dimes.

THURLOW'S MONEY SEPARATOR.

When the collection has been taken up all the money received is placed in the top compartment. Then the box is locked and thoroughly shaken. When it is opened it is found that the coins have dropped through to their respective compartments. It is then a matter of very little moment to arrange them for rapid counting. The box in appearance is very neat. It is made of polished oak and can be carried to the trustee or treasurer's house. It is about a foot square. The drawer bottoms are made of metal or hard rubber.

WAIL OF MONOPOLY.

SOME WILD AND SILLY CALAMITY SHRIEKS.

The Charge by the Ultra-Protectionist New York Press that the Democratic Party Is Responsible for the Recent Trouble at Chicago Is Easily Refuted.

"The Bill of Anarchy."

The ultra-protectionist New York Press is improving the present occation by uttering wild and silly calamity shrieks. It calls the half-fledged Wilson bill the "bill of anarchy," and credits it with all of the numerous wage reductions, strikes, and riots which have occurred under the McKinley bill rule during the past year. It says: "The difficulty out of which the disastrous conflict at Chicago has arisen was directly due to the war waged by Grover Cleveland and the free-trade Bourbons upon American industrial interests and the American standard of wages." It says: "The tariff bill framed to impoverish the Northern workingman has robbed hundreds of thousands of industrious wage-earners of employment and forced them into the depths of destitution. It has closed a host of manufacturing establishments and compelled a sweeping reduction of pay in multitudes of others like Pullman." It says "the detestable bill" contains "the seed of a hundred riots worse than that at Chicago," etc.

It is perhaps useless to suggest to the Press that its great and beloved McKinley bill guaranteeing high wages and steady employment to all is still in force. Is this mighty bill unable to cope with the mere shadow of the Wilson bill? That if the Wilson bill, which splits McKinley duties in two, is "framed to enrich monopolies" for what purpose was the McKinley bill framed? That the reduction of wages at Pullman had little or no connection with the tariff discussion. Hundreds of surplus cars having been manufactured to supply the needs of excursionists to the World's Fair, it was to be expected that this would be a dull year at Pullman. That it will not impoverish the Northern or any other workingman to reduce his taxes and to provide more work for him by giving free raw materials to his employers. That it will not impoverish the Northern farmer to give him cheaper clothing, food, shelter, and tools, and to open up better markets for his products both at home and abroad. That people who live in protected glass houses should not throw stones at those who are laying the foundation for a free trade house. It may be recalled that a few strikes and riots, like those at Homestead and at Coeur d'Alene mines occurred before the detestable Wilson bill cast its shadow across the McKinley bill. Also that a list of over 500 wage reductions in protected industries was published in 1892 as the result of two years of McKinleyism, and that wage advances were as scarce as hens' teeth. In fact, it may be recalled that wage strikes and riots were unknown in this country before the introduction of high protection about thirty years ago, which has given us monopolists, mortgages and tramps in proportions to make a most unstable mixture in a republic. That the McKinley bill was but the culminating act of Republican and protectionist atrocity, which has for thirty years been breeding anarchy and discontent by legislating wealth out of the pockets of the hard-working masses into the pockets of the dishonest schemers who, by political jobbery and legislative bribery, control and operate our railroads and protected mines, forests and factories.

The Press has gotten the shoe on the wrong foot. It is a high monopoly tariff and not free trade that is largely responsible for the present anarchistic condition.—Byron W. Holt.

The Reciprocity Humbug.

There should be no ambiguity or doubt concerning the provision in the pending tariff bill to abrogate the so-called reciprocity clause of the McKinley act. The section of the Senate bill which repeals this clause proceeds to declare that the repeal shall in no way affect existing commercial arrangements between the United States and foreign countries, "except where such arrangements are inconsistent with the provisions of this act." No apparent necessity exists for this verbiage. Commercial arrangements that are not inconsistent with the act would stand without excepting them in express terms. Such as are not consistent with the act should fall; but such a matter ought not to be left to official interpretation. The original Wilson bill simply proposed to repeal the reciprocity clause of the McKinley tariff, and that should have been enough.

Nothing more is needed to condemn this reciprocity-retaliatory policy than the existing embargo proclaimed by President Harrison upon the trade between the United States and the sister Republics of Colombia and Venezuela. Although this embargo has been in operation for more than two years, no official statement of the reasons for its proclamation has ever been given to the country. It has never been shown in what respect, if any, these two Republics discriminate against the trade of the United States. Nor has it been shown why Venezuela and Colombia should have been singled out for discipline, when the Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Mexico, and other States of South and Central America impose as high duties on imports.

Mr. Blaine had a far higher and broader view of commercial reciprocity than that which is presented in the Harrison proclamation imposing on American consumers duties on the coffee and hides of Venezuela and Colombia. But whatever may have been his opinion in regard to this act, no such arbitrary power over commerce should be conferred upon the executive, least of all in a government like ours. There is not another government on earth, except Russia, Turkey and China, that would permit its chief to declare commercial warfare upon this or that nation at his sovereign will and pleasure. The spirit of the reciprocity clause of the McKinley act as exemplified in the Harrison proclamation against Colombia and Venezuela smacks too much of Oriental despotism to receive the sanction of a free people. There is no doubt that immediately upon the repeal of the clause in question President Cleveland would cheerfully hasten to withdraw this mischievous and foolish embargo. But in regard to the repeal there should be neither obscurity nor uncertainty.—Philadelphia Record.

The Protection of Richness.

Says the Tribune: "In the early part of 1890 a great deal was said about the tin mines in the Black Hills. On account of their alleged richness a duty of 4 cents a pound on tin was inserted in the tariff law." The Tribune further states that Englishmen furnished the capital to work those mines, but does not state that the duty was inserted on that account.

The duty was inserted on account of the alleged richness of the mines. Substantially the same thing is true with respect to duties generally. Wherever there is richness, real or alleged, there a duty for protection has been "inserted" into the pockets of the people by the Republican party. As a rule, the greater the richness the more the duty. It came to be a misfortune to the people to strike anything particularly rich in this country. Coal, iron ore, copper, borax, when found in inexhaustible quantities and so easily mined that they could be produced here at less cost than anywhere else, had to be "protected" by Republican tariff taxes.

It was the alleged richness of the alleged American tin mines that secured for them a protective duty. But in this case, fortunately for the consumers of tin, the richness turned out to be only in the pockets of the American confidence men, who sold a great quantity of stock in alleged tin mines to English capitalists. And now that there is no monopoly to be enriched neither the Tribune nor any other McKinley organ nor any McKinley statesman takes any further interest in the duty of 4 cents a pound on the metal tin. But they all together raise their voices in lamentation because the pending tariff bill gives the men who dip imported plates into imported tin somewhat less of the richness of protection.—Chicago Herald.

Protecting Labor.

The Pennsylvania Democrats displayed the courage of high principle in their resolutions on the labor question. They are worth reprinting:

We recognize the right of every citizen to be protected in the free enjoyment of his property and of the privilege to work when, for whom and at what wages he will. It is the duty of the State to maintain for him that right. The highways of the commonwealth should be open to all who lawfully traverse them and the path to proper employment should not be obstructed by any unauthorized power.

None the less we condemn the insincerity and inconsistency of those who clamor loudly for protection to American industries, and yet seek every occasion and lose no opportunity to supplant it with cheap imported pauper labor. We denounce the hypocrite who pretends zeal for the improvement of the social condition of the American workingmen, and yet displaces and evicts them for aliens ignorant of our laws and foreign to our institutions.

The "right to labor and enjoy the fruits of his labor," as Lincoln put it, is about the most fundamental and essential right which a human being requires. It is not only necessary to existence: it is the bed-rock of personal independence, the corner-stone of a free state. At a time when this right is forcibly denied to a large number of men in Pennsylvania it is incumbent upon those who seek control of the government to reaffirm it and to declare the duty of the State to maintain it.

The resolutions very properly proceed, however, to point to the main cause of the labor troubles in Pennsylvania. That State is the chief beneficiary of the laws passed ostensibly to "protect American labor." Its plutocratic mine-owners and manufacturers, as a Republican Senator has declared, "make large fortunes every year when the times are good" from the bounties secured under tariff legislation procured through their campaign contributions. And yet nowhere else in this land—scarcely anywhere else in the civilized world—is labor so underpaid, oppressed, swindled and degraded as in Pennsylvania. "American labor" was long since supplanted there by the worst and most ignorant of "imported pauper labor." And when even this mass revolts against starvation wages the protected plutocrats have the impudence to attribute the trouble to the Democratic attempt to reduce the taxes and enlarge the markets of the country.

The Pennsylvania Democrats have done a public service in asserting the rights of labor and pointing to the real cause of its suffering.—New York World.

Approved by the Masses.

A small class in this city denounces the income tax. The great mass applauds it, as was shown in the Cooper Union meeting a few weeks ago and again on Wednesday in Tammany Hall.

No sentiment that was uttered by the Fourth of July orators was more cheered by the auditors than the defense of the income tax by Senator Walsh and Representative Williams. The speech of the new Senator from Georgia was a very compact and strong presentation of the arguments in favor of this tax.

He showed it to be necessary. With sugar made free, as it ought to be, there will be need of the revenue from the income tax to prevent a deficit in the Treasury. He showed it to be just. It "places the burden on those best able to bear it," and who require and receive the most protection from the Government. He showed it to be Democratic. It conserves the greatest good of the greatest number. A tax upon consumption favors a class at the expense of the mass. Said Senator Walsh:

"Of the $200,000,000 collected by the tariff duties last year 60 per cent. was collected from the prime necessities of life, and about 30 per cent. from the luxuries. Of the $337,000,000 collected in Great Britain 40 per cent. was from wealth and industry, 54 per cent. from luxuries, and only 6 per cent. from the necessaries of life, including tea and coffee."

A tax upon large incomes, logically applied—that is, exempting an amount essential to comfortable living even in large cities, and making a progressive rate upon swollen superfluity—is indeed "eternally right and should become a permanent fixture of our Federal system of taxation."—New York World.

In Pennsylvania.

Of course, every Democrat in Pennsylvania is fully aware that the standard-bearers of the party there are leading a forlorn hope. For this very reason their platform declarations express more fully the real sentiment of the party, since there is no temptation to suppress their views or to straddle troublesome issues in order to catch votes. Though in a despondent minority, there are 450,000 Democrats in Pennsylvania, and their opinions are entitled to respect.

It is significant therefore, that the Democrats of Pennsylvania not only give the usual formal indorsement of the national platform of 1892, but they specifically demand that the tariff laws "be revised in accordance with that authoritative declaration of party principles." There are those who affirm that the tariff plank of that platform did not express the real sentiments of the Democrats of the United States. Now, if this were true, we should expect to find dissent from it in Pennsylvania, if anywhere. So far from dissent, we have from the Democrats of the Keystone State the heartiest concurrence in the doctrine of a tariff for revenue only.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"THE fight for tariff reform will go on," says the Indianapolis Sentinel (Dem.), "and the Democratic party will make the fight. It will have to bury a few men whom it once trusted, but it will not change front because a few mercenaries do so."—Evening Post.

THE MOTOR CYCLE.

Power Furnished by Coal Oil and Takes the Place of Carriages.

The latest conception of the inventive geniuses who cater to the requirements of the wheel world is the motor cycle. The novelty is intended to take the place of buggies and carriages, and is designed to be of service at all seasons of the year and in every kind of going.

FOR ONE TO RIDE ON.

The tires are fully four inches in diameter, and vibration is reduced to a minimum. The motive power is produced by coal oil, and as soon as the rider takes his seat securely the machine does the rest. A gallon of oil will drive the single-seat motor 200 miles, while twice the quantity will send the new four-wheeled contrivance a similar distance with three passengers aboard.

The four-wheeler seems destined to a long lease of popularity. It practically consists of two ladies' bicycles connected by a carriage seat in which three passengers can seat themselves comfortably. The speed can be controlled at the operator's will, but just how fast a "scorcher" may send it along will not be known with any degree of accuracy until the practical speed trial is held on some date in the near future.

The designer has been long before the public with his air-ship theories, and now that he has got down to terra firma the chances are that his ideas will be found of practical utility. Experts who have examined the two types of cycle think they are destined to play a prominent part among the season's inventions. Should a tithe of the inventor's hopes be realized, the public must be prepared to see citizens gliding along with far less waste of energy than is required to climb an elevator stairs or sprint from the sidewalk to catch a surface car. With a motor cycle, a gallon of coal oil and a box of matches the veriest cripple will be able to hold his own with the most muscular prodigy bestriding a wheel.

A BICYCLE BUILT FOR TWO.

IT COST $10,000,000.

George Gould's Hunting Lodge in the Catskill Mountains.

George Gould's mountain luxury, Furlough Lodge, cost $10,000,000 and an expenditure of upward of $1,000,000 a year is necessary to maintain it. The lodge, which is located in the Catskill mountaids, stands on a 1,000-acre tract of very expensive land. The tract is surrounded with a barbed wire fence ten feet high. Within this inclosure is the finest pigeon warren in the world, and the richest pheasantry. There is an immense deer park, a small herd of buffalo and foxes that run wild all the year around, inviting visitors to shoot them.

To take care of this great supply of game there are ten men employed all the year around. And these are under the direction of a head gamekeeper, who is personally responsible for a supply of things to be shot when Mr. Gould and his friends come up for a holiday. The winter supply of horses is always seventeen, and the summer supply twice that number.

GEORGE GOULD'S SHOOTING BOX.

The Russian dogs, with Czarain, the famous foxhound, at the head of the kennel, and the kennels of all other rare, hardy winter dogs, have their special keepers; and, all told, the place is kept on as large a scale and as luxuriantly as any royal estate. No one else on earth spends as much on a shooting box.

South American Wheat.

The exports of wheat from Buenos Ayres during the three months ending March 31 were over 1,000,000 bags, more than double those for the corresponding period of the previous year, and when it is considered that 1893 was the greatest wheat year in the history of the Argentine Republic it means a great deal. The total exports of wheat to Europe and Brazil, last year, surpassed 1,000,000 tons, and for the present year the exports are expected to exceed 2,000,000 tons. In Uruguay, across the river, the same conditions exist, and the crop is so large that the railways cannot furnish sufficient cars to haul it to tide-water. A private letter says that the Central Uruguay railway, which passes through the wheat belt of the country, has filled every available inch of storage room it possesses with wheat in bags, using the engine and coach sheds, the carpenter and repair shops, and even the superfluous room in the station houses along the line. The total crop this year is estimated at more than twice what it was last, and the acreage that is now being ploughed for wheat will make next year's crop five-hundred per cent. larger.—Chicago Record.

MIRACLE IN MISSOURI

The Achievements of Medical Science Far More Wonderful than the Magic of the East.

The Remarkable Experience of Postmaster Woodson, of Panama, Mo.—For Ten Years a Cripple—To-day a Well and Hearty Man.

(From the Kansas City Times.)

The people of Rich Hill, Mo., and vicinity have recently been startled by a seeming miracle of healing. For years one of the best-known men in Bates and Vernon Counties has been Mark M. Woodson, now postmaster at Panama, and brother of ex-State Inspector of Mines C. C. Woodson, of this city. The people of Rich Hill, where he formerly resided, and of his present home remember well the bent form, misshapen almost from the semblance of man, which has painfully bowed its head half to earth and labored snail-like across the walks season after season, and when one day last month it straightened to its full height, threw away the heavy butt of cane which for years had been its only support from total helplessness, and walked erect, firmly, unhesitatingly about the two cities, people looked and wondered. The story of the remarkable case has become the marvel of the two counties. Exactly as Mr. Woodson told it to a Times reporter, it is here published:

"For ten years I have suffered the torments of the damned and have been a useless invalid; to-day I am a well and hearty man, free from almost every touch of pain. I don't think man ever suffered more acute and constant agony than I have since 1883. The rheumatism started then in my right knee, and after weeks of suffering in bed I was at last relieved sufficiently to arise, but it was only to get about on crutches for five years, the ailment having settled in the joint. Despite constant treatment of the most eminent physicians the rheumatism grew worse, and for the last four years I have been compelled to go about bent half toward the ground. In the winter of 1890-91, after the rheumatism had settled into its most chronic form, I went to Kansas City upon advice of my brother, and for six weeks I was treated in one of the largest and best-known dispensaries of that city, but without the slightest improvement. Before I came home I secured a strong galvanic battery; this I used for months with the same result. In August, 1892, I went to St. Louis, and there conferred with the widely known Dr. Mudd, of hospital practice fame, and Dr. Kale, of the city hospital. None of them would take my case with any hope of affording me more than temporary relief, and so I came home, weak, doubled with pain, helpless and despondent.

"About this time my attention was called to the account of a remarkable cure of locomotor ataxia, rheumatism and paralysis by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I ordered some of the pills as an experiment. When I began to take them, the rheumatism had developed into a phase of paralysis; my leg, from the thigh down, was cold all the time and could not be kept warm. In a short time the pills were gone, and so was the cane. I was able to attend to the duties of my office, to get about as a well and strong man. I was free from pain and I could enjoy a sound and restful night's sleep, something I had not known for ten years. To-day am practically and, I firmly believe, permanently cured of my terrible and agonizing ailment. No magician of the Far East ever wrought the miracle with his wand that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me."

To verify the story beyond all question of doubt, Mr. Woodson made the following affidavit:

WRITES OF THE TARIFF.

Full Text of President Cleveland's Letter to Chairman Wilson.

Following is the letter written by President Cleveland to Chairman Wilson. The letter was under date of July 2, and was a private communication, to the publication of which the President only gave his consent recently:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, July 2.

To the Hon. William L. Wilson:

MY DEAR SIR—The certainty that a conference will be ordered between the two houses of Congress for the purpose of adjusting differences on the subject of tariff legislation makes it also certain that you will be again called upon to do hard service in the cause of tariff reform. My public life has been so closely related to the subject, I have so longed for its accomplishment, and I have so often promised its realization to my fellow countrymen as a result of their trust and confidence in the Democratic party, I hope no excuse is necessary for my earnest appeal to you that in this crisis you strenuously insist upon party honesty and good faith, and a sturdy adherence to Democratic principles. I believe these are absolutey necessary conditions to the continuation of Democratic existence.

I cannot rid myself of the feeling that this conference will present the best if not the only hope of true Democracy. Indications point to its action as the reliance of those who seek the genuine fruition of Democratic effort, the fulfillment of Democratic pledges and the redemption of Democratic promises to the people. To reconcile differences in the details comprised in the fixed and well-defined lines of principle will not be the sole task of the conference, but as it seems to me its members will also have in charge the question whether Democratic principles themselves are to be saved or abandoned.

There is no excuse for mistaking or misapprehending the feeling and the temper of the rank and file of the Democracy. They are downcast under the assertion that their party fails in ability to manage the government, and they are apprehensive that their efforts to bring about tariff reform may fail, but they are much more downcast and apprehensive in their fear that Democratic principles may be surrendered. In these circumstances they cannot do otherwise than to look with confidence to you and those who with you have patriotically and sincerely championed the cause of tariff reform within Democratic lines and guided by Democratic principles. This confidence is vastly augmented by the action, under your leadership, of the House of Representatives upon the bill now pending.

Every true Democrat and every sincere tariff reformer knows that this bill, in its present form and as it will be submitted to the conference, falls far short of the consummation for which we have long labored, for which we have suffered defeat without discouragement, which in its anticipation gave us a rallying cry in our day of triumph, and which in its promise of accomplishment is so interwoven with Democratic pledges and Democratic success that our abandonment of the cause or the principles upon which it rests means party perfidy and party dishonor.

One topic will be submitted to the conference which embodies Democratic principle so directly that it cannot be a compromise. We have in our platforms and in every way possible declared in favor of the free importation of raw materials. We have again and again promised that this should be accorded to our people and our manufacturers as soon as the Democratic party was invested with the power to determine the tariff policy of the country. The party has now that power. We are as certain to-day as we have ever been of the great benefit that would accrue to the country from the inauguration of this policy, and nothing has occurred to release us from our obligation to secure this advantage to our people. It must be admitted that no tariff measure can accord with Democratic principles and promises to bear a genuine Democratic badge that does not provide for free raw materials. In these circumstances it may well excite our wonder that Democrats are willing to depart from this, the most Democratic of all tariff principles, and that the inconsistent absurdity of such a proposed departure should be emphasized by the suggestion that the wool of the farmer be put on the free list and the protection of tariff taxation be placed around the iron ore and coal of corporations and capitalists. How can we face the people after indulging in such outrageous discriminations and violations of principle? It is quite apparent that this question of free raw materials does not admit of adjustment on any middle ground, since their subjection to any rate of tariff taxation, great or small, is alike violative of Democratic principle and Democratic good faith.

I hope that you will not consider it intrusive if I say something in relation to another subject which can hardly fail to be troublesome to the conference. I refer to the adjustment of tariff taxation on sugar. Under our party platform and in accordance with our declared party purposes, sugar is a legitimate and logical article of revenue taxation. Unfortunately, however, incidents have accompanied certain stages of the legislation which will be submitted to the conference that have aroused in connection with this subject a natural Democratic animosity to the methods and manipulations of trusts and combinations. I confess to sharing in this feeling; and yet it seems to me we ought, if possible, to sufficiently free ourselves from prejudice to enable us coolly to weigh the considerations which in formulating tariff legislation ought to govern our treatment of sugar as a taxable article. While no tenderness should be entertained for trusts, and while I am decidedly opposed to granting them, under the guise of tariff taxation, any opportunity to further their peculiar methods, I suggest that we ought not to be driven away from the Democratic principle and policy which led to the taxation of sugar by the fear, quite likely exaggerated, that in carrying out this principle and policy we may indirectly and inordinately encourage a combination of the sugar refining interests. I know that in present conditions this is a delicate subject, and I appreciate the depth and strength of the feeling which its treatment has aroused. I do not believe we should do evil that good may come, but it seems to me that we should not forget that our aim is the completion of the tariff, and in taxing sugar for proper purposes and within reasonable bounds, whatever else may be said of our action, we are in no danger of running counter to Democratic principles. With all there is at stake there must be in the treatment of this article some ground upon which we are all willing to stand, where toleration and conciliation may be allowed to solve the problem without demanding the entire surrender of fixed and conscientious convictions.

I ought not to prolong this letter. If what I have written is unwelcome, I beg you to believe in my good intentions. In the conclusions of the conference touching the numerous items which will be considered, the people are not afraid that their interests will be neglected. They know that the general result, so far as they are concerned, will be to place home necessaries and comforts more easily within their reach, and to insure better and surer compensation to those who toil.

We all know that a tariff law covering all the varied interests and conditions of a country as vast as ours must of necessity be largely the result of honorable adjustment and compromise. I expect very few of us can say, when our measure is perfected, that all its features are entirely as we would prefer. You know how much I deprecated the incorporation in the proposed bill of the income-tax feature. In matters of this kind, however, which do not violate a fixed and recognized Democratic doctrine, we are willing to defer to the judgment of a majority of our Democratic brethren. I think there is a general agreement that this is party duty.

This is more palpably apparent when we realize that the business of our country timidly stands and watches for the result of our efforts to perfect tariff legislation; that a quick and certain return of prosperity waits upon a wise adjustment, and that a confiding people still trust in our hands their prosperity and well-being. The Democracy of the land plead most earnestly for the speedy completion of the tariff legislation which their representatives have undertaken, but they demand not less earnestly that no stress of necessity shall tempt those they trust to the abandonment of Democratic principle.

Yours very truly, GROVER CLEVELAND.

The Jury System in Germany.

It is impossible for a German jury to be hung, as is so often the case with similar bodies in this country, says a lawyer who has been there. Under our plan one ignorant or perverse man can nullify the efforts of eleven intelligent and upright citizens if he wishes to do so. In King William's domain, however, such a thing is impossible. Take for instance a criminal case in a German court. If, after consultation, the jury stands six to six for and against the prisoner, he is acquitted. If seven jurymen believe him guilty and five are equally sure of his innocence, his fate is decided by the judge who has presided over the case. If, however, eight of the jury decide that the accused is guilty, it amounts to a conviction.

New Requirements for Fire Fighting.

The Union Railway Company of Providence is to maintain wagons equipped to do service on the wires at all fires where the trolley is near enough to be dangerous. These wagons are to be provided with every appliance for rapid work in cutting or unstringing wires and will be manned by a regular force of men.

Used Mules for Boats.

"One of the funniest situations in which I was ever placed," tells a naval officer, and it will interest children to hear about it, "was while I was on the Wateree, ten or fifteen years ago. We were lying at anchor near Arequipa, off the coast of Peru, when a great tidal wave suddenly lifted the vessel bodily and landed her high and dry nearly a mile inland and some distance from any settlement. Of course the vessel was badly strained and damaged in various ways, and, equally of course we could do nothing but remain on her and accommodate ourselves as best we could to our changed conditions, which gave rise to all sorts of ridiculous complications.

"For example, while at anchor, if any one wanted to leave the ship, a boat or 'gig,' as they are called, was ordered from the boom to which they were tied, and the person was rowed ashore. We couldn't very well use the boats on land, and so substituted mules for them, as discipline had to be maintained and the regular routine kept up. Then if any one wished to leave the ship it was comical to hear the coxswain gravely shout to a sailor to get a certain 'gig' ready. Accordingly, a mule would be detached, harnessed, and ridden to the side of the vessel, when the sailor would report, with a grin, 'The gig is manned, sir,' and the captain, or whoever was going for a canter (?) would mount and smilingly ride away."

To Get Worms Without Digging.

Walter Sawyer, a professional fisherman, says: Nobody need work at digging worms for bait unless he is fond of the exercise, for they can be procured in almost any quantity with very little labor whenever they are needed. The process is simple.

Take a strong stick four or five feet long and sharp at one end, and go to some locality, such as the back of the barn, where the worms are sure to be plentiful.

Drive the stick four or five inches into the ground with a hammer or stone, and then begin to twist it with a rotary motion.

Every few minutes hit the top a rap to drive the point further into the ground and keep on twisting.

In five minutes the worms will begin to crawl out of their holes, and all you have to do is to pick them up and put them in your can.

They hear the grinding and think it is a mole after them, and know that only on the surface are they safe. So they come out, those nearest to the sound making their appearance first with every evidence of haste and trepidation.

Sometimes they come up for a distance of fifteen feet from the twirling stick, and in cases where they are plentiful as many as a hundred can be literally scared out of the ground in this manner.

Some people think a worm has no sense, and they may be right in general, but a worm knows that a mole is its deadliest enemy and will come squirming to the top of the ground any time it hears a mole coming in its direction.

Frances.

I have a Bow-wow. He is very fierce. He says, "Bow-wow" most all the time—at prayers and everywhere. He is made of cloth; I saw him made. My "Ba-ba" stuffed him wiv cotton, so he wouldn't bite. The cotton has got into his mouf, I guess; so I have to make the barks for him; and they are very loud. He has a pink ribbon around his neck. I'm going to have a Kitty when the summer days come. She will say "Meow," but she will not scwatch; no, indeed. There is a Bow-wow the other side of the window; he barks; nobody has to bark it for him, he does it hisself. I s'pose the cotton did not get into his mouf. He has legs, and runs; but my Bow-wow sits on his legs all the time. My Bow-wow is the bestest; he doesn't run away, and he doesn't bite me. My Ba-ba can make better dogs than the ones outside the window. Ba-ba is my nurse; other folks call her Cora, but I call her Ba-ba. She is the bestest nurse. She says the Bow-wow on the other side of the window is alive. I don't know what "alive" means; I never saw it. I am glad she didn't put it into my Bow-wow. Sometimes I play he is my pillow; I put my head on him and p'etend to go s'eepin's. Sometimes I p'etend he is my dolly, and say "By by," but he can't shut his eyes, cause the cotton is in them.

Amusing and Instructive.

Did you ever think that the same syllable is often used in a great many words? If not, suppose you learn it by playing the following game: Write several words on a long slip of paper, leaving the space of half an inch between the syllables of each word. Then cut out the syllables, assort them and let each player draw three syllables at random. From these three or from any two of them he must try to construct a word. If unable to do so, he must return two to the pack and wait until his turn comes again, when he may draw three more slips and try again.

Asked Pa.

The small boy had been irritating his father with many vexatious questions about a psalm he was studying for Sunday school next day.

"Father, what does Selah mean?" was the latest.

"Shut up," said paterfamilias.

"Who knows what the word Selah means?" asked the young superintendent.

The small boy's hand went up.

"Shut up," said the small boy. "I asked papa."

A Pertinent Question.

During a call that little 4-year-old Mary was making with her mother a slice of cake was given her.

"Now, what are you going to say to the lady?" asked the mother.

"Is you dot any more?" asked little Mary, demurely.

The Best Things to Eat

Are made with ROYAL BAKING POWDER—bread, biscuit, cake, rolls, muffins, crusts, and the various pastries requiring a leavening or raising agent.

Risen with ROYAL BAKING POWDER, all these things are superlatively light, sweet, tender, delicious and wholesome.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER is the greatest of time and labor savers to the pastry cook. Besides, it economizes flour, butter and eggs, and, best of all, makes the food more digestible and healthful.

Village Astronomy.

A certain John Hodgdon, who lived in Weare, N. H., more than 100 years ago, was one of the men who seem always to have luck on their side. Whatever he put his hand to prospered. As his neighbors used to say, "John Hodgdon's dish is always right side up when it rains porridge."

Probably his good luck was mostly shrewdness and frugality. We are told that he was an excellent farmer. At all events, shrewd or lucky, he grew richer and richer, and bought more and more land, till people began to wonder where the thing would end. The general feeling was well expressed by Polly Tuttle.

She was one of a company of young people who, being out under the full moon, began discussing the question whether the darker portions of the moon's face were land.

"We can easily settle that," said the bright Polly. "Let's go in and ask Mr. Hodgdon. He'll know; for if it's land, he's got a mortgage on it."

Physical Strength of the Czar.

Another story of the great strength of the Czar of Russia is told. While on a return journey to St. Petersburgh a few days ago the train bearing the Czar and Czarina stopped at a small station to allow the Imperial party to take luncheon. The daughter of the Mayor of the village presented a bouquet of flowers to the Empress, but forgot to dry the stems. The Empress, not wishing to soil her white gloves, hesitated a moment about taking the flowers and the situation became embarrassing. The Czar, however, saw a heavy pewter plate on the table, picked it up, twisted it into a holder, placed the bouquet in it, and handed it to his wife. The Czar is said to be one of the strongest men in Europe.

Where Bears Dwell in Peace.

Up in the Sierra Ancha Mountains of Gila County there are plenty of bears, great big bears, as big as four-year-old steers, and with claws on them that leave a mark like a butcher's cleaver in the snow. There are not many people in the Sierra Ancha. A few people go up among the pines and plant potatoes.

Nobody shoots bear in that country. Phil Askins, the famous mountain lion hunter, with the assistance of a fine pack of hounds, managed to kill one a few years ago, but that was not in the bear region of the mountains. Bear and humans live together with mutual respect, if not amity, and neither side cares to break the truce.—Phœnix (Ariz.) Gazette.

Humbug Written About Hypnotism.

"There has been a great deal of stuff and nonsense written about hypnotism, as if it were something very abstruse," said an Arch street physician. "In fact, it is an every-day phase of mental abstraction. Anyone may hypnotize himself in a few minutes by closing his eyes, directing them inward and downward, and then imagining his breath to be vapor, watching its inhalation and expulsion from the nostrils. Babies invariably look cross-eyed before going to sleep, in this way producing what hypnotists call 'transfixion.' Fishermen often hypnotize themselves watching a cork on a surface of shining water. An hour passes as if it were a few minutes."—Philadelphia Record.

The Ugliest Women.

The ugliest women in the world are the cleverest, according to Sir Crichton Browne. He fears that what woman gains intellectually by the higher education now in vogue she will lose in beauty and grace, and often in health, too.

Amongst the Garo nation, a people dwelling on a range of hills between Brahmapootra and Soorma Valleys, the women are supreme.

They woo the men, they control the affairs of the home and the nation, property descends through them, and in everything they are dominant, but—note the sequel—they are the very ugliest women on the face of the earth.

Mighty Is the Truth!

And it will prevail. Against underhand competition and spurious imitation, the genuine efficacy of the great national tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, always has and always will prevail. The public recognize it everywhere as the chief preventive of malaria, and a reliable specific for dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness, rheumatism, kidney trouble, biliousness and loss of appetite. Efforts made by irresponsible dealers to compete with it by indirect means have and will continue to fall upon the heads and, it may be added, the pockets of those making them. Through the length and breadth of the American continent it is the acknowledged household remedy, reliable and prompt. It relies upon facts, upon public experience, and upon the emphatic commendation of the medical fraternity.

Neatly Classified.

A bright woman thus classifies the human kind: I divide mankind into four classes. First—Those who do not know and do not know that they do not know: these are fools—leave them. Second—Those who do not know and know they do not know; these are children—teach them. Third—Those who know and do not know they know: these are asleep—arouse them. This is certainly a very wise classification, and every one can satisfy himself as to which division he ought to fall into.

Wife Sold for a Pot of Beer.

Wives are cheap to-day. At Croydon Sunday a laboring man disposed of his wife for a pot of "fourpenny," and gave a receipt in due form. The paragraph reporting the transaction, says: "The husband and wife took an affectionate farewell of each other." It must have been a touching sight.—Manchester (England) Gazette.

Stories of the Cloth.

The following, if not true, is well founded, says the London Globe. A French priest who was passionately addicted to card-playing is said by a writer in the Paris Temps to have inadvertently remarked, instead of "O Lord, who holdest in Thy hand the hearts of kings," "O Lord, who holdest in Thy hand the king of hearts."

The foregoing anecdote may be capped by the story, told by Archdeacon Sinclair in the current Young Man, of the nervous curate who, when preaching on the parable of the Prodigal Son, managed to say correctly "put a ring on his finger," but was totally incapable of resisting the temptation to add, "and bells on his toes, and he shall have music wherever he goes." Truly also a prodigal curate.

Not in the Books.

A boy was once brought before "Old Steady" Baker, the Mayor of Folkestone, for stealing gooseberries. Baker turned over Burn's "Justice," but, not being able to find the article he wanted in the book, which is alphabetically arranged, he lifted up his spectacles, and addressed the culprit thus: "My lad, it's very lucky for you that, instead of stealing gooseberries you were not brought here for stealing a goose; there is a statute against stealing geese, but I can't find anything about gooseberries in all Burn; so let the prisoner be discharged, for I suppose it is no offense."

His Own Invention.

A down East farmer travels in great comfort through the long reaches of snow, and in the face of the bitterest north winds in a one-horse sleigh, hooded over like a prairie schooner, and with a stove inside, the funnel sticking through the top. It is a rig of his own invention, and, while not architecturally beautiful in appearance, is very comfortable in use.

Marriage of Freaks.

A curious marriage took place at Verviers, in Belgium, recently, when Mile. Elizabeth Kunneich, without arms, was married to her impressario, an Austrian. The woman signed the register with a steady foot and the wedding ring was placed by the priest on her fourth toe.

to every nervous, delicate woman, suffering from "female complaint," irregularity, or weakness. In every exhausted condition of the female system, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an invigorating restorative tonic, fitted to the needs of nursing mothers, and women approaching confinement.

South Bend, Pacific Co., Wash.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—I began taking your "Favorite Prescription" the first month of pregnancy, and have continued taking it since confinement. I did not experience the nausea or any of the ailments due to pregnancy, after I began taking your "Prescription." I was only in labor a short time, and the physician said I got along unusually well.

We think it saved me a great deal of suffering. I was troubled a great deal with leucorrhea also, and it has done a world of good for me. Sincerely yours, MRS. W. C. BAKER.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

No Griping, no Nausea, no Pain, when DeWitt's little Early Risers are taken. Small Pill. Safe Pill. Best Pill.

Just as Recommended

Last fall I was taken with a kind of summer complaint, accompanied with a wonderful diarrhœa. Soon after my wife's sister, who lives with us, was taken in the same way. We used almost everything without benefit. Then I said, let us try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which we did, and that cured us right away. I think much of it, as it did for me what it was recommended to do. John Hertzler, Bethel, Berks Co., Pa. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 30

All the talk in the world will not convince you so quickly as one trial of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for Scalds, Burns, Bruises, Skin Affections and Piles.

For Cholera and Diarrhœa

"My little boy was very bad off for two months with diarrhœa. We used various medicines, also called in two doctors, but nothing done him any good until we used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which gave immediate relief and soon cured him. I consider it the best medicine made and can conscientiously recommend it to all who need a diarrhœa or colic medicine. J. E. Hare, Trenton, Tex. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 30

Small in size, great in results: DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Best pill for Constipation, best for Sick Headache, best for Sour Stomach.

Relieves a Cold

"One of my customers came in to-day and asked me for the best cough medicine I had," says Lew Young, a prominent druggist of Newman Grove, Neb. "Of course I showed him Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and he did not ask to see any other. I have never yet sold a medicine that would loosen and relieve a severe cold so quickly as that Remedy does. I have sold four dozen of it within last sixty days and do not know of a single case where it failed to give the most perfect satisfaction." 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 30

One word describes it—"perfection." We refer to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures obstinate sores, burns, skin diseases and is a well known cure for piles.

Distemper and Coughs

In horses, sheep and hogs positively prevented and quickly cured by using Craft's Distemper and Cough Cure. Safe to use under all conditions. One dose prevents, one bottle cures, in three to six days. Send for "Treatise" and testimonials from breeders who have used it for many years. Address the Wells Medicine Co., LaFayette, Ind. 35

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 569 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Hub's Boy's Head-to-Foot Outfit.

For several months past our readers have seen the advertisement in our columns of "Boys Head-to-Foot Outfit. $5.00." It includes a suit of all wool clothes, Stanley Cap to match the suit, and a pair of stout and shapely shoes. It is sent on receipt of price, or, if the buyer wants to examine the goods before paying for them he sends $1.00 and the outfit is then sent by express with privilege of examination, then if satisfactory the purchaser pays the other $4.00. If not he announces that he does not want the goods and they are sent back to the express company and the Hub sends the dollar back. Nothing could be fairer than this, and the offer comes from one of the biggest houses in the United States.

IN paint the best is the cheapest. Don't be misled by trying what is said to be "just as good," but when you paint insist upon having a genuine brand of

Strictly Pure White Lead

It costs no more per gallon than cheap paints, and lasts many times as long.

Harper's Magazine

"Trilby" ends in the August Harper's, and the same Number containg the second instalment of Charles Dudley Warner,s story entitled "The Golden House." A more complete change of scene from the old world to the new could scarcely have been effected, for Mr. Warner's story is intensely American and modern, and its developments from month to month will be awaited with eagerness. The life of New York City is faithfully mirrored in Mr. Smedley's drawings that illustrate the text.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Education.

An oration delivered by Miss Daisy McCrory, one of the Jackson township graduates at the commencement, June 28, 1894.

The question is often asked, "What is education?" Education is an upbuilding and strengthening of the mind. When infants we are cared for until our mind and body becomes strong enough to wonder out into the world, and from that time on our brain is developing and being educated. When young our mind is not strong enough to retain the knowledge we might gain as we pass through life, but as we grow older our mind becomes stronger and is more capable of retaining that which is presented to it. We do not get our education in one day, not even months, but it takes years of hard and earnest study, from good books and from the outside world. We may be educated in different ways; some as musicians, others as doctors, etc., but this all depends on our situation and opportunities in life. Then, we have people in our country who can neither read, nor write their own name; but this is not to say they are ignorant, because they are more careful what they say and do than some of our educated men and women. They have studied the laws of nature, and have taken pattern from some good men, and this would be a good way for us to do, even though we have an education. If we have an education and cannot improve it on account of our circumstances, by following such good men and women we may get a good start. After we have gained our education we must then decide how to make use of it. We may see many different places and ways. We can make use of our education in the Sabbath school, prayer meeting and all these societies; they have a need for such people. We should improve every moment, for those that glide by are lost, as time never comes back. If we give good men and women something good and noble to think about they in general can find something good and noble to do. As education is desirable we should reach its heights if possible, but we should not feel above our fellow beings, because there is nothing so contemptable as a learned dude, and he is counted the biggest fool of all mankind. We should not use our education to improve ourselves only, but all those that are about us, for without education there would be but little for us to live for in this world.

We cannot be so kind and generous without our education as we can with it, because we have not studied the laws of nature and good books enough to show the hard feelings created by unkindness. It does not wholly depend upon our circumstances to get a good education, but by attending the common schools and preparing for higher ones. Grover Cleveland attended the common schools, and after graduating secured a position as clerk in a village store. At the age of sixteen he became book-keeper and assistant teacher, thus adding a small amount of money for the support of his father's large family, who were in needy circumstances, and improving his education. At the age of twenty he was admitted to the bar and began the practice of law, and he now occupies the highest position in our country, and we may see that he gained this by hard and earnest study. We may also see from this that if we haven't the means to attend college and high schools of this sort, that if we have a will there will be a way for us to become good, educated—famous men and women just as Grover Cleveland has. Therefore we should have an abundant supply of education, for true education is true civilization.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman, druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1. 3

Harper's Bazar.

Country and garden-party toilettes, designed by the leading modiste of Paris, will appear in Harper's Bazar from week to week during July and August. "Beyond the Dreams of Avarice," Walter Besant's new novel, will be the leading serial story—a story which promises to be of surpassing interest, and which in its title suggests a subject that has seldom in the history of this country been more alluring than at the present period.

A Mail Agent's Experience.

Louis D. Brennecke, Wallhalla, S. C., had rheumatism for fifteen years, and during that time had never been free from pain. He tried the Hot Springs and physician without benefit. After taking two bottles of Drummond's Lightning Remedy he wrote that he was free from pain, and able to take several long walks. If you want a cure, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles—one month's treatment. Agents wanted.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY!

A Great Mistake.

A recent discovery is that headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion of the mind, etc., are due to derangement of the nerve centers which supply the brain with nerve force; that indigestion, dyspepsia, neuralgia, wind in the stomach, etc., arise from the derangement of the nerve centers supplying these organs with nerve fluid or force. This is likewise true of many diseases of the heart and lungs. The nerve system is like a telegraph system. The nerves convey the nerve force from nerve centers to every part of the body, just as the electric current is conveyed along the telegraph wires to every station, large or small. Ordinary physicians fail to regard this fact; instead of treating the nerve centers for the cause of the disorders arising therefrom they treat the part effected.

Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., the highly celebrated specialist and student of nervous diseases, and author of many noted treatises on the latter subject, long since realized the truth of the first statement, and his Restorative Nervine is prepared on that principle. Its success in curing all diseases arising from derangement of the nervous system is wonderful, as the thousands of unsolicited testimonials in possession of the company manufacturing the remedy amply prove.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a reliable remedy for all nervous diseases, such as headache, nervous debility, prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy etc. It is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

Restorative Nervine positively contains no opiates or dangerous drugs. Miles Nerve and Liver Pills, 50 doses 25 cents, mailed anywhere. Free book on heart and nervous diseases at druggists or by mail.

HOME FROM THE FRONT.

The Auburn Rifles reached home Monday afternoon, after a hot and disagreeable campaign at Hammond and Whiting to assist in breaking the blockade and stopping the rioting that accompanied the great strike. They left here on an order from the governor on Tuesday, July 17, and were absent fourteen days. It was not a long campaign, but it was a hard one, and well calculated to give the boys a sudden plunge into the discomforts of war. Not only was the weather extremely hot and dry, but the necessities of their service took them into the heat and dust of the great railroad centers near Chicago, where all is smoke and cinders, hot gravel and litle shade, with sand banks and sand fleas too near by to be comfortable. And worse than these natural discomforts was the character of the people they were there to watch and control. Many, in fact the most of the turbulent element there, were foreigners of the lower grades, that undesirable element that has lately found its way to our shores, and which at present furnishes one of the most difficult problems of statesmanship as to how it is to be stopped. These foreigners with doubtless a few low down Americans, viewed the coming of the state troops with no favor, and in a small and cowardly way did all they could and dared to make their stay unpleasant. But the boys were on their dignity—they are always on their good behavior—and paid little attention to such flattering epithets as "hoboes" and "scabs," and went about the state's business in a business like way. Their presence overawed the turbulent element, and no property was destroyed within reach of the camp. And all over that section, quiet soon settled down. There was but one real trouble, the one mentioned in Geo. Clark's letter, published last week in the COURIER. It occurred Thursday night of the first week, when the company had got to Whiting. Some property had been destroyed and cars ditched, so that great watchfulness was necessary. When, on that night, it was found that more efforts were being made to pull coupling pins, the soldiers were sent along the tracks containing the cars, and arrested every man who acted suspiciously, and they were afterwards sent to Indianapolis for trial. The boys tell a good one on Corporal Jud Bair. In his search he found a man, supposed to be a tramp, lying flat on his back on top of a car and pretending to be asleep. Possibly he was asleep but he responded with great activity to the corporal's "Get up, here! Get up!" and brought himself to an "upright" in great shape. "Throw up your hands!" yelled the corporal, and up went the man's hands, as far into the night air as he could, for there was a cold gleam shining along the soldier's gun barrel the latter tipped off by a murderous looking bayonet. "Climb down off this car, or I'll help you," continued the corporal in a tone of voice that made the man get down to the ground quicker than a tramp was ever known to before. He was taken to Indianapolis as a witness against the men pulling coupling pins, and in the examination gave many interesting points on the manner of his own arrest. He was an Irishman, and when he told how Bair made him hold up his hands and then get off the car, he got hot. "The dom soldier yelled at me, 'Hould up yer hands,' and then 'Get down from the car.' Howly Moses, how could he expect me to get down from the car wid me hands up? And then that divil of a gun barrel a grinnin' at me all the time." The boys had lots of fun over the affair. Saturday, the 28th, the Angola and Waterloo companies, as well as ours, got orders to come home home. The others got off all right and went went through Auburn on the 5:40 p. m. north bound, but just as the Auburn men marched up to the passenger station at Whiting, the agent came out and asked for Capt. Kuhlman. That officer was pointed out, and the agent handed him a telegram. He broke it open, read it, and quietly said, "Fall in, boys. We march to Hammond." That was the order, and they at once took up the line of march. But we have it "over our own private line" that for once Company K imitated "the British army in Flanders," when, as Sterne says, "Our army swore terribly." However, the pleasure of doing their duty, soon got the better of their disappointment. Things were so satisfactory at Hammond on Monday that the looked for order came, and they reached here at 3:30 p. m. on the B. & O. Teams met them at the Junction, but they preferred to march up to town, and when the crowd waiting at the Wabash depot, saw the track take on a blue appearance, tipped with the glitter of steel, a big shout went up, and the hundred or so of boys in waiting, broke into a run and met them. At the Wabash station several hundred enthusiastic friends, wives, sweethearts, old and young, with G. A. R. men, as well as the band, met them and all marched up town together. The hard service had been an advantage to the boys, for their appearance was even more soldierly than when they left. Their suits were not quite as blue, indeed, nor their faces so white, but the tan and dust and freckles all counted in their favor, and loud cheers and waving flags greeted them everywhere, The town was decorated and all made the boys feel that their services were appreciated. They marched into the armory and were soon eased of the loads they carried, and many a hot woolen blue c at was pulled off. Then they came out on the street and shook hands. The campaign of Hammond and Whiting were over.

"And we all felt glad,
When the boys came marching home.

Dedicated to the League Chainless,

By UNCLE JOHN DENNISON, of Ft. Wayne.

Give me the wheel with a bevel gear.
Climbs a hill without a strain;
Don't have to tug and work and push,
Like you do with the darned old chain.

Runs easy? Well I should say—yes;
And I'll tell you the reason why:
The gear is in oil all the time,
While your darned old chain is dry.

I'm not one of those racing lads,
I'm too fat to bend, you know;
When I get astride my Chainless
I've someplace I want to go.

I don't ride it just for fun,
I mean business when I go;
And one don't need knee pants or guards,
When you ride the Chainless, you know.

She's a daisy, boys, get one and ride,
And you will say the same as I,
That gears that always run in oil
Are better than a chain that's dry.

THOMAS A. FRETZ.

The sad news of the death by drowning of Thomas Eretz reached here Thursday morning in a telegram to his father, Samuel Fretz. It was to the effect that the young man had been drowned in Lake Michigan the evening before while in bathing at the foot of Ohio street in the North Side, Chicago. A dispatch was returned to the undertaker who had the body in charge and arrangements were made here rapidly and James E. Rose was sent up to take charge of the matter and bring the body home. He returned Friday afternoon with the remains in his charge, carefully prepared for the journey as well as for the grave. While in Chicago, Mr. Rose had a talk with the man who took the body from the water. He said some twenty or thirty of them were bathing in the Lake at the point named, which is near Lincoln Park. This man had come out of the water and was dressing, when there came a cry that a man was drowning, or had gone down on the other side of a pier near by. He at once threw off his clothes, ran to the spot where young Fretz had been seen last and dived into the water. Not finding him, he came up for breath, then tried again and so on to the fourth time, when he found him and brought him to the shore. Here he left him in the hands of his acquaintances and started for his own home, as he was exhausted with the terrible struggle. This was all he knew of the matter. The body, however, was taken to the morgue, where the bodies of those who meet accidental death, and who have no friends at hand, are taken and kept in condition to be identified. Learning the young man's name, he next day telegraphed to Mr. Fretz here as above stated. The news came as a dreadful shock, not only to his people, but to all, as he was a young man of promise and highly regarded. The funeral services were at the Lutheran church Saturday at 2:30 p. m., the services being by pastor, Mr. Brosy, who had been called back from his vacation with friends in Hillsdale county, Mich., to perform this sad duty. The attendance was very large, friends coming from far and near, and the service was a sad event for all. Mr. Brosy read the following notice, which we here reproduce.

Thomas A. Fretz was born in DeKalb county, July 10, 1872, and departed this life July 25, 1894, aged 22 years, 15 days. He leaves a father, mother and five sisters, besides a host of friends to mourn his untimely death. On account of hard times and scarcity of work in Auburn, he left here and went to Chicago in March, where he was earning $2 per day as hard wood finisher. Last Wednesday he and some associates went down to the Lake bathing. While in the water he was seized by a cramp and sank to rise no more. It is hard to give up one so young in life, yet we must submit to it, though almost unbearable. There are many sad experiences to which we must subscribe in life, without fully understanding them. Mr. Fretz was in possession of that most valuable treasure, a good character—a good name. He had a kind and pleasing disposition, and so far as my knowledge goes, he was a young man of good habits and was industrious.

When the vast audience had paid their last tribute of respect to the "early fallen," their young friend who had been taken from us when all of life's hopes were bright before him, his remains were laid to rest in Evergreen Cemetery.

More About Wild Lettuce.

Our exchanges continue to notice the strange weed we mentioned last week. A writer in the Bryan Ohio Press, describes one a little different from the one we examined and described last week. Especially does his differ from the one we have, in the matter of branches. He speaks of it as having the branches starting out from the lower part of the stalk, and forming a sort of pyramid. In the specimen A. D. Moore brought us last week, there are no branches for the first half of the stern say 2½ feet, and the rest of the top does not form a pyramid. Otherwise his description is not much different from our.

THE RUSSIAN THISTLE.

Last November the Secretary of the Agricultural department at Washington sent a botanist to the Northwest to learn the extent of the damage done by this thistle during the past year. He writes of the weed as it grows in the Northwest, where one plant has in the neighborhood of 600,000 seeds. The botanist's report is as follows:

The Russian thistle was introduced into this country about seventeen years ago, in flaxseed brought from Russia and sowed near Scotland, S. D. A few observing people noticed it at the time, but gave it little thought until it became too abundant to be easily checked. In May or June the seed germinates and sends up a tender, branching shoot, with narrow succulent leaves. During the warm weather in July and August, when other weeds are less aggressive, this one makes its best growth, and by September has changed from an innocent little seedling to a vigorous spreading, weed, two to six feet in diameter and half as high, a dense busby mass of rigid branches offering an effectual barrier to the passage of man or beast. The long, tender leaves have fallen, and at intervals of half an inch or less on the branches are clustered three sharp spines, a quarter to half an inch long. The full grown plant, shaped like an inverted saucer two to six feet in diameter, all grows from a single root less than half an inch thick.

Anarchy Growing.

Anarchists of all grades, from the mildest to the most open and pronounced, are cursing the law authorities that put a stop to the recent riots. No matter how they try to cover up their criminal ideas by mild words and high sounding phrases about free speech and the liberty of the press. It is the same old anarchistic tendency. The facts are that the officers of the law ordered Debs and his fellow criminals to stop interfering with the trains, to quit stopping passenger trains, to quit stopping freight trains, in both cases there being a great loss of time or property. Does any one of these objectors claim it would be right or proper for two or three Auburn men to go to one of our railroads and stop a train by force? Or, if we should place obstructions on the track of the road here and ditch a train and thereby destroy life and property, would they think that we should be "protected" from the tyrannical officers of the law? Do these apologists for crime, these defenders of criminals realize the dangerous tendencies of their teachings? It is likely they do, but they do not appear to care. Debs has caused the destruction of millions of property, and the loss of many human lives. And these sympathizers are defending him and cursing the law that is trying to punish him. Such labor (?) leaders as Sovereign are making public speeches in favor of poor persecuted Debs, and telling what a good man he is. Debs himself drawn down and his face and poses as a martyr. The wicked officers of the law have "abridged free speech," They curse President Cleveland for stopping the wholesale destruction of property in Chicago, and for preventing the utter stagnation of business all over the country. They denounce Gov. Mathews for helping to stop riot and bloodshed, and now they are cursing the courts that are in a mild, hesitating way proceeding to punish these red handed criminals caught redhanded in the act. And not only avowed anarchists, and socialists, but all the smaller fry of similar tendencies, clear down to the populist leaders and populist papers, are taking up the cry against dealing out a just punishment to these criminals. They do more. They try in their weak and feeble way to make these crimes and those who excuse them, to be martyrs, and do all they can to make them popular. Every man who sympathizes with crime or with the criminal has taken the first step that leads to crime. Shame on such teachings.

A Midsummer Magazine.

How girls were courted in the old Puritan days, and the difficulties, now unknown, to marriage are delightfully described by Alice Morse Earle in the August Ladies' Home Journal, which article is put next to a snake story by Mark O'Rell, reminiscent of his life in the bush of Australia, and which he calls "My First Snake." Julia Bond Valentine's charming story. "The Whistling Girl," is the subject of two most exquisite illustrations by Irving R. Wiles. Sketches with portraits, of "Four Famous Young Authors," Richard Harding Davis, Jerome K. Jerome, Rudyard Kipling, and John Kendrick Bangs, comprise the biography of the number. Mr. Howell's literary biography, which he has aptly named "My Literary Passions," continues to grow in interest and charm. John Gilmer Speed writes of "Mud-Imprisoned Women," making a strong plea, in behalf of women, for the improvement of country roads. Frank R. Stockton continues to amuse with Pomona's letters to her old mistress, as does Mr. A. B. Frost, the original "Rudder Grange" artist, with his clever illustrations. Edward W. Bok writes of "The Boy in the Office," and Grace Ellery Channing of "Politeness in Two Countries." The clever and funny Brownies are at Newport, and their escapades at that fashionable resort are exceedingly amusing. Florence Morse writes of the advantages and disadvantages of "Suburban Life for Women," and Mrs. Garrett Webster gives a novel idea for a summer fair under the title "The New Athletic Carnival." Mrs. Mallon writes of "Dainty Styles in Lingerie," and "The Art of Dressing the Hair." Mrs. Scovil's "Suggestions fof Mothers" are valuable, as is the column devoted to "Musical Helps and Hints." Altogether this August issue, with its pretty summer cover by Alice Barber Stephens, is a particularly dainty issue, and no woman can afford to be without it. Sold by The Curtis Publis ing Company, of Philadelphia, for ten cents per number and one dollar per year.

Teachers' Institute.

The DeKalb County Teachers' Institute will be held in the First M. E. church in this place August 27 to 31 inclusive. The regular daily instructors are Wm. H. Mace, Ph. D., Professor of History in Syracuse University, New York, and Mrs. Sarah Tarney Campbell, late Professor of Methods in the Indiana State Normal School and reviser of the Indiana State Series of Readers.

The Annual Institute Lecture Course is not to be excelled by any previous effort. Monday there will take place a fine musical concert, a reunion of the teachers and, possibly, a banquet. On Thursday evening the Annual Institute Sermon will be given, and Wednesday and Thursday evenings will be devoted as usual to popular day lectures. These will de given respectively by Col. Geo. W. Bain, "Kentucky's Favorite Orator," and Rev. Robert McIntyre, the "eloquent divine" of Denver, Colorado.

Street Fair at Butler.

The Butler street fair takes place Sept. 4, 5 and 6. There will be trotting and other races and bicycle races in the streets. There will be a baby show on Tuesday, at which a prize will be given. The first evening there will be an illuminated bicycle parade, second evening a grand concert of 100 voices, and the third evening there will be fireworks. Each evening a balloon ascension. All free. All are invited to wait for the Butler street fair and then come and enjoy it. 33

Chicago and Cook County Sued by Railroads for Damages Sustained During the Strike—Fatal Collision at Cochran Ind.—Train Robber Caught—Disasterous Fire.

NOW FOR DAMAGES.

Railroads to Sue the City of Chicago and Cook County.

Chicago special: Notices were served Tuesday by Samuel B. Foster, attorney in fact for several railroads, of damages claimed against the city of Chicago and the county of Cook for loss of property during the American Railway Union strike. The notices were served on the Mayor, City Clerk, the Corporation Counsel, the City Attorney, and on the President of the County Board, the County Clerk and County Attorney. The aggregate damages claimed are $38,670. This represents only about one-tenth of the actual damage claimed, many roads having several days left in which to file their claims. Besides these claims shippers filed through Mr. Foster claims amounting to at least $200,000. This was done by the shippers on the express declaration of she railroads that they will pay no claims whatever made against them by shippers for damages to freight handled during the strike. The General Managers association takes the ground that the city and county, in not furnishing adequate protection to the railroads, are directly responsible for all damages to freight. The damages claimed by the railroads in the above list are mostly for cars burned after July 1. It is believed many more suits for damages will be filed by shippers who lost heavily on perishable freight during the strike.

BIG BLAZE.

Disastrous Fire in the Lumber District of Minneapolis.

The third disastrous fire in the history of Minneapolis broke out about 3:30 Tuesday afternoon in the lumber yards of the Shevlin Carpenter Company, on the bank of the Mississippi River, at the foot of Eighth avenue, north. It spread with remarkable rapidity, and before controlled, destroyed property valued at nearly $500,000. Besides 20,000,000 feet of lumber, the gas manufacturing plant of the Omaha Railroad Company, round house, tool house, sand house, and turn-tables of that road, nearly forty freight cars, some loaded with merchandise, and the office building of the Shevlin Carpenter Company were burned. The saw mill, planing mill, drying kilns, and store house for the moulding and prepared work, although in the very heart of the fire district, were saved by the efforts of the firemen, aided by the fortuitous change in direction of the wind. Help was summoned from St. Paul, and seven engines with full crews were sent from that city. Insurance, about $350,000.

A Terrible Collision.

The New York limited over the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern went into an open switch at Cochran, Ind., twenty-six miles west of Cincinnati. Engineer Little of Washington, Ind., and Dudley E. Bell, a tramp, were killed, and M. Cadden, the firemen, also of Washington, Ind., was injured. A crew had been working at the switch making up a freight. They ran the freight on the siding and awaited the coming of the passenger. Every one of the freight crew say that the switch was properly thrown. A farmer's wife and a boy saw a man run from the switch just as the passenger train dashed up. He is supposed to have thrown it back on the siding. The passenger plowed through five freight cars, but strange to say, not a passenger was injured.

Ordered Back to China.

In view of the disturbed and threatening state of the relations between China and Japan, the State Department has intimated to Minister Charles Denby, United States Minister to China, who is now in Michigan, that he had better return to his post. Though necessary, this is rather hard upon the Minister, who has taken a leave of his duties for the first time in nine years, and has been home only three weeks, whereas his leave was for sixty days.

Train Wrecked.

Unknown parties wrecked the fast mail and express train on the Alabama Great Southern Railroad. The wreck occurred at Trenton, Ga., where a switch had been opened. The engine, express, and mail cars were thrown down an embankment and demolished. Passenger coaches were derailed, but no passengers were hurt. Express Messenger Stewart and a colored porter, were seriously but not fatally hurt.

Train Robber Caught.

Tulsa (I. T.) special: Curtis Bayson, one of the seven men that held up the westbound Frisco train at Redfork a week ago, has been arrested near that place and taken to Fort Smith. He admits his guilt and has given information that will doubtless lead to the arrest of the other members of the gang.

Murder Will Out.

Henry Shade, night engineer at the rolling mill, Terre Haute, Ind., was assassinated three years ago. The other day it developed that Mrs. Moore, an old negress, confessed upon her death-bed that she shot Shade at the instigation of his wife.

Acquitted the Brakeman.

At Moberly, Mo., Charles Clark, the Wabash brakeman who killed Alexander McCambridge, a striker, for interfering with him, has been acquitted.

Legs Taken Off.

Al Bloomfield, a brakeman on the Baltimore and Ohio road, fell beneath his train at Cromwell, Ohio, and had both legs taken off. His injuries will prove fatal.

Sent to the Bottom.

Shanghai special: Confirmation has been received here of the news cabled regarding the beginning of hostilities between China and Japan. In addition to Hugh Mathieson & Co.'s steamer Kow Shung, which was sunk by a Japanese cruiser, as it was being used to transport Chinese troops, all on board being drowned, the Chinese Trading Company's steamer Tookon, which was also being used as a transport, was sunk by the fire of a Japanese warship. The Hong Kong and Shanghai bank agency here is unable to obtain official information of the report that war has been proclaimed, but the agency states that war is everywhere believed to have been inaugurated.

SWEPT BY FIRE.

Wisconsin Towns Destroyed and Many Lives Lost.

Stevenspoint (Wis.) special: Business houses, churches, court house, and schools and about 700 dwellings went up in smoke before the forest fires hereabouts. It is estimated that from fifteen to twenty lives have been lost, the victims being either burned or drowned in the lake in their attempt to escape. So far three bodies have been found, and the ruins are being searched for others. Over 1,500 persons are without shelter, food, or clothing. A relief committee, headed by B. W. Davis, has been organized. The condition is terrible and many are without maintenance. Seventeen persons are reported drowned in trying to cross the lake in boats. A portion of the drowned were children.

Fires are now in the marshes within two or three miles west of this city, but by good work on the part of the settlers very little damage has as yet been done. The big marsh below Plover, which comprises several thousand acres, is also threatened. The same state of affairs exists at Milladore, Sherry, Centralia, and other points west of here.

Phillips (Wis.) special: Three thousand people have been made homeless here by the forest fires. Not a building is left standing in the town, and property valued at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 has been swept away.

When the fire reached the city it swept from house to house and in an hour had wrapped the entire village in flames. The people fled to the railway, where trains were started, and they were hastily conveyed to neighboring towns. Nothing but a few personal effects were saved. The heaviest losses by the fire are those of the John R. Davis lumber company, $500,000, and Fayette Shaw, tanner, $200,000.

PULSE OF TRADE.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Review of the Week.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "The heavy outgo of gold, the fall of the treasury reserve and the price of wheat to the lowest point on record, and the uncertainty about the tariff, have entirely overshadowed other influences. Business delayed for months by two great strikes now crowds railroads and swells returns and gives the impression of rivival in business. But it is not yet clear how far there is an increase in new traffic, distinguished from that which has been merely blockaded or deferred. In some branches there has been more activity, in others less, because events early this week led many to infer that no change of tariff would be made. The internal revenue receipts on whisky suddenly dropped more than one-half, and sales of wool greatly increased. But the uncertainty is not removed and much of the business done seems to be in the nature of insurance against possibilities. With wheat at the lowest point ever known and moving from the farms very freely, while imports are still restricted by doubts about future duties, gold could not go out if there were the ordinary confidence in the future of enterprise here. But much was done to prevent that confidence by legislation hostile to lenders in Western and Southern States, and many millions have doubtless been called in by foreign loan companies and taken away. Still more has been done by the strikes, the depression of manufactures, the loss of railroad earnings, and the rapid decrease of Treasury balances, which are reduced to about $56,000,000, the lowest ever known since preparations for resumption began.

CONFIRMED.

Advices that War Has Been Declared Received.

London special: The Penisular & Oriental Steam Navigation Company and other London firms doing business with the East, have received telegrams confirming the Associated Press advices that war between China and Japan had been declared. Numerous transactions at war risk were made at Lloyds. There are rumors that the Chinese Government intends to negotiate a loan. From Chinese sources no confirmation can be obtained of the report alleged to have been received from Shanghai by a news agency here, to the effect that Japanese cruisers attacked and sank many transports landing troops from Taku.

The Standard's correspondent at Brussels has from authoritative source that the Chinese Government welcomed the proposal made by Japan that the two governments act jointly against the Corean rebels and that it is hoped may complete an agreement.

Frightful Tragedy.

Los Angeles (Cal.) special: John Craig shot and killed his father-in-law, Wm. Hunter, his mother-in-law Mary Hunter, George Hunter, a brother-in-law and his wife, Emily Hunter-Craig. Craig drove to Glendale, five miles from this city, where his wife, from whom he was divorced three months ago, was stopping with her brother George, and deliberately shot and killed them both. He returned to this city and went to the home of his father-in-law, William Hunter, and killed him. Stepping over the body, he walked to the dining-room, shot and killed his mother-in-law. Then he turned the pistol against his forehead and fired two shots, both of which failed to kill him. He was taken to the police receiving hospital. He will recover. He states that he was bounded by his wife's relatives and wanted revenge, which he got. He was sorry he had not succeeded in killing himself to complete the whole business.

Coxeyites Appeal for Aid.

Large and indignant delegations from the industrial armies encamped about Washington have applied to the House Committee on Labor for assistance. The expected has happened. Their leaders have deserted them. They sought Congressional aid to return to the localities whence they came. Coxey's men said he left them in the lurch. Kelly's men averred their leader has left and they did not expect to see him again. Fry's men said the same. Those led from the Pacific coast by Kelly are particularly indignant and expressed a fervent desire to tar and feather their General.

Corbett and Jackson.

Queenstown special: James Corbett, the pugilist, has sailed for New York on board the White Star line Majestic. Before leaving he said he was returning to the United States sooner than he expected in order to meet Peter Jackson and arrange a match with him before he started for England. He said he would not be prepared to fight Jackson for six months. This will be his last fight, and he intended to be in perfect condition when the battle took place.

Struck by Lightning.

The high school building at Rolling Prairie, Ind., was struck by lightning and destroyed by fire, nothing but the walls being left standing. The bolt struck the cupola, shattering it into kindling wood. Before the fire was discovered the whole upper portion of the structure was a mass of flames. Only a few of the contents were saved. The building contained one of the finest district school libraries in the County. The loss is $5,500; insured in the Ohio Farmers' for $3,450.

A Costly Fire.

The big oil tank factory of S. F. Bowser & Co., in the southern part of Fort Wayne, Ind., was burned completely to the ground. One dwelling and two barns near-by were destroyed and several other dwellings were badly scorched. The loss to Messrs. Bowers will reach $60,000, with an insurance of 18,600. During the progress of the fire the telephone wires were cut. They fell across the trolley wires of the street car system. Frank Magner caught hold of one of the wires and received a shock which resulted in almost instant death. Several persons who went to assist received shocks which knocked them to the ground.

Murderous Strikers.

Connellsville (Pa.) special: There was another attempt to dynamite a house by strikers near the Trotter works. A bomb was thrown at the home of John Bailey, a non-union coke worker. The missile struck a tree in front of the house. It exploded with deafening report, shattering windows and splintering the tree. Had the bomb struck the house a number of lives would have been lost, as all of the Bailey family were at home and asleep. There is no clue to the perpetrators.

Threw a Bomb.

An attempt was made to wreck a Burlington engine at Chicago by exploding a dynamite bomb under the wheels of a locomotive. Two men were seriously injured. The engine was proceeding slowly along the Fan Handle tracks, near Twenty-fifth street, when the front wheel struck a small obstruction. An explosion followed which lifted the heavy engine from the track, and shattered the forward trucks and drivers.

Five Hundred Killed.

Paris special: A dispatch from St. Louis, Senegal, says that a force of natives, led by Ali Kari, a Marabout, who recently preached at Jehad, in Badigara, made an attack upon the French forces. The latter repulsed the natives, and, following their advantage, captured their stronghold. Ali Kari and 500 of his supporters were killed. Six officers, fifteen Europeans, and 128 natives were wounded.

Fire at Celina, Ohio.

Celina (Ohio) special: Fire started in two buildings and quickly communicated to others and then to the business portion of the city. The flames destroyed Mertzner & Pufer's machinery store, the National Hotel, postoffice, Citizens' and Commercial banks, Wyckoff's drug store, and a dozen other business houses, causing a loss estimated at $150,000, with about $30,000 insurance.

Illinois Republicans.

The Illinois Republican State Convention nominated the following ticket: State Treasurer, Henry Wulff of Chicago; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Prof. S. M. Ingliss; Trustees State University, S. A. Bullard, Alex McLean, and Mrs. J. M. Flower of Chicago.

Three Men Drowned.

Menominee (Mich.) special: Charles I. Martin, a stock dealer, and two fishermen who started to take him to Sturgeon Bay, were drowned. The sunken boat has been located near Green Island, and a tug was sent to Sturgeon Bay for a diver.

Town on Fire.

KEOKUK (Iowa) special: The town of Bonaparte, Iowa, twenty miles away, is burning up. The officials have just asked aid from Keokuk. Large woolen mills and clothing factories are there.

Debs at Terre Haute.

President Debs, of the American Railway Union, is at his home in Terre Haute, Ind. He will remain there until the convention of August 2 in Chicago.

Only Took Seven Rounds.

Minneapolis special: Tommy Danforth was knocked out in the seventh round at the Twin City Athletic Club, by Harry Finnick, the "Arkansas Kid."

Drowned While Fishing.

Charles F. Dana and F. M. Luther, two well-known St. Paul men, have been drowned at Isle Royal by the capsizing of their fishing boat.

Soldiers Going Home.

The Seventh Infantry, National Guards, have been relieved from duty at Chicago. This leaves but three infantry companies in the city.

Mangled by Machinery.

James Tower, employed in the Tower & Craven Butter-dish Factory, Madison, Ind., was mangled by machinery, dying soon after.

Matched for a Race.

Buffalo seecial: Robert J. and Mascot have been matched for a special race, best two in three, for $2,500.

WAR OPENS IN COREA

COREANS ATTACK THE JAPANESE AND MEET DEFEAT.

Hostilities Begun Under the Direct Instigation of the Chinese—Japanese Cruiser Sinks a Chinese Transport in an Engagement.

Other Nations Concerned.

Oriental civilization is to be put to the test of modern warfare, and before they are through, Russia, France, Germany, and England herself may be involved. Trade rivalry will have something to do with it, but territorial extension more. A dispatch received from Nagasaki, on the southwest side of the Island of Kioo-Sioo, Japan, says that a detachment of Corean troops, at the instigation of the Chinese resident, attacked the Japanese garrison and were defeated. A later telegram says that a Japanese cruiser and a Chinese transport have been engaged, and that the cruiser sunk the transport. The British consul has received a telegram from the British charge d'affaires at Tokio stating that the Japanese have undertaken to regard Shanghai as outside of the sphere of operations. A special to Bleecher's News Agency from Yokohama states that the Coreans and Chinese engaged in a battle with Tingsis rebels, and a large number were killed. It is reported that the Corean king has been kidnaped by the Japanese. The Chinese Consul at Nagasaki has ordered all Chinese to leave their homes. Eight Japanese and three Chinese men-of-war and 2,000 troops are at Junzen.

So far as the case has been presented to American readers Japan has the better side. Corea is the cause of the prospective war, and her commercial interests in the hermit kingdom are paramount. She has many of her subjects there, and the trade is largely in Japanese hands. She has a further grievance in the protection given to assassination by Chinese officials. China, on her part, has the claim, centuries old, of Corean vassalage. She can't let her vassal be invaded and subdued by another country, even though the dependency of Corea has been a tradition rather than a condition. China is the more powerful in numbers. Her soldiers are well officered. Her people are the more warlike. But Japan has the better navy. She has also the benefit of western ideas in her navy. She would be the quicker to utilize all modern inventions of warfare, and the opinion of military experts is that the nation which is quickest to avail itself of these inventions is sure to win.

Japan was the first of the Asiatic nations to open her doors to western ideas. She encouraged intercourse. China is still closed except at a few ports. Her trade and commerce are undeveloped. The empire is less homogeneous than Japan. But she has her great chancellor, the Bismarck of the East, and his plan will undoubtedly be to have other nations fight Chinese battles. So it may be that the speck on the Oriental horizon will darken the European skies, and the long-postponed war, which will determine the strength of the triple alliance and place Russia and France side by side in the battlefield, may even now be rumbling in the East.

Cause of the Trouble.

The Corean peasant, though patient under great grievances, is quick tempered and is apt to explode without preliminary notice when adroit politicians inflame his mind with the contemplation of his wrongs. This has occurred three times within the past fifteen years. This time, the uprising occurred in the region around the capital itself, and, of course, most of the interests of the foreign element and the Government of the easy-going and generally well-meaning King were directly menaced. Then came the King's appeal to China for troops and Japan's uninvited occupancy of the port of Chemulpo with sufficient force to make her mistress of the situation at the heart of Corea.

She did the same thing in 1882 and 1884, and exacted the most complete reparation for injuries inflicted upon her subjects and their property in Corea. For centuries she has repeatedly invaded the peninsula, and the only excuse she has recently advanced for such proceedings is that her people have large financial interests in the country. There was a time, long ago, when Japan asserted that Corea was her vassal, but she has done nothing for ages to make her claim valid. In fact, Corea has, for hundreds of years, been one of the vassal states of China, and, although Japan pretends to ignore the relationship, she knows very well that it exists. It is her present attempt to revolutionize the traditional state of things in Corea that may very easily give rise to complications of a formidable kind.

Japan has now come forward with entirely new demands. She says she is tired of sending armies into Corea for the purpose of protecting her large interests there. There is no doubt that she is deeply concerned in the peace and prosperity of Corea.

A few weeks ago Japan demanded that China join her in imposing fiscal reform upon the country and in the correction of political abuses, so as to do away with the periodical insurrections that completely upset the country and inflict great annoyance and damage upon all foreigners engaged there. This seems to be a progressive and a laudable idea, but conservative and suspicious China declined the proposal, with thanks. Her answer was that it is her traditional policy not to interfere forcibly in the internal affairs of a vassal state. Thereupon Japan replied that if China would not help her reform the country she would undertake the task herself. It is this new phase of Corean affairs that may lead to ugly complications, and make the Pacific border of Asia for awhile an object of particular attention to all the nations.

CORN IS PARCHED.

Crops of All Kinds in Need of Rain—Wheat Yield Is Good.

The report of the United States weather bureau on the condition of crops, harvest, etc., throughout the country for the week shows that in many sections, notably Iowa, Minnesota, South Dakota, North Dakota, corn is suffering for rain, and in these and other sections fruit and late crops have been damaged by the same causes. Wheat, in the main, did only fairly well, except Illinois, where the quality is good and the yield the largest in years. The report as sent out by the Chicago station is as follows:

Indiana—Hot and dry until Friday, when numerous local rains fell, benefiting corn in many fields; wheat and rye threshing; oats and hay harvest continue with good yields.

Illinois—Rainfall except in a few counties below the normal and badly distributed; temperature below normal and sunshine normal; where rain fell crop conditions improved; wheat yield and quality best in years; oats and rye harvest about over; more rain needed.

Wisconsin—Drought continues, though partly broken by light shower; wheat, rye and barley most in stack; oats ready to cut, drop light except early sown, which will average well; pastures burned up and potatoes suffering severely from drought. Monday was the hottest day of the season, the thermometer ranging from 105 to 108 in the shade.

Iowa—Drought continues unbroken; corn in critical condition and damaged in driest districts; stock suffering for feed and water.

Minnesota—Warmer than usual, with unabated drought, injuring corn, potatoes and pasturage the most; wheat harvest begun, and barley, hay and oat harvest progressing, with yield rather light generally.

South Dakota—Except in western and a few eastern counties all crops injured, some permanently, by high temperature and dry atmosphere; some relief by showers; wheat harvest advanced; berry good, yield light.

Kansas—Conditions generally favorable to corn, apples, meadows and pastures; thrashing of wheat and oats in progress, yield fair, with good berry; prairie hay being cut, quality good, yield fine.

Oklahoma—Temperature and sunshine normal, with many local showers, which have improved most crops; corn generally very poor, but cotton magnificent; melons and vegetables in abundance; grass and pastures poor.

Nebraska—Week excessively dry and all vegetation has suffered severely; corn seriously injured everywhere and many fields ruined.

Ohio—Corn suffered seriously from the drought, but reviving from rains; haying completed, with light yield secured in fine condition; oat harvest well advanced, but yield shortened by drought; wheat thrashing out with large yield; late potatoes, tobacco and young clover and pastures damaged.

Missouri—Good showers in central and southwest sections greatly benefited corn; in other sections drought continues, pastures failing, water scarce, and unless rain comes soon much corn will be ruined; hay crop light, but secured in good condition.

Michigan—Temperature and sunshine above normal, rainfall below; excessively dry, hot weather has injured late corn, potatoes, garden truck and pastures; drought broken by general rain, which revived vegetation somewhat, but more needed; wheat cut and thrashing begun.

Arkansas—Weather favorable in all but northwest portion, where crops are needing rain; cotton forming and fruiting well and have most excellent prospects; corn much improved and promises fair crop; sweet potatoes fine and second crop of Irish potatoes planted.

Kentucky—Cloudy and cool; drought broken in most sections by showers during the week; crops generally improved and outlook for corn fine, but tobacco still backward; early potatoes very short; hay harvest completed, with very light yield; hemp doing poorly.

North Dakota—Everything suffering for rain; harvesting of rye and barley commenced and haying nearly finished, with light crop; corn doing very well.

SENATOR HILL IS SARCASTIC.

Compares the President's Opponents with Conspirator: Against Cæsar.

Another dramatic scene occurred in the Senate Tuesday, but President Cleveland, instead of being, as on the previous day, the object of attack by the leader of his party was defended with vigor and vim. Mr. Cleveland's champion was his old political rival and enemy, Senator David Bennett Hill, of New York. The New York Senator spoke for almost two hours to breathless galleries and a full Senate. Several times the presiding officer was unable to restrain the enthusiasm his remarks evoked, notably when Mr. Hill declared that personal considerations would not prevent him from defending the President when he was unjustly attacked. He defended Mr. Cleveland's letter, his right to send it, and the sentiments it contained, and made a point against his adversaries when he pointed out that they criticised the President for siding with the House when they admitted that they had used all their influence to induce him to interpose in behalf of the Senate amendments to the tariff bill.

He took up Mr. Gorman's argument and met it point by point in a manner satisfactory to himself, at least, and concluded with a piece of satire that stung those on the floor and tickled the galleries immeasurably. Mr. Gorman compared Mr. Hill to Iago. Mr. Hill likened those who had joined in the assault on Mr. Cleveland to the conspirators who stabbed Cæsar to death at the foot of Pompey's statue in the Roman Senate.

TO INVESTIGATE THE STRIKE.

The United States Commissioner of Labor Is Chairman of the Commission.

The chairman of the commission to investigate the recent strike is Carroll D. Wright, the United States Commissioner of Labor. Mr. Wright was born in Dunbarton, N. H., in 1840. He received a good education and studied law. Before finishing his studies he enlisted in the 14th New Hampshire Inf. He was made a lieutenant at Shenandoah Valley. In 1869 he removed from New Hampshire to Boston.

CARROLL D. WRIGHT.

After serving in the State Senate he was appointed chief of the State bureau of statistics. While holding this office he recieved his present appointment. In 1880 he prepared an extensive report on the "Factory System of the United States." This commanded instant attention and made his reputation. His appointment as chief of the investigating committee gives universal satisfaction.

SIX MEN PERISH IN FLAMES.

Firemen Lose Their Lives at Washington—One Hundred Horses Burned.

At Washington, D. C., the immense stables of the Knox Transfer Company caught fire. The blaze spread rapidly, and soon the entire building was destroyed. A dispatch says: At least six firemen lost their lives by the walls falling on them and crushing them. Several other men were badly hurt. Over 100 horses were burned to death.

SHRIVELS THE CROPS.

THROUGHOUT THE WEST INTENSE HEAT PREVAILS.

Country Scorched by a Sun of Tropica Fierceness—Mercury Passes the Century Mark, and in Some Cases Goes as High as 110—Rain Sorely Needed.

Loss Will Be Millions.

A hot wind from the south swept all over Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and other Western States all day Wednesday, sending the mercury up beyond all records. In nearly all cases the century mark was passed, even on the conservative governmental signal service thermometers. Private instruments in some places are reported as high as 108 in the shade. The heat lasted all day and into the night. Vegetation was dried up and the corn crop in many districts has reached a condition where even rain will not save it. The following reports are gleaned from the press dispatches:

St. Louis—98 degrees in the shade.

Quincy, Ill.—The mercury marked 103 degrees in the shade.

Abingdon, Ill.—The thermometer registered 105 degrees in the shade.

Marshalltown, Iowa—The thermometer registered as high as 108 degrees in the shade.

Omaha—Temperature was 103 degrees in the shade. Great damage will be done to crops.

Boscobel, Wis.—A high, scorching wind has been blowing here. The corn in this section is a total failure.

New Hampton, Iowa—A hot south wind blew all day, scorching vegetation like the blast from a furnace.

Holland, Mich.—The heat has been intense here for several days, the thermometer registering 100 degrees in the shade.

Kansas City, Mo.—Intense heat prevails. No rain has fallen for two weeks, and the corn crop in some places has been ruined.

Dubuque, Iowa—Wednesday was the hottest day in the year, 100 degrees in the shade. Wind, as if from a furnace, blew a gale.

Waterloo, Iowa—Thermometers registered 105 degrees in the shade. A terribly hot wind prevailed, doing much damage to the corn.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Mississippi River is at present the lowest here it has been for many years. Thermometer showed 96.2 degrees.

Bloomington, Ill.—Wednesday was the hottest day of all this unprecedentedly warm summer. The mercury stood above 100 most of the day.

Sioux City, Iowa—The thermometer went up to 107 degrees at the weather bureau. Hot south winds blew, and immense damage was done to the corn.

Emporia, Kas.—Not a drop of rain has fallen here during the last thirty-one days. The result is that the corn crop in this vicinity is ruined beyond recovery.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The thermometer registered 104. Hot winds blew a gale from the south, withering the corn and doing immense damage to vegetables and other crops.

Yankton, S. D.—For six days the temperature has been at 100 degrees. Wednesday it registered 110 degrees. The hot winds have scorched the growing crops beyond recovery.

Concordia, Kas.—At this point the therm meter reached 104 degrees, the highest since the United States Signal Office was established here in 1885. Corn is greatly damaged.

Hastings, Neb.—110 degrees in the shade. The high wind prevailing has completely ruined the prospects for corn in Central Nebraska and no amount of rain would be of any avail now.

Independence, Iowa—A hot wave passed over this section, making it the warmest ever known. The thermometer stood 110 degrees in the shade for six hours. Crops are materially injured.

Des Moines, Iowa—The heat here Wednesday greatest in ten years according to official records. Agricultural Iowa is in a deplorable condition. Many farmers are unable to find feed for their cattle, as the pastures are all bare, and for water they have to drive them ten and fifteen miles in places to reach the rivers, as all the wells are dry. It has not rained in many parts of the State for six weeks. The corn crop is almost beyond redemption.

SLAYER OF CARNOT.

Young Italian Anarchist Who Stabbed the President of France.

Caserio Santo Heronymo has sufficiently recovered from the blows he received at the time he murdered President Carnot, to be recognizable and a photograph of his features has been taken by the French authorities. He is 21 years of age and is considered much more intelligent than the ordinary anarchist. By birth he is an Italian. His parents were poor and unable to furnish him with instructors, except for a short time. He was fond of reading, however, and his mind was early attracted to anarchistic literature. In 1892 he was sentenced to a term of imprisonment at Milan, for distributing anarchist pamphlets among the troops there. The next year he went to France, settling near Lyons. It is generally thought that he had accomplices, though he insists that he acted alone.

C. S. HERONYMO.

Sparks from the Wires.

CHOLERA has broken out at Dantzic, in Northern Prussia.

PHIL DARLING was drowned at David City, Neb., while bathing.

TWO UNKNOWN men were struck by a train and killed at Altoona, Pa.

A STATUE of Gen. John A. Logan was unveiled at Hot Springs, S. D.

A RECEIVER has been appointed for the Lansing (Mich.) Lumber Company.

HANS TOLFSEN, aged 70, was killed at Moline, Ill., by falling from a haymow.

FOURTEEN prisoners attempted to break jail at Detroit, Mich. Two escaped.

COMSTOCK'S HOTEL and five cottages at Riverside, R. I., burned. Loss, $80,000.

CHARLES A. DANA and wife, of New York, have returned from their European trip.

THE English anarchist Mowbray addressed an audience of 500 people in New York.

TWENTY convicts took part in a riot in the penitentiary at Jeffersonville, Ind., and Robert Buckner was fatally injured.

Hoosier Happenings

MINOR WEBB, pioneer resident of Frankton, is dead.

BROWNSTOWN has voted in favor of two gravel road projects.

D. M. TURNER, New Ross, was thrown from a buggy, and seriously injured.

JOHN WELLS was caught under a falling derrick at Paoli, and serously injured.

FRANK BRUCE was run over by a hand-car at Loogootee, and seriously injured.

MRS. JOHN LENNOX of Cowan, who cut her throat with suicidal intent, has since died.

COPPER BROS & ZOOKE'S factory at Nappanee is partially in ashes. Damage is $3,500.

LEANDER MCCONNELL, farmer near Noblesville, was found dead in the woods. Probably apoplexy.

CHAS. GREGORY is lying dangerously hurt at Monrovia. A colt which he was riding reared up and fell on him.

GEN SILAS COLGROVE'S barn together with a large quantity of wheat, was destroyed by fire near Farmland. Loss, $20,000.

WALTER, the 13-year-old son of Thomas Scroggins of Morgantown, while playing in a wheat bin in an elevator was caught in a chute and suffocated.

LOUIS HEIBLER of the Soldiers' Home, was run over and killed by a passenger train near the depot at Gas City. He was a member of Company G, Fifty-ninth Indiana Infantry.

BRANT DAWSON and James Yowell, two young business men, were drowned while bathing in the Ohio River at Mt. Vernon. Dawson was overcome with cramps and Yowell tried to save him, and both met watery deaths.

THE Bedford Fair and Trotting Association meeting opens Sept. 17. Three thousand dollars will be offered in the speed department. Mr. Frank Owens has succeeded Frank O. Stannard as secretary of the association.

THERE was a happy reunion in Muncie recently, when Mr. John Addison and Mrs. W. H. H. Johnson, brother and sister, met for the first time in twenty-five years. They were separated at the home in Fairmount, W. Va., in 1869.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAM and Thomas Slattery, two young men of Crawfordsville, were driving at a high rate of speed along a dark road, when suddenly they collided with a sawlog wagon with terrific force. Slattery's brains were dashed out, and Cunningham received injuries from which he died.

WILL SHERRY, who recently came to Anderson from Dayton, Ohio, was horribly mangled in the Anderson paper mill. He lost his footing while oiling the engine and was thrown into a big fan that caught him on the arms and breast. When rescued his arms, hands, and face were hacked almost into mincemeat.

JOHN L. GENTRY, of Warrick County, convicted of the murder of C. J. Agee in 1886 and sentenced to life imprisonment, has been paroled by order of the Chief Executive. Agee was a candidate for office, and the quarrel which resulted in his murder originated over Gentry's refusal to drink with him, claiming that he was a rebel.

AN accident occurred at Point Isabel, a small village a few miles north of Elwood, which resulted in the death of the 10-year-old son of William Compton. The boy, who was a paralytic cripple, had been sent by a neighbor to a blacksmith shop with an unruly horse, to get it shod. The animal threw the boy off on the road and struck him a number of times with his fore feet, causing death.

A MURDER occurred at Mt. Vernon recently. George Powell went home drunk and abused his wife, and in the quarrel that ensued seized her and attempted to cut her throat. She broke loose from him and grabbed a club, striking her husband over the forehead, inflicting injuries which caused his death in two hours. The woman was arrested. She says she acted in self-defense, and appears unconcerned.

GOV. MATTHEWS announces that the claims of the members of the militia who served in the field during the various strikes will be paid between the 15th and 20th of August. There is no fund available among the resources of the State without a special appropriation, but the Governor intends to become a borrower on the credit of the State at the bank for the amount needed. The total amount required for the payment will be nearly $40,000.

SEVERAL weeks ago George Heron opened a quart shop at Greensburg, and the citizens decidedly objected. The other night about midnight a crowd of masked men went to his house, took him from his bed, tied him to a telephone pole and gave him fifty lashes on the bare back with beech switches. Heron shows the marks of severe punishment. He claims to have the names of six of his assailants, all prominent citizens of the county, and proposes to make things warm for them.

A VERY peculiar accident occurred near Newcastle. Mrs. Frank Sheets and Mrs. George Lewis were out driving when their horse became frightened and ran one-fourth of a mile. Mrs. Lewis jumped from the buggy, breaking one arm and being otherwise badly bruised. Mrs. Sheets was thrown from the rig and sustained fatal injuries. Her corset burst, and all the stays were driven into her stomach, making wounds from which she can not recover.

UNITED AT LAST

BY

Unfashionable as was the season, Mrs. Walsingham was still in town. She had no rustic retreat of her own, and she was not in that charmed circle, patrician or millionaire, which rejoices in country houses. Furthermore, she abhorred the beauties of Nature, and regarded winter residence in the country as an exile bleaker than Ovid's banishment to chill and savage Tomis. If she had been rich enough to have indulged her caprices, she would have gone allegally begun the year in Paris, but she had an income which just enabled her to live elegantly without any indulgence of caprices. This winter, too, she had peculiar reasons for staying in town, over and above all other motives. She stayed in the snug little house in Half-Moon street, therefore, and was "at home" on Saturday evenings just as if the season had been at its flood. The society with which she filled her miniature drawing-room was literary, musical, artistic, dramatic—just the most delightful society imaginable, with the faintest soupcon of Bohemianism. She had chosen Saturday evening because journalists who were free on no other night could drop in, and Mrs. Walsingham adored journalists.

On this particular Saturday, three days after the scene in the summer-house, James Wyatt had made his appearance in the Half-Moon street drawing-room just when most people were going away. He contrived to outstay them all, though Mrs. Walsingham's manner was not so cordial as to invite him to linger. She yawned audibly behind the edge of her large black fan when Mr. Wyatt took up his stand in front of the chimney-piece with the air of a man who is going to be a fixture for the next hour.

"Have you heard the news?" he asked, after a brief silence.

"From Davenant? Yes, I am kept pretty well au courant."

"A sharp little thing, that Duport."

"Very."

Silence again, during which Mrs. Walsingham surveys her violet velvet gown and admires the Venice point flounce which relieves its somber hue.

"Clara," said James Wyatt, with a suddenness that startled the lady into looking up at him, "I think I have performed my part of the bargain. When are you going to perform yours?"

"I don't quite understand you."

"Oh, yes, you do, Mrs. Walsingham. There are some things that will hardly bear to be discussed, even between conspirators. I am not going to enter into details. When I found you in this room three years ago on Gilbert Sinclair's wedding-day, you had but one thought, one desire—your whole being was athirst for revenge. You are revenged, and I have been the chief instrument in the realization of your wish. A wicked wish on your part; doubly wicked on mine, with less passion and weaker hatred, to be your aider and abettor. Soit. I am content to bear the burden of my guilt, but not to be cheated of my reward. What I have done I have done for your sake—to win your love."

"To buy me," she said, "as slaves are bought, with a price. That's what you mean. You don't suppose I shall love you for working Gilbert Sinclair's ruin?"

"You wanted to see him ruined."

"Yes, when I was mad with rage and grief. Did you think you were talking to a sane woman that evening after Gilbert's marriage? You were talking to a woman whose brain had been on fire with despair and jealousy through the long hours of that agonizing day. What should I long for but revenge then?"

"Well, you have had your heart's desire, and it seems to me that your conduct since that day has been pretty consistent with the sentiments you gave expression to then. Do you mean to tell me that you are going to throw me over now—that you are going to repudiate the promise you made me—a promise on which I have counted with unflinching faith in your honor?"

"In my honor!" cried Mrs. Walsingham, with a bitter sneer, all the more bitter because it was pointed against herself. "In the honor of a woman who could act as I have acted!"

"I forgive anything to passion; but to betray me would be deliberate cruelty."

"Would it?" she added, smiling at him. "I think it would be more cruel to keep my word, and make your life miserable."

"You shall make me as miserable as you please, if you will only have me," urged Wyatt. "Come, Clara, I have been your slave for the last three years. I have sacrificed interests which most men hold sacred to serve or to please you. It would be unparalleled baseness to break your promise."

"My promise was wrung from me in a moment of blind passion," cried Mrs. Walsingham. "If the Prince of Darkness had asked me to seal a covenant with him that day, I should have consented as freely as I consented to your bargain."

"The comparison is flattering to me," replied Mr. Wyatt, looking at her darkly from under bent brows. "There is a stage at which outraged love turns to keenest hate, and James Wyatt's feelings are fast approaching that stage. "In one word, do you mean to keep faith with me? Yes, or no?"

"No," answered Mrs. Walsingham, with a steady look that meant defiance. "No, and again, no. Tell the world what you have done, and how I have cheated you. Publish your wrongs if you dare. I have never loved but one man in my life, and his name is Gilbert Sinclair. And now good-night, Mr. Wyatt, or, rather, good-morning, for it is Sunday, and I don't want to be late for church."

CHAPTER XX.

DR. HOLLENDORF.

The new year began with the ringing of parish bells, some genuine joviality in cottages and servants' halls, and various conventional rejoicings in polite society, but silence and solitude still reigned at Davenant. The chief rooms—saloon and dining-room, library and music-room—were abandoned altogether by the gloomy master of the house. They might as well have put on their Holland pinafores and shut their shutters, as in the absence of the family, for nobody used them. Gilbert Sinclair lived in his snuggery at the end of the long gallery, ate and drank there, read his newspapers and wrote his letters, smoked and dozed in the dull winter evenings. He rode a good deal in all kinds of weather, going far afield, no one knew where, and coming home at dusk, splashed to the neck, and with his horse in a condition peculiarly aggravating to grooms and stable-boys.

"Them there 'osses will 'ave mud fever before long," said the hirelings, dejectedly. "There's that blessed chestnut he set such store by a month ago with 'ardly a leg to stand on for windgalls, and the roan filly's over at knees a'ready."

"He" meant Mr. Sinclair, who was riding his finest horses with a prodigal recklessness.

Constance Sinclair lived to see the new year, though she did not know why the church bells rang out on the quiet midnight. She started up from her pillow with a frightened look when she heard that joy peal, crying that those were her wedding bells, and that she must get ready for church.

"To please you, papa," she said. "For your sake, papa. Pity my broken heart."

There had been days and nights at the end of the old year, when Dr. Webb had trembled for the sweet young life which he had watched almost from its beginning. A great physician had come down from London every day, and had gone away with a fee proportionate to his reputation, after diagnosing the disease in a most wonderful manner; but it was the little country apothecary who saved Constance Sinclair's life. His watchfulness, his devotion, had kept the common enemy at bay. The life-current, which had ebbed very low, flowed gradually back, and after lying for ten days in an utterly prostrate and apathetic state, the patient was now strong enough to rise and be dressed, and lie on the sofa in her pretty morning-room, while Melanie, or honest Martha Briggs, who had come back to nurse her old mistress, read to her, to divert her mind, the doctor said; but, alas! as yet the mind seemed incapable of being awakened to interest in the things of this mortal life. When Constance spoke it was of the past—of her childhood or girlhood, of people and scenes familiar to her in that happy time. Of her husband she never spoke, and his rare visits to her room had a disturbing influence. So much so that Dr. Webb suggested that for the present Mr. Sinclair should refrain from seeing his wife.

"I can feel for you, my dear sir," he said, sympathetically. "I quite understand your anxiety, but you may trust me and the nurses. You will have all intelligence of progress. The mind at present is somewhat astray."

"Do you think it will always be so?" asked Sinclair. "Will she never recover her senses?"

"My dear sir, there is everything to hope. She is so young, and the disease is altogether so mysterious, whether the effect of the blow—that unlucky fall—or whether simply a development of the brooding melancholy which we had to fight against before the accident, it is impossible to say. We are quite in the dark. Perfect seclusion and tranquillity may do much."

Lord Clanyarde came to see his daughter nearly every day. He had come back to Marchbrook from far more agreeable scenes on purpose to be near her. But his presence seemed to give Constance no pleasure. There were days on which she looked at him with a wandering gaze that went to his heart, or a blank and stony look that appalled him by its awful likeness to death. There were other days when she knew him. On these days her talk was all of the past, and it was clear that memory had taken the place of intelligence.

Lord Clanyarde felt all the pangs of remorse as he contemplated this spectacle of a broken heart, a mind wrecked by sorrow.

"Yet I can hardly blame myself for her sad fate, poor child," he argued. "She was happy enough, bright enough, before she lost her baby."

The new year was a week old, and since the first rally there had been no change for the better in Constance Sinclair's condition; and now there came a decided change for the worse. Strength dwindled, a dull apathy took possession of the patient, and even memory seemed a blank.

Dr. Webb was in despair, and fairly owned his helplessness. The London physician came and went, and took his fee, and went on diagnosing with profoundest science, and tried the last resources of the pharmacopœia, with an evident conviction that he could minister to a mind diseased; but nothing came of his science, save that the patient grew daily weaker, as if fate and physic were too much for one feeble sufferer to cope withal.

Gilbert Sinclair was told that unless a change came very speedily his wife must die.

"If we could rouse her from this apathetic state," said the physician; "any shock—any surprise—especially of a pleasurable kind—that would act on the torpid brain might do wonders even yet; but all our attempts to interest her have so far been useless."

Lord Clanyarde was present when this opinion was pronounced. He went home full of thought, more deeply concerned for his daughter than he had ever been yet for any mortal except himself.

"Poor little Connie!" he thought, remembering her in her white frock and blue sash; "she was always my favorite—the prettiest, the gentlest, the most high-bred of all my girls, but I didn't know she had such a hold upon my heart."

At Marchbrook Lord Clanyarde found an unexpected visitor waiting for him—a visitor whom he received with a very cordial greeting.

Soon after dusk on the following evening Lord Clanyarde returned to Davenant, but not alone. He took with him an elderly gentleman, with white hair, worn rather long, and a white beard—a person of almost patriarchal appearance, but somewhat disfigured by a pair of smoke-colored spectacles of the kind that are vulgarly known as "gig-lamps."

The stranger's clothes were of the shabbiest, yet even in their decay looked the garments of a gentleman. He wore ancient shepherd's plaid trousers, and a bottle-green overcoat of exploded cut.

Gilbert Sinclair was in the hall when Lord Clanyarde and his companion arrived. Mr. Wyatt had just come down from London, and the two men were smoking their cigars by the great hall fire, the noble old, cavernous hearth which had succeed the more mediæval fashion of a fire in the center of the hall.

"My dear Sinclair," began Lord Clanyarde, with a somewhat hurried and nervous air, which might be forgiven in a man whose favorite daughter languished between life and death, "I have ventured to bring an old friend of mine, Doctor Hollendorf, a gentleman who has a great practice in Berlin, and who has had vast experience in the treatment of mental disorders. Doctor Hollendorf, Mr. Sinclair. I beg your pardon, Wyatt, how do you do?" interjected Lord Clanyarde, offering the solicitor a couple of fingers. "Now, Gilbert, I should much like Doctor Hollendorf to see my poor Constance. It may do no good, but it can do no harm; and if you have no objection, with Dr. Webb's concurrence, of course, I should like—"

"Webb is in the house," answered Gilbert. "You can ask him for yourself. I have no objection."

This was said with a weary air, as if the speaker had ceased to take any interest in life. Gilbert hardly looked at the German, or Anglo-German, doctor; but James Wyatt, who was of a more observant turn, scrutinized him attentively.

"Here is Webb," said Gilbert, as the little Doctor came tripping down the great staircase, with the lightsome activity of his profession, rubbing his hands as he came.

Lord Clanyarde presented Dr. Hollendorf to the rural practitioner, and stated his wish. Dr. Webb had no objection to offer. Any wish of a father's must be sacred.

"You will come up and see her at once?" he said, interrogatively.

"At once," answered the stranger, with a slightly guttural accent.

The three men went up the staircase, Gilbert remaining behind.

"Aren't you going?" asked Wyatt.

"No: my presence generally disturbs her. Why should I go? I'm not wanted."

"I should go if I were you. How do you know what this man is? An impudent quack, in all probability. You ought to be present."

"Do you think so?"

"Decidedly."

"Then I'll go."

"Watch your wife when that man is talking to her," said Wyatt in a lower tone, as Gilbert moved away.

"What do you mean?" asked the other, turning sharply around.

"What I say. Watch your wife!"

Mrs. Sinclair's morning-room was a spacious, old-fashioned apartment, with three long windows, one opening into a wide balcony, from which an iron stair led down to a garden, small and secluded, laid out in the Dutch style—a garden which had been always sacred to the mistress of Davenant. There were heavy oak shutters, and a complicated arrangement of bolts and bars to the three windows, but as these shutters were rarely closed, the stair and the balcony might be considered as a convenience specially provided for the benefit of burglars. No burglars had, however, yet been heard of at Davenant.

There was a piano in the room. There were well-filled book-cases, pictures, quaint old china—all things that make life pleasant to the mind that is at ease, and which may be supposed to offer some consolation to the care-burdened spirit. The fire blazed merrily, and on a sofa in front of it Constance reclined, dressed in a loose white cashmere gown, hardly whiter than the wasted oval face, from which the dark-brown hair was drawn back by a band of blue ribbon, just as it had been ten years ago, when Constance was "little Connie," flitting about the lawn at Marchbrook like a white and blue butterfly.

THE ERSE LANGUAGE.

A Mellifluous Tongue Still Spoken by Upward of 2,000,000.

We are glad to notice as an event of literary importance, says the New York Sun, the recent organization in Providence, R. I., of a Celtic society, the object of which is to revive interest in the mellifluous and influential tongue of Ireland.

No other language, having itself no great masterpiece of literature, has had such effect on modern literature as the Celtic. To it we owe many of the fairy tales of our childhood, some of Shakspeare's plays, some of the incidents detailed in the Arthurian poems, even some of those in the Divine Comedy, are drawn from Celtic sources. It was said of Washington: "Nature made him childless that he might be the father of his country;" so it might almost be said of the Celtic language, "Nature left it childless that it might be the mother of other literatures."

The Celtic language is not a dead language. One-sixth of the population of the Emerald Isle (in round numbers, 800,000 persons) understand Erse; 60,000 persons there know no other language than it: one-third of the territory of Ireland is still Celtic, so far as the ability to understand the language is concerned, and upward of 2,000,000 in this country and Canada are familiar with the tongue. The path of the new society and of its predecessors is uphill, but the ascent has an end. A century ago the Welsh language was really in worse case than the Erse is now, but by the exertions of scholars and the local clergy of Wales it was rescued, and to-day is vigorous both in Wales and America. That similar success may await the Celtic societies of this country in their patriotic labors we sincerely hope.

Brigandage in High Circles.

Brigandage is assuming alarming proportions in Europe. The official gazette at Athens announces that a new election has been ordered in a certain district of Thessaly in order to fill the seat in Parliament rendered vacant by the sentence of Congressman Kalambaka to penal servitude for complicity with the banditti infesting his province. At Palermo the Italian government has just arrested Baron de Ramo on identical grounds, a peculiar feature in his case being that he is a millionaire. In the north of Italy we have Count Serpiere, commanding an infantry regiment at Verona, and a very rich man, arrested and court-martialed for having stolen an innumerable quanity of plate, chiefly forks and spoons, which he was in the habit of pocketing wherever he dined, no matter whether it was a private house or a restaurant.

A Luminous Tree.

"Everyone has heard of luminous plants and shrubs," said a gentleman of Nevada, "but comparatively few people are aware of the existence in our State of a luminous tree of large proportions. The Indians have always entertained a wholesome dread of this tree and have a number of legends connected with it. It is a valuable landmark at night, as it can be seen half a mile away, and the phosphorus substance which exudes from it is so powerful that it is possible to read a few words of print held close to it. Several botanists and tree scientists have made purpose journeys to inspect and report on the tree, but I have never seen a really intelligent explanation of what seems to be quite a unique phenomenon."

QUITO, Ecuador, though on the line of the equator, has a mean temperature the year round but little different from that of Boston, owing to its elevation.

BY THE CROOK OF A FINGER.

How Great Deals Are Made on 'Change When Voices Cannot Be Heard.

Thousands of visitors who yearly go to the Chicago Board of Trade and watch the traders on the exchange floor from the public gallery express surprise at the rapid manner in which business is transacted. As a rule the wheat pit attracts them and they do not understand how commodities change hands with such lightning rapidity, and how hundreds of thousands and millions of bushels are bought and sold in an incredibly short space of time is to the novice a profound mystery. They do not know that the brokers do a great deal of their work by finger signs, seldom understood by the outsider.

It requires only a fraction of a second to buy and sell 50,000 bushels of wheat.

"I'll sell fifty 'Sep' at an eighth," cries one of the brokers, and he has hardly finished speaking before another on the opposite side yells "sold." The trade is put down on the trading card and the transaction which involves over $30,000 has been completed.

The number of bushels offered for sale is indicated by holding up one finger for each 5,000 bushels. So in selling 50,000 bushels the broker simply holds up both hands and waves them from him, which explains itself as wanting to dispose of the lot. In addition to this, brokers have a complete finger code by which the condition of the market is communicated. The signs generally used are as follows:

The first finger held up stands for ⅛ of one cent, as the traders all know the main price. If, for instance, the first sale of wheat after the market opened was made at 60 cents and the next at 60⅛ cents, the trader simply holds up one finger for the advance of ⅛ of one cent. The upward position of the finger is to show the upward course of the market. Should the market be bearish and the price decline to 59⅞ cents, the signal for this would be a closed hand with the thumb pointing downward. This shows the price ⅞ of a cent and the status of the market downward. The accompanying cuts show how the signaling is carried on.

DR. STOILOFF.

Chosen President of the New Ministry of Bulgaria.

Dr. Stoiloff, the President of the new ministry of Bulgaria, is a native of Philippopolis, and the son of a prominent merchant of that city. He was born in the early '50's and was educated at Robert College, in Constantinople, and Heidelberg University. He resided several years in Paris, but in 1877, at the beginning of the Russo-Turkish war, returned to Bulgaria and has since been identified with Bulgarian politics, being a faithful supporter of Prince Alexander to the time the latter left Bulgaria in 1886. He is a lawyer by profession.

Opera Glasses.

A novel and ingenious attachment for opera glasses has been patented by a gentleman residing near Sydney, New South Wales, that will enable the user to see behind as well as before. The patent takes the form of a removable frame carrying the adjusting mechanism for a pair of reflectors, which are intended to be placed in front of the object glasses of the opera glasses. Any desired inclination can be given to these reflectors. The invention is also applicable to telescopes.

"HARDUP—Hello, Charlie! Your trousers bag at the knees. Dedbroke—I wish they bagged at the pocket-book!—Truth.

IRATE FATHER—When I die, I shall leave you without a penny. Calm Son—Certainly. You can't take money along, you know.—Truth.

BOSTON girl—Do you know, I fancy heaven will be much like Boston. Chicago girl—Why? Because there won't be men enough to go around.—Life.

WIFEY—The proof of the pudding is in the eating. The brute—I know; but I think scientific research has already numbered enough martyrs.—Truth.

GUIDE—Now you will have to be careful; many a tourist has broken his neck at this spot. Gent (to his wife)—Augusta, you go first.—Spare Moments.

"GIBBS is a great lawyer. His cross-examination always embarrasses a witness." "How does he do it?" "Asks if each statement made in direct examination is true."—Truth.

"THERE'S a friend down stairs waiting for you; says he wants you only for a minute." Mr. Catchon—Here, James, take this ten dollars and keep it until I come back.—Fun.

NELLIE—Why do you send out your wedding invitations so far in advance? Millie—Many of our friends keep their money in savings banks, and have to give notice.—New York Weekly.

MRS. SUBURB—Why in the world don't you grease that lawn-mower of yours? Neighbor's Hired Man—The missus told me not to till you had your pianer tuned.—New York Weekly.

SHE—If every atom of the human body is renewed every seven years, I cannot be the same woman that you married. He—I've been suspecting that for some time.—New York Weekly.

"NOTICE Lushley at the banquet last night? Seemed to enter into the spirit of the thing freely." "Er—yes; but not so freely as the spirits of the thing entered into him."—Buffalo Courier.

SHE—Here's a bill from the doctor. He—What's it for? Ethel—I know, mamma. Doctor spoke cross to me yesterday on the street, and I stuck out my tongue at him.—Yonkers Statesman.

DEACON GRAVELEIGH—Do you believe in infant damnation, Mr. Popleigh? Popleigh (who has spent most of the night doing a ghost dance with his youngest—fervently)—You bet I do!—Truth.

"WHY," asked the boarder at the head of the table, "are ham and eggs always associated together?" "That," remarked the very bad actor, eagerly, "is just what I would like to know."—Detroit Tribune.

HAUGHTY LADY (who has just purchased a stamp)—"Must I put it on myself?" Postoffice Assistant (very politely)—"Not necessarily, madam; it will probably accomplish more if you put it on the letter."—Newark Ledger.

PATRON—Waiter, waiter! can't you hurry up that steak? I've been waiting ten minutes. Waiter—Sorry, sir; but it takes five minutes to pound it and seven to cook it. It will be ready shortly.—Arkansaw Traveler.

BOY—It's awful lucky we have our examinations for promotion now, instead of in the fall when the school opens. Father—Why? Boy—'Cause when school begins in the fall we none of us ever know anything.—Good News.

HE—Do you think, darling, that it would be advisable for me to speak to your father to-day? She—Well, hardly, dearest. He remarked this morning that the fire-crackers you gave my little brother woke him up at 3 o'clock.

WILLIS—When my wife makes me a present it is sure to be something that will last. Wallace—My wife is just like her. Five years ago she made me a present of one hundred cigars, and I have ninety-nine of them yet.—Life.

WILLIE—Say, papa, can't I have a dollar for some more fire-crackers? Slimson—But I let you have $5 this morning. Willie—I know it. But I used them all up on mamma's pet dog. Slimson—Here, my boy, take $5 more.—Life.

DASHAWAY—Here's a telegram announcing that my uncle is dead. I've been expecting it all along. Cleverton—How do you know he is dead? You haven't read it. Dashaway—No; but if he were alive it would come 'collect.'"—Brooklyn Life.

A CALLER had mentioned that a neighbor had been obliged to shoot his dog because he had grown old and cross. After he had gone, little Edith, who had been quiet since the dog was spoken of, surprised her mother by asking: "Mamma, when do you think papa will shoot Aunt Sarah?"—Tid-Bits.

License Notice.

Notice to the citizens of the town of Ashley and Smithfield township, is hereby given that the undersigned, a male inhabitant over the age of twenty-one years, will make application to the Board of Commissioners of DeKalb county, at their next regular session in September, 1894, for a license to sell spirituous, vinous and malt liquors, in a quantity less than a quart at a time, with the privilege of having the same drank on the following premises, to-wit:

Lot number three (3), block number twenty-one (21) in the original plat of the town of Ashley, DeKalb county, Indiana.

SHERMAN KNISELY.

August 2, 1894.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein Jessie Dancer is plaintiff and John Gall, and Caroline Gall his wife, Martin V. B. Cole, Louella Martine, George Martine, Bertha Knight, Chas. Knight, Elizabeth St Clair, George St. Clair, John Melville Wescott, and Lillie Wescott are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred seventy-three dollars and ten cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder on between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the court house, of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The south half (½) of the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section eight (8) in township thirty-three (33) north of range thirteen (13) east, containing twenty (20) acres, be the same more or less, situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and cost, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

DRYEST and hottest season ever known in some parts of the west, corn is ruined over large areas, and in some parts, as southwestern Kansas, farmers are abandoning their claims and moving away. This county, will lose part of its corn corn and potatoes.

WAR has been proclaimed between China and Japan. They are quarreling over the little kingdom of Korea, in which both claim certain rights, and of course the fighting will be done mostly in Korea and in Korean waters. The first thing the Japanese did was to seize the king of Korea, and in a naval fight that occurred, they scared the Chinese sailors so bad that many of them jumped overboard and were drowned. Both British and American ships landed some marines to protect British and American interests on shore.

UNION CITY, this state, as most of our readers know, stands on the state line in Randolph county, in fact a part of the town is over the line in Ohio. As Ohio's laws are in many ways different from ours, awkward things sometimes happen. During the recent parade of Barnum & Bailey's big show there, seven pickpockets and four other criminals were arrested by the police on the Indiana side, all of whom were committed to the city prison. While the city officials were viewing the procession, sympathizing friends forced the door of the calaboose and the prisoners escaped to the Ohio side.

THE PENSION ROLL.

BUT FEW NAMES DROPPED IN SPITE OF THE HOWLING.

The Average, But One and One Half to the County.

Huntington Democrat.

"After all the extended and persistent criticism of the republican papers and politicians," said deputy commissioner of pensions, H. C. Bell to the Indianapolis Sentinel's Washington correspondent, "they failed to make the old soldiers believe the present administration was hostile to the pensioners."

Touching the alleged enmity of the pension bureau toward the pensioners of the country and the oft repeated assertion that thousands and tens of thousands of men were being reduced and dropped from the pension rolls, a report which has just been made by the secretary of the interior to the senate of the United States on a resolution calling for such report and which gives the names and postoffice addresses of each pensioner also who has been either reduced or dropped in the United States, shows that but 2,671 have been dropped, and 3,014 reduced up to May 10, 1894, out of 966,000 now on the rolls. As there are about three thousand counties in the United States it will be observed that not more than an average of one and a half pensioner to each county has been either dropped from the rolls or reduced.

The report shows that in the State of Indiana, where the above charges against the pension bureau have been made persistently and viciously but sixty-three pensioners have been dropped from the rolls, and but 143 reduced under the present democratic administration. These reductions and droppings were mostly under the act of June 27, 1890, and on the ground that the pensioners were not incapacitated from the performance of manual labor in such a degree as to render them unable to earn a support or were not disabled in such a degree as to entitle them to the rate of pension being received. But some of them were dropped under the law on the ground that the disability for which the pension was granted had ceased; others on the ground that the soldier had not performed the ninety day's service required by the law of June 27, 1890; still others on the ground that the soldier deserted or was not honorably discharged from the military service; some few on the request of the pensioners themselves; others on the ground that they were in receipt of two pensions; and a small number of Mexian war pensioners on the ground that they had not served sixty days in the war with Mexico, as the law requires.

In the whole State of Illinois, which contains 102 counties, but 102 pensioners have been dropped from the rolls, an average of one to each county, and but 177 have been reduced. When it is remembered that the States of Indian and Illinois contain over 68,000 pensioners each, it will be seen that the proportion which the dropping and reductions bear to the whole number of pensioners is infinitesmally small.

Mr. Bell has charge of all pension matters in Indiana and Illinois and other northwestern states.

IGNORANCE OR FALSEHOOD--WHICH?

There may be no doubt as to whether the following is a case of ignorance or of deliberate lying. It is of necersity one or the other. A late number of the Waterloo Press says:

DeKalb county is in debt—no one knows how much. Noble, Steuben and Lagrange are out of of debt, and they are all republican.

Now, the Press knows, it cannot be ignorant of the fact, that in June of each year, the auditor makes a sworn statement of the financial condition of the county, including a plain statement of its debt. Not only is this sworn statement made and entered in the records, where every man in the county has a right to call and see it, but it is published in the COURIER each time, by the order of the Board of Commissioners, and in this way is sent into every school district of the county, so that people who do not care to come to the auditor's office can read it at their own homes, and all their neighbors can come in and read it. And more than this, the Press could copy it from the COURIER and so give it out to its readers, as in fact could every paper in the county. Or, if for any reason, they did not care to take it from the COURIER, they would be welcome to come in and copy it from the auditor's books. Or, the auditor would furnish them a printed copy of which he has several hundred made for this express purpose. So it will be seen that every paper in the county can publish a statement of the county debt, if it chooses to do so, and therefore there is no excuse for the Press to make the above statement. The auditor's report was published in full in the COURIER of June 21, two weeks before the Press made this statement, and that copy of the COURIER was probably in existence in the Press office at the very time this deliberately false item was written. And the auditor's report plainly showed that DeKalb's debt, all told, was then $58,395.09. The same report for last year showed a debt of $70,273.39, a decrease of $11,878.30 in one year. And the previous years were each reported in June and given out broadcast, to the Press as well as to others. What reason then can the Press give for saying that "no one knows," when every man in the county can know if he cares to know? So the Press itself knew. What excuse then can its editor give for making an assertion which he knew to be false? Even a candidate for the legislature ought to know something about the county whose interests he aspires to represent. Even a candidate for the legislature ought to tell the truth.

The Real Inventor of the Bicycle.

"The popular belief is that the bicycle is a modern invention, when in fact it really dates back to the seventeenth century," said Dr. T. C. Minor. "I learned this one day when I was making some translation from the Journal de Medicine de Paris. Ozaram in 1694 in his 'Mathematical and Physical Recreations,' tells of a carriage, as he calls it, 'in which one can ride without the use of horses.' And then he goes on to tell of how a lackey sits at the back, makes it run by 'walking alternately with his two feet by means of two small wheels concealed in a case just between the wheels behind and attached to the axle of the carriage.' This was the principle of the velocipede, so much improved since then. But the priority of the discovery of the bicycle I believe to be established without further argument or dispute.

"It was by a physician, Eli Richard, a young physician of Rochelle, France, who made the first machine after which our modern bicycle is patterned. He was a medical student in Paris in 1666 and became one of the great physicians of France. He died at the age of sixty-one at Rochelle in 1706, and there is a street in Rochelle named for him, and there is now a movement on foot to erect a bronze statue, not to Michaud, who it is claimed was the discoverer of the bicycle, but to the true discoverer, Dr. Eli Richard."

The Old Cemetery.

We might say this is the "old, old story" for we have several times called attention to the disgraceful condition of the old, and apparently abandoned "old cemetery." Its condition has been bad for many years, and now since enterprising citizens have beautified and improved Evergreen cemetery just across the street to the north, the old ground looks shabbier by comparison. The COURIER has several times called attention to the matter, and now some of our best citizens have taken it up, and are asking subscriptions to help clean up the grounds and put them into decent shape. Many of the pioneers of Auburn and vicinity lie in this forlorn and neglected place, and it is hardly a compliment to them to believe their spirits would be pleased, could they revisit earth and see how little the second generation is doing or has done for them. Nor is it very likely this generation will use as an excuse, that these old pioneers will rest easier for being surrounded by the same sort of vegetation and species of timber they knew so well in the early days Here we find the tangled green brier, the the smooth basswood saplings, the sumac and elder, choke cherry, wild plum walnut and wild cherry, wild grapes, and all these mingled with the lilacs that were planted years ago and have gone wild. The wild grasses of the early days, and equally wild weeds, mingle in a friendly struggle with the ornamental plants vines and roses, planted by loving hands long years ago—all now a confused and tangled mass. Broken stones and upturned monuments are seen every where, and when one reads the familiar names, he wonders, what their descendants are thinking about, that they so neglect the grounds that have been made the last resting place of dear departed friends of the years long ago. This picture is not over drawn. It is, if any difference, under drawn. If any one wishes to see how weak is our description, let him visit the spot and learn the truth. There is money enough among our people, and we feel sure there is liberality enough, and sufficient enterprise, to put this old "city of our dead" into a better condition. Let us not delay, but act. We do not know that a paper will be taken around, but all contributions may be handed to J. W. McKay or Isaac Hague, and will be properly expended.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Eva Christie is plaintiff and Allen Andrews and Sarah E. Andrews are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two thousand seven hundred seventy-nine dollars and eight cents ($2,779.08) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on Saturday, August 4, 1894,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the court house of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section one (1) in township thirty-three (33) north, range twelve (12) east. Also all that part of the east half of said northeast quarter of section one (1) township and range aforesaid, that lies north of the right of way of the Wabash, St Louis and Pacific railroad (Eel River Division) and the west bank of Little Cedar Creek, excepting one and one-fourth (1¼) acres of land from said last described parcel heretofore sold and deeded to Mary Ann Carper by George Clark by deed dated March 24, 1874, all situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

GEORGE C. RALSTON,
Sheriff of DeKalb county.

G. A. R. Battalion Picnic.

The annual picnic of the DeKalb Battalion was held at Waterloo last Saturday, July 28, with a good attendance. At the morning session, Prof. L. W. Fairfield, of the Angola College was present, and being called on, made an excellent address, his subject being, the "Duties of American Citizenship." Editor Rose, of the Angola Magnet, also gave a brief talk. The Relief Corps of Waterloo furnished an abundance of excellent coffee for the visitors, who had brought along with them their picnic dinners in generously filled baskets. An hour was spent very pleasantly in this way and in social chat.

AFTERNOON.

The first work was the adoption of the constitution. Then the following officers were elected: Colonel, John Otto; Lt. Col., D. Diehl; Maj., J. P. McCague; Surgeon, T. A. Sargent; Q. M., F. C. Waterman; Adjt., G. W. Gordon; Chaplain, J. N. Wilson.

About two hours were then devoted to patriotic speeches. Among those, who took part were W. L. Penfield, J. N. Wilson and several others. Then there were recitations, etc. The time and place of the next picnic will be decided by the officers. A committee from each part of the county was appointed to arrange for the national encampment at Pittsburg in September.

To have your sweetheart far away,
It makes existence dark and drear;
But it is worse—alackaday—
To have her distant when she's near.

Ft. Wayne Journal—The city of Whiting secured its name by a peculiar incident. An old conductor on the Lake Shore road was known as "Pap" Whiting. One day his train was ditched on the site of the present city, and the locality was ever afterwards known as "Pap Whiting's Siding." When the town was founded it naturally assumed the name by which it is now known.

R. W. Cobb and Ira Thrush went to Columbia City Tuesday morning to attend the big bicycle race meet held there. A number of wheelmen from Garrett and Butler went with them. All went by way of Ft. Wayne, so as to have the benefit of the fine gravel pikes west of Ft. Wayne. Thrush came back the same day, but Mr. Cobb went over to Van Wert and Paulding in the interest of the "Chainless."

Clyde Nedry, of Butler and R. W. Cobb, made a run to Egerton on Thursday last to attend the ball game between Egerton and Ligionier. The distance, 9 miles, was covered in 24½ minutes. Both rode Chainless wheels. Clyde says he has always been a "Columbia" crank, having bought 9 wheels, all told But the strong language he now uses in behalf of the League wheel is suffcient evidence that he no longer has any use for back numbers.

A slick swindler named James Wilthroup of New Jersey is in jail at South Bend for working a well-worn confidence game. He victimized a milliner. Entering the store he asked permission to write a letter on the show case. When he had finished it he asked the girl to give him a $20 bill for bills of smaller denominations as he wanted to send it away by mail. The girl complied with his request, but when he came to count his money he was short $5. He said he would put the $20 bill in the envelope and leave it with her while he went out to get more money. This he apparently did, but when some time later the woman opened the envelope it contained nothing but a piece of blank paper. Another woman lost two dollars in a similar game.—Ex.

A letter from Stephen Masters, at Charleston, Ark., says they have hard times down there as well as elsewhere, and the dry weather makes it worse. A hard freeze at Easter killed a good deal of fruit and early vegetables, and an absence of rain since May 1, makes matters worse. But July 20 they had some rain that will help cotton and corn. It is the worse drouth they have had since 1881.

The Auburn School Board have out a catalogue of the school and school work for the first time. It is a 20 page book and not only contains much valuable information as to our schools, but a mint of sound ideas on school work. We are sorry the edition was not large enough to put into the hands of each parent and patron. Another feature of interest is the cuts illustrating the school buildings. The fine building just completed makes a lovely picture, and the original brick main building, though plainer, is no less an object of pride to those who have an interest in our educational facilities Lastly, there is the "Old Academy," in strong contrast to the finer edifices of to-day. The work was done at the COURIER office, and we feel greatly pleased at the many flattering comments received from those who admire and appreciate a tasty piece of printer's skill.

WATERLOO.

There was a grand reception given to the Waterloo militia, Co. I. on their return from Whiting Saturday evening. A fine lunch was served, and after that a valuable and lovely flag was presented to them. The money was raised by subscription, mainly engineered by W. H. Leas and Squire Daniels. The flag is of fine bunting, with gold cord and tassels fringe and eagle. It cost about $24

The boys have a good joke or two to tell. Bert Shaffer and another just before starting from Whiting, went down town to buy some lunch. One of the other boys, called to them to bring him a lunch, also. The boys went on their errand, but on coming back, the train had left. They reached home Sunday, and happening to meet the man who had sent by them for the lunch, they delivered it to him with the remark, that they would have delivered it sooner if they could.

A LARGE number of Pennsylvania farmers have expressed an intention of planting rye next fall instead of wheat, and there is a promise of 1,000,000 bushels in Chester County alone. This year has seen a large demand for rye, and the farmers are coming to feel that rye, rather than wheat, is the paying crop to raise.

NICARAGUA is rapidly coming to her senses. She has withdrawn the obnoxious Lecayo, who usurped control at Bluefields, and her opposition to the construction by this country of the great canal which is to connect the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. There's a power of persuasion in the mere presence of a gunboat or two in southern Atlantic waters.

GOOD temper ministers to success in all undertakings much more largely than we imagine. It gives a quiet and undisturbed mind favorable to concentration of energy. How can one whose feelings are continually ruffled and whose temper is roused to irritability or anger pursue his work with the attention it demands, or make decisions which require the undivided and earnest use of all his faculties? Nothing can be more essential to success than the full command of the powers; but ill-temper in all its forms make this impossible.

IN the matter of Prendergast there is just this to be said. If he had been tried, condemned and executed within twenty one days of the commission of his crime justice would have been fully subserved. His rights would have been just as fully guarded as they have been through the dilatory proceedings that have ensued. It is idle to pretend that the quibblings and evasions that prolonged the assassin's life were in the interest of justice. On the contrary, they constituted a trifling with justice consequent upon trifling with the courts. It is such cases that breed the contempt for law, now unfortunately too prevalent.

JUDGING from the tapestried and silk-cushioned retreat of those burglars recently unearthed by the police over in New Jersey, your modern house-breaker has æsthetic tastes, and gratifies them largely. Perhaps one reason why so many houses of rich men are broken into during their absence is furnished by the burglars' anxiety to possess bric-a-brac and costly Aubussons and Gobelins of price. Fancy the feelings of a millionaire collector on being awakened in the dead of night to see his precious art treasures departing in the arms of a burglar who disdains to ask him where he keeps his watch and diamonds, and who says he takes nothing that is not purely artistic.

ALL over the country the interest in agricultural fairs is now growing. It is impossible to estimate the good that fairs of a really agricultural nature do to the farmer. He who lives by himself and rarely sees what others have done and are doing is far more apt to get into ruts than he whose ambition is stirred by intercourse with others in his line of work. There is a natural instinct in most men which prompts them to say, "What he has done I can do." And that feeling stirs a man to do more and better than he would ever do if he made himself his own model, which must be the case if he never compares his work with that of others.

A NEW route from Lake Superior to Montreal is now being talked about. Ottawa people are the principal movers in the matter, and a committee of the Ottawa Board of Trade is pushing the scheme. The proposed route is via French River, Lake Nipissing and the Ottawa River to Montreal. French River flows into the northern end of Georgian Bay, on Lake Huron. It is claimed that this route is feasible for moderate-sized craft, and it would be 350 miles shorter than around by Lake Erie and other connecting links to Montreal. The Ottawa people want the Dominion Government to take a survey of the route, with the object of determining the cost of making it navigable.

IN the Prussian Court a wretched Paul Pry has been writing all sorts of wickedness about the court goings on, and as the scandel-monger society paper is unknown in Berlin, the aristocratic tattler has not only to write his scandals but to circulate them himself. There is some question as to his identity, although one official is in jail for the offense. We can give no opinion as to the truth of the allegations as to various marital sins alleged against the high-born dames and reaching up even to the Emperor himself; but we think it is a sign that German imperial institutions are not as sound as they appear when such stories get abroad. Emperors may be a law unto themselves, but in the nineteenth century they must seem to respect the best part of the tenth commandments. It is the Kaiser and not Kotze that will be on trial presently.

IT may be interesting to our readers to know how we stand in a commercial sense with our neighbors on the north. Statistics illustrating the growth of trade relations between the United States and Canada have been transmitted to the Senate by the Secretary of the Treasury. The statistics, which have been prepared by both the United States and Canadian authorities, cover a period of seventy-three years, from 1821 to 1893, inclusive. The figures given show, among other things, that the exports of merchandise in 1821 from the United States to Canada amounted to $2,014,529, and the imports from that country to the United States to $414,500. In 1893, on the other hand, the exports amounted to $24,138,482 and the imports to $22,108,916. The total of exports for the seventy-three years covered by the statistics was $1,468,159,324, and the total of the imports amounted to $1,299,957,798.

A LOUDLY-TRUMPETED enterprise was that of several capitalists who engaged in the manufacture of banana flour in Central America several years ago, and who, according to some of the trade papers, were going to establish an industry of great magnitude. Of late, however, nothing has been heard about the results of the experiment, but it now appears that a similar experiment is being tried in Dutch Guiana, and the British Consul at Paramaibo says that machinery to the value of $10,000 has been imported and set at work grinding the bananas, and that a portion of the product of the mill has been sent to Holland. The company anticipate that a considerable demand for the meal for bread-making purposes will spring up. An analysis of the meal follows: Moisture, 11.44; ether extract, 0.39; alcohol extract (80 per cent.) 5.94 (of which, reducing sugar 1.18 per cent., sucrose 0.08); cold water extract, 5.33; fiber and other undeterminable carbohydrates, 8.15; total, 100.00. From this it will be seen that the food value of the meal is minute, and should be compared rather to the potato than to the cereal. In the face of this analysis it is difficult to believe, says the consul, that the banana meal enterprise will prove remunerative.

IT is a queer commentary on the state of affairs that while hundreds of thousands of men are idle and half-starving in our cities, the farmers of the country are crying for help to do the necessary work on their farms. In many localities it is impossible to get farm help at prices that would have been considered large five years ago. Is it possible that we are nearing a time when farming will be looked upon as a menial pursuit which self-respecting men will not engage in? We hope not, for when that time comes we will see the beginning of the end. In old times the farmer was looked down upon, and was, in fact, a slave. In many countries he could not leave the manor upon which he was born, and was subjected to any privations or indignities that the owner of the land felt like afflicting him with. Then, with civilization, the tiller of the soil came to be recognized as an important factor in the prosperity of his country, and began to receive more consideration, until within the last century he has come to the front, chiefly because of the high place he has won for himself in our country. The American farmer won his place as one who must be recognized as the cornerstone of prosperity, and from his success the farmers of all the civilized world have profited. It is a noble calling, and it is to be hoped that the workers of our country will never be so blind to their own interests as to begin to despise farm work. There are places on thousands of farms for men to work at a calling that is no harder than many that are found in the forges and factors of the large cities, and if every farmer who needs a hired hand could find one among the idle masses of the cities, we should hear much less about suffering there.

A Ton of Leather Daily.

"Would you believe it, sir," said a well-known Strand bootmaker the other day, "that some 3,000,000 of people walk about the streets of London daily, and in doing so wear away a ton of leather from their boots and shoes?"

"Is that really a fact?"

"Really," was the emphatic reply. "And the amount would be greater if the streets were not so well paved and attended to. The ton of leather I have just spoken of would in a year form a leather strip one inch wide and long enough to extend from London to New York?"

"And what would be its value?"

"Well, estimating this great amount of disintegrated sole leather at 5d a pound, what it costs consumers, its value would be £100,000. If it could be recovered from the streets a fortune might result to somebody in the shoddy leather line. But, unfortunately, there seems no means of recovering all this valuable leather, and so no doubt it will always be swept up in the dust and dirt. But," he reflectively added, "if a process by which this leather can be separated from the dirt is discovered, the inventor would at once become a rich man."—London Million.

HERE'S A QUESTION.

ONE DESERVING OF SERIOUS CONSIDERATION.

Don't Decide Hastily When You Go to the Polls This Fall—The Great Tariff Reform Victory of 1892 Was Not Spasmodic.

How About Your Vote?

It is undeniable that some of those who voted the Democratic tickets in 1890 and 1892 intend to vote the Republican ticket this fall. Before so doing, such voters should ask themselves a few questions and try to answer them seriously.

Why did I vote the Democratic ticket in 1890 and 1892? Because I was opposed to McKinleyism and to Republican extravagance and hypocrisy. I had, in fact, begun to doubt if there is any virtue at all in protection so far as labor is concerned—and the whole question centers around labor.

Have the Democrats done any better than the Republicans? They have certainly not fulfilled expectations in some respects; but, on the whole, I must admit that they have probably done better than the Republicans would have done had they been in power a year longer.

What unusual difficulties surrounded the present administration when it entered into power? There were several: (1) The Treasury, which contained $100,000,000 surplus when it was turned over to Harrison in 1889, was empty. It was only by peculiar bookkeeping that Secretary Foster succeeded in keeping the reserve fund intact—on paper. (2) The Sherman silver purchase act was driving the gold out of circulation and out of the country and threatening to depreciate our currency by forcing us to drop to a silver basis. (3) The Hawaiian question was in a muddle. The secret and well-laid plans of Secretary Blaine to cause a revolution in Hawaii and to have it annexed to the United States during Harrison's administration had miscarried, leaving a complication of affairs which would have taxed the mind of any president. (4) And this is the only difficulty that would not have presented itself to a Republican administration. Because of the threatened reduction of protective duties, thousands of protected and Republican manufacturers were in a mood to shut down their mills or to reduce wages and charge it all to the wicked Democrats.

How has Cleveland met these complications? (1) He has reduced expenditures about $50,000,000 a year, and has, with the aid of a small issue of Government bonds, kept the Treasury out of bankruptcy. No Republican could, under the circumstances, have done more. (2) The Sherman silver act precipitated the periodical panic which was about due. As soon as he deemed it possible to repeal this act, he called a special session of Congress for this purpose. Sherman himself helped to repeal his own foolish and bad compromise act. Meanwhile the momentum of the panic, which had become too great to be stopped by the repeal of the silver act, was augmented by the calamity howls and acts of wickedly partisan Republicans and selfish protected manufacturers. (3) The Hawaiian entanglement has been settled in about the only safe way possible, after the minds of both countries had been poisoned by Blaine's jingoism. (4) Nine administration Democrats out of every ten have done about all that has been possible to stay the financial and Republican calamity panic by trying to pass a reasonable tariff reform bill. They would have succeeded long ago but for the united opposition of all Republicans and a few in their own ranks. They have not, as was supposed, a working majority.

What will the Republicans do if they regain power? They are likely to retain the McKinley bill with slight alterations, mostly in favor of the protected trusts which supply the "fat" for Republican campaigns. Republicans are praising the McKinley bill and charging the present panic to the Wilson bill; and yet they know the repealed Sherman bill and the McKinley bill, which is still in force, were far more responsible for the past year's depression than the, as yet, unborn Wilson bill. They know that strikes, riots, and wage reductions were coming thick and fast during the first two years of McKinleyism and before the election of 1892. In the summer of 1892 armed forces were quartered in four different States for the purpose of suppressing labor riots. The Homestead strike, with Pinkerton accompaniments, cannot be charged to any Wilson bill, or Wilson bill shadow.

It is true that slow progress has been made in reforming the tariff, but I must admit that the great majority of the Democratic representatives have made an effort for an honest revision. The Democrats have done their part. If I continue to support the party and insist upon electing real Democrats good results will follow. B. W. H.

Cleveland's Reassuring Words.

If anymen think that President Cleveland has weakened in his tariff principles during the last year they should read his letter of July 2 to Chairman Wilson. In this letter he declares himself freely on the subject of free raw materials. He says:

One to be will be submitted to the conference which embodies Democratic principle so directly that it cannot be compromised. We have in our platforms and in every way possible declared in favor of the free importation of raw materials. We have again and again promised that this should be accorded to our people and our manufacturers as soon as the Democratic party was invested with the power to determine the tariff policy of the country. The party now has that power. We are as certain to-day as we have ever been of the great benefit that would accrue to the country from the inauguration of this policy, and nothing has occurred to release us from our obligation to secure this advantage to our people.

It must be admitted that no tariff measure can accord with Democratic principles and promises or bear a genuine Democratic badge that does not provide for free raw materials. In these circumstances it may well excite our wonder that Democrats are willing to depart from this, the most Democratic of all tariff principles, and that the inconsistent absurdity of such a proposed departure should be emphasized by the suggestion that the wool of the farmer be put on the free list, and the protection of tariff taxation be placed around the iron ore and coal of corporations and capitalists. How can we face the people after indulging in such outrageous discriminations and violations of principle?

It is quite apparent that this question of free raw materials does not admit of adjustment on any middle ground, since their subjection to any rate of tariff taxation, great or small, is alike violative of Democratic principle and Democratic good faith.

Strikes and High Tariff.

The Baltimore Sun shows that the cause of the great discontent and frequent strikes of American labor for the past thirty years can be traced to no other cause but our disastrous protective tariffs. The Sun adduces from the mercantile statistics of the country the vast number of business failures, and it points out with unanswerable argument the inseparable connection between these failures and the distress, dissatisfaction and revolt of labor. It says:

If the constant stimulation of higher tariff rates could, as their advocates claimed, have given business larger profits and labor larger pay, the last twenty years must have witnessed a steady decline in the number alike of business failures and labor strikes. Instead of that, both have gone on increasing together. From 1873 to 1882, inclusive, ten years, 74,978 failures are recorded in this country. That was unprecedented. But in the eight years from 1883 to 1892 the more appalling total of 82,090 failures was registered. . . . Their number rose to very nearly 11,000 in 1890, the year of McKinley's climax tariff. The next year, protection having touched the high-water mark of all our history, the list of insolvents touched high-water mark, too, and 12,273 failures were the melancholy product of the last and greatest effort to tax the country into prosperity. And this tale of disaster was overtopped again in 1893, after two full years of the highest tariff ever enacted, by a grand total of 15,560 failures, representing liabilities of $462,000,000.

This showing confirms the view of the New York Herald that the cause of the recent great strikes was to be traced to "protection." Surely partisanship may well pause and yield to patriotism in the light of these historical facts. Labor cannot be satisfied where business is paralyzed. Congress may now well take to heart the closing words of the Sun:

Manufacturers tied up to a home market that is not equal to the output, and agriculture forced to sell its products in the cheapest and buy its supplies in the dearest market, must both be relieved. Larger markets, freer trade and a fairer chance for all is the demand of the hour.

Not a Sectional Measure.

The attempt of the McKinley organs in both parties to arouse sectional prejudice against the tariff bill because the Democratic conferrees are mainly from the South is not warranted by the measure itself. The bill as it stands provides for free wool and free lumber. Texas alone had 4,334,551 sheep in 1893. This is three times as many as New York had. It just about equals the number of sheep in the five great Western States of Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa. Missouri and Kentucky, two other Southern States, have nearly as many sheep as all the New England States and New York together.

Are not Georgia, North Carolina and other Southern timber-producing States as much affected by free lumber as any Northern States? As passed by the House the bill made coal and iron ore free. It is hoped that the conference will result in a restoration of this Democratic policy. Are not Alabama, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland large producers of these articles? The sugar bounty, of which Louisiana is the chief beneficiary, was voted by a Republican Congress, and is repealed in the pending bill.

Whatever may be the defects of the compromise measure it is not a sectional bill. There is not one more tariff for trusts and bounties in the bloody shirt.—New York World.

Why Seek a New Issue?

Republicans claim that the attempt to reform the tariff by even so moderate a measure as the Wilson bill has sealed the fate of the Democratic party in the next Congressional and Presidential election. Now, we ask every man of common sense, if the Republicans have any confidence in what they say, would they not be anxious to avail themselves of what they sometimes call the reaction against tariff reform, and insist on forcing the fight from now on upon the tariff issue?

But what do we find? Reed and Lodge, and even McKinley, scouring the woods for a new issue, straddling the silver question in State platforms, and trying to deceive the free silver men by a decoy duck in the shape of a proposed commercial war on England and other foreign nations that will not accept free coinage of silver.

After excluding foreign nations from our ports for thirty years by a high protective tariff, what terrors will this hare-brained scheme have? Tom Reed is too bright a man to believe that any foreign nation which is not now using silver would be driven to its use by such a policy on our part.

But these men are shrewd politicians. They know that the protective tariff is doomed in the United States, and that the people will no longer tolerate any party that stands in the way of reforming the tariff downward. They know that the discontent that is now agitating the Democratic party is due to the surrender of some of their representatives in Congress to the protected monopolies. They see that the only hope of the Republican party lies in securing a new issue. With this motive they have hypocritically jumped astride the silver issue and hope by ambiguous language to deceive the friends of free silver coinage. It is doubtful whether they can do this, but their main hope would be realized if they could only divert the Democrats from the tariff as the chief issue. They will be disappointed.—Oakland County Post.

Understand Themselves.

There has been a tendency among those Democrats in the Senate who have not been in sympathy with the advanced tariff reform which received the indorsement of their party at the last national election, to imply that public judgment is hastily reached and may be as hastily abandoned.

The implication is unwarranted. The great tariff reform victory of 1892 was not spasmodic. It was not the result of a jaunt, but of several hard and toilsome campaigns. The Democratic party had begun a tariff propaganda as far back as 1876, and had maintained it consistently and courageously. The tariff question had figured in the campaigns of 1880, 1884 and 1888. The general trend of public opinion was away from prohibitive duties, and this tendency was accentuated when the prohibitive McKinley bill became a law. The processes by which that public judgment was reached were deliberate and logical. They represent the conservatism of the people.

It was difficult to convince the country that protection was a fraud. It will be equally difficult, if not impossible, to convince it that protection is a blessing. It must first see the effects of an honest effort to reform the tariff. In no event will it rest satisfied with the Senate compromise bill. The people understand themselves.—St. Louis Republic.

Taxes and Votes.

The silly suggestion is make that if the income tax shall be adopted in this country those who pay it will be by virtue of that fact entitled to "a larger voice in politics" than the men who pay no income tax.

If this preposterous idea of special privileges for those who pay special taxes has any force, it would endow with tremendous power the men who pay the whisky tax. This tax is paid by a special class, numbering but a few hundred. Did anybody ever think of claiming for these men a "larger voice in politics" than they can get by one vote each, or by bribing legislators or corrupting officials?

Upon a great many articles in the tariff the tax is paid directly by half a dozen importers. Does this constitute them a special class, entitled to special privileges or powers?

The idea is puerile, not to say idiotic. Suffrage in this country is based upon manhood and citizenship, and not upon money or taxes.—New York World.

Who Invented the Piano?

The honor of inventing the piano is claimed by the English, French and Germans. Father Wood, an English monk at Rome, is said to have been the real inventor 1711, and to have manufactured one which he sold to Samuel Crispi, the author of "Virginia," from whom it was purchased by Fulke Greville, though Count Carli claims the credit for Bartholomeo Christofori, of Padua, during his stay Florence, some three years later (1714). The French attribute the invention to a Parisian named Marius, who, they allege, produced in 1716 a harpsichord in which hammers had been substituted for the old plectrums or quids. The Germans are the last in the field, with J. C. Schroder, of Dresden, who claimed (1717) when 18 years of age to have constructed, after much consideration, the model of a new clavier, with hammers, upon which he could play loudly or softly.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Old Appomattox Deserted.

The old town of Appomattox, Va., is entirely deserted, with the exception of five or six families, of whom only one—that of a Methodist clergyman—is white. A syndicate bought up all the property a few years ago as a speculation, and when the owners got their money and signed their deeds they moved away, leaving their houses empty. The Court House was burned about the same time, and a new one was erected at the railroad station, about three miles distant, where a considerable town had sprung up. The McLean house, in which the articles of surrender were written and signed, was purchased by the syndicate and taken down, brick by brick, for removal to the World's Fair, but for some reason the plan was not carried out, and the bricks and timbers are still stored in the vacant houses in the neighborhood.

AN UNLUCKY NUMBER.

AMAZING RECURRENCE OF "13" IN PRENDERGAST'S CASE.

From the Moment the Crime Was Committed Until the Noose Tightened About the Assassin's Neck the Fatal Number Was Ever Conspicuous.

A Few Coincidences.

Inasmuch as there is no longer any superstition in the world, says the Chicago Record, there can be no harm in calling attention to certain coincidences which might have, at one time, been taken as serious omens. Men and women no longer worry over spilling salt or seeing the moon over the left shoulder, because these "bad-luck" signs are out of date. To be sure, they would rather not spill the salt, and if the new moon is to be seen at all it might as well be seen over the right shoulder, just as a precaution in case there should be anything in these old-women tales.

Patrick Eugene Prendergast, hanged for the murder of Mayor Carter Harrison, died because there was positive proof that he fired the fatal shots, and a jury became convinced that he was responsible for the murderous act. The number thirteen had nothing to do with it whatever. If it recurred with amazing regularity through the whole story of the crime, from the moment of the killing to the last moment of the execution, the only conclusion to be drawn is that the recurrences were accidental. Yet they make an interesting study.

In the first place the name of the assassin contained just thirteen letters:

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13
P. E. PRENDERGAST

It was also a strange linking of the fates that the name of his distinguished victim was under the unlucky influence:

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13
MAYOR HARRISON
HON. C. H. HARRISON

It will be remembered that after Prendergast had done the shooting at the Harrison home on the evening of Oct. 28, 1893, he went at once to the Desplaines street station and gave himself up. In a few minutes he was driven to the central station and was there questioned for the first time regarding his reasons for killing the Mayor. This investigation was conducted by Inspector Shea.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13
INSPECTOR SHEA

The next morning—Sunday morning—he was taken to the Harrison mansion on Ashland boulevard to testify before the coroner, who was conducting an inquest. When he appeared before the jury he declined to say anything until he had consulted an attorney. He was identified as the assassin and held to the grand jury without bail, the mittimus being signed by Coroner McHale.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13
CORONER McHALE

That day he was taken to the jail, where he remained continuously to the time of his death, except when he was taken out under custody to attend the sessions of court.

The clerk of the jail who took the mittimus and assigned the prisoner to his cell was that well-known official, Benjamin Price.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13
BENJAMIN PRICE

During all the time that the prisoner was in the jail he was in charge of the jailer, William Morris.

It became the duty of Mr. Morris to make all the arrangements for the hanging, and he really had charge of this disagreeable function, although the sheriff was present at the execution and, under the law, became at least the nominal director.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13
WILLIAM MORRIS

The only cell to which Prendergast could well be assigned was that immediately facing the door from the office. It was thought best to keep a rather close watch on him, as he was in a sullen mood and given to violent outbreaks at times. Afterward he had several encounters with his cellmates. He was put in the cell in which Louis Lingg, convicted as an anarchist conspirator, committed suicide. The number was 13.

THE CELL.

The trial of P. E. Prendergast for the murder of Mayor Harrison began in earnest on Dec. 13, 1893. On that day the last juror was accepted, and Prosecutor Todd made the opening speech for the State. Judge Brentano sat as the judge in the case. It was he who overruled the subsequent motion for a new trial and sentenced the prisoner to death:

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13
JUDGE BRENTANO

The first trial, and the only one dealing directly with the issue of the crime in the case, came to an end on Dec. 29, when the jury rendered its verdict. As the trial began on the 13th, this made seventeen days, inclusive, from the start to the finish. There were two Sundays in these seventeen days, and the court had no session on the Monday and Tuesday of the last week, as the attorneys were preparing their arguments. Therefore the prisoner was actually on trial just thirteen days, and on the thirteenth day the verdict, "guilty of murder in the first degree," was handed in by the foreman of the jury. The defendant's attorneys made the usual motion for a new trial, and the sentence of death was deferred.

If the attorneys representing the prisoner had been at all superstitious they would not have filed their reasons for a rehearing on Feb. 13, 1894. But they did so, and at the end of that week, all arguments being ended, Judge Brentano overruled the motion for a new trial and pronounced the sentence of death, setting the day of the execution March 23, 1894. It was not to be, however, even though the Supreme Court refused a stay of sentence. The law of thirteen had to work out the case to a logical finish.

On March 21, only two days before the appointed time for the execution, the attorneys for the condemned man applied to the federal court for a writ of habeas corpus, which was refused. The Governor was appealed to, but declined to grant any reprieve. On March 22 the attorneys applied to Judge Chetlain, then sitting in the Criminal Court, for a hearing as to the prisoner's sanity. This action was based on the statute which permits a special hearing when it is alleged, with a show of probability, that a prisoner has become insane between the time of the sentence and the execution.

The court heard some testimony and listened to the arguments of attorneys until late into the night. He decided that the case came within the statute and that there should be a special hearing.

He postponed the execution to April 4, and later, the hearing being delayed from various causes, to July 2.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13
JUDGE CHETLAIN

The trial was postponed to September by an agreement of counsel. Judge Payne was asked to enter an order to that effect, but he refused to do so and set the trial for June 20. This seems to be the link of the case where the mystic 13 is lacking, but as the trial ended on July 3, just thirteen days after it began, any one of superstitious mind may rest assured that the mysterious forces were still at work. The prisoner was found to be neither insane nor a lunatic and he was taken to jail to be executed Friday, April 13.

It is only once or twice in a year that Friday, the hangman's day comes in conjunction with the unlucky 13.

The lawyers were not yet discouraged. There seemed little chance of executive clemency, but on July 12 they made application to Judge Grosscup, of the federal court, for a writ of habeas corpus. This being denied they asked for an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. The appeal was also denied. They might have known that it would be denied.

This destroyed the last hope and all the arrangements for an execution were at once ordered by the sheriff of Cook County, James H. Gilbert.

How the Ants Beat the Snake.

When the ants are on the war-path they march through the forests of tropical countries in countless numbers. Nothing can stay their onward progress. During one of these marches in Honduras, the advance guard of the army came upon a snake that had not got away in time, as most animals try to do. So the snake showed fight. With every switch of its tail it killed scores of its insect foes, but still the swarms of ants poured on, all fiercely attacking the enemy. By-and-by the struggles of the snake grew fainter, until at last, exhausted by the one-sided combat, the serpent perished under the overwhelming assault of its innumerable adversaries.

Horses for Cavalry Service.

Horses for the cavalry service are purchased mostly in St. Louis, and occasionally in Louisville, Kansas City, Omaha, San Francisco, and other points. The prices paid for them under the contract system range from $140 to $175. They are usually shipped in herds of from thirty to sixty direct to the headquarters of the regiment for which they are designed, without being put through any course of preliminary training for the new life which they are to lead, and after a few days' rest are delivered to the various troops where remounts are needed, due regard being given to color.

On the Safe Side.

Everybody knows this is a good place to be, but everybody does not take measures to be there. An efficient preventive places us on the safe side of incipient disease, and there is no one more reliable than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in cases where the kidneys are inactive, which is but the preliminary to various destructive maladies, which, disregarded, have a fatal termination. Bright's disease, diabetes, dropsy, œdema, are but the outgrowths of neglected inaction of the kidneys and bladder. They should be checked at the outset with the Bitters, which will prevent their progress by arousing the renal organs to activity, and thus place those who resort to this saving medicine on the safe side. This preservative of safety also conquers constipation, liver complaint, malarial fever, nervousness and dyspepsia.

Speed of Birds.

As to the speed with which the emigration flights of birds are accomplished, Canon Tristram, in the British Association, quoted Herr Gatke as maintaining that godwits and plovers can fly at the rate of 240 miles an hour. Dr. Jerdon had stated that the spine-tailed swift, roosting in Ceylon, would reach the Himalayas, 1,000 miles, before sunset. In their ordinary flight the swift was the only bird the author ever knew to outstrip an express train on the Great Northern Railway.

BARN AND HENNERY.

CORRECT IDEA OF AN IMPORTANT FARM BUILDING.

If You Intend to Be a Good Farmer Start Out with a Determination to Have Suitable Buildings—Light, Convenient and Well Ventilated.

Hints on Building.

This illustration gives a correct idea of a country farm barn, which will interest those who are agriculturally inclined. To the farmer it is one of the most important things how he shall house his stock, and provide storage for his grain, fodder, etc., and yet do it in an economical manner; and the many farm barns that are to be seen, with their chopped up and checkered appearance, indicate that this matter has not had a proper amount of study and forethought. The farmer goes on and builds a little at a time, never thinking or looking far enough ahead to know what his wants really may be when his farm is being worked to its proper capacity.

If you own a farm, and intend to be a good farmer, start out with a determination to have only suitable farm buildings, such as will look well from your neighbor's house. Let your barns look like barns, your houses like houses. We would not for anything have your barns be mistaken for houses, or your houses for barns; for such things we have seen, and it makes us feel as if there was a screw loose somewhere. Barns should not be built for show. They should, of course, be made to look well, and be pleasant spots in the landscape, and built in the most substantial manner possible—should be arranged to save as much labor as possible in the care of the animals that are to be housed and fed in them. Let them be well ventilated and lighted, properly floored; the stone work of the foundation thoroughly built, not dry, but laid up in good cement mortar. Don't invite the rats, as they will come without. And it has always been a mystery to us why the farmers have not, in a general way, been wide awake enough to their own interests to properly house their fowls, instead of letting them run wild over the whole place, and letting them roost on wagons, carts and agricultural implements when not in use and stored; to let them lay their eggs where they please, and then have the pleasure (?) of hunting for them, and often finding them at a late day—such certainly must be the case, else why so many bad eggs among those "nice fresh country eggs." Chickens are one of the most profitable adjuncts to any farm, and it is a very easy matter to keep them where there is a number of cattle to feed.

The hennery here shown was carried out as an addition to barn at a hillside farm, and shows what a well-regulated hennery should be to make it both a pleasure and a profit. As the shed below is a necessity in connection with barn, and a roof indispensable, the only additional expense is the floor, one side and ends, with interior fittings, to make a hennery which will accommodate easily one hundred to two hundred. The floor should be tightly boarded, then covered with a coat of boiled pitch and tar, on which spread soil two or three inches in depth. This will give an excellent scratching and wallow ground. The windows all arranged to slide sideways, the openings on outside being covered with wire netting; the feed-bin built so as to hold several bushels, and arranged to take care of itself, by constructing the bottom so as to empty into a small trough into hennery, in front of which is placed a perch; the chicks to feed in space adjoining marked "chickens," which is inclosed by pickets, open enough for them to run through. Nest boxes are arranged in tiers, one above another, and loose, so they can be taken through into nest-room, and emptied, and for setting hens, turned around and fed from nest-room. The fattening room is arranged so as to be darker, and will be found desirable for fattening poultry for market or home consumption. A running stream of water should be so arranged as to always supply fresh water in the hennery, and which should be had in barn for cattle. This could, as in this case, be brought in a pipe from a spring in the hillside, a short distance above the barn, and which not only supplies the barn but the house with a never-failing supply of clear spring water. The run from hennery is so arranged that fowls can be either let into shed or directly out of doors. This run, being hinged on top, and operated by weights and a cord, is controlled from feed room, thus completely shutting off the hennery from floor below when required.

The arrangement of stalls, as here shown, is convenient, and cannot fail but be suggestive for those interested in such matters, while the convenience above cannot fail to please, as the facilities for driving right in with a load from either side is what should always be had in a barn of this class. This barn is, of course, capable of many changes to suit individual wants, circumstances and locations, and is far from costly; and there are farmers who could, with very little trouble, put up their own barns, if they would only wake up to a full realization of their own capabilities.

A GIRL VIOLINIST.

She Lives in Brooklyn and May Be Heard From Some Day.

Miss Rosie Henrietta Major, who lives at 357 Court street, is one of Brooklyn's talented little folks. She is a clever violinist, playing remark-blay well at sight and in different positions. At the many concerts given by her music teacher, Louis Mollenhauer, her playing has met with marked success. She has performed at a number of important musical affairs and is becoming well known.

Rosie intends to become a professional violinist and is putting forth every effort to attain that aim. She is but 13 years of age and still devotes a portion of her time to her studies.

After finishing her studies she will confine herself to the study of the violin. For the last five years she has made this instrument a subject of thorough study and has made remarkable progress. Her teacher speaks very highly of his little pupil and the work she is doing. The picture of Rosie shows her just at the moment when she has raised her bow and is prepared to coax sweet strains from the magic box at her shoulder.

Ducks and Geese.

Wild geese and wild ducks show knowledge as to the resistance of the atmosphere and sagacity in overcoming it. When flocks of them have to go long distances, they form a triangle to cleave the air more easily, and the most courageous bird takes position at the forward angle. As this is a very fatiguing post another bird, ere long, takes the place of the exhausted leader. Thus they place their available strength at the service of the society.

Lion and Horse.

If a lion and a strong horse were to pull in opposite directions, the horse would pull the lion backward with comparative ease; but if a lion were hitched behind the horse and facing in the same direction, and were allowed to exert his strength in backing, he could easily pull the horse down upon his haunches or drag him across the ring, so much greater is his strength when exerted backward from the hind legs than in forward pulling.

Savages and Iron.

The Baluban tribe of Central Africa are famous for their skill in casting and forging iron. They construct tall cylindro-conical furnaces of clay with tuyeres of clay and an ingeniously devised wooden bellows. They make arms for hunting and for war, and collars and bracelets of iron. The neighboring natives resort to them in great numbers to exchange their own products for the manufactures of the Balubans.

Takes His Wife's Name.

The surrender of his name by a young man in Delaware who recently married a widow, and is hereafter to be known by his wife's name, has elicited considerable comment as a quite remarkable innovation of a custom that is hoary with age.

Celery! Celery!

There is one business man in New York who deals in nothing whatever but celery. He is the only man dealing exclusively in celery in the United States, perhaps in the world. He has been in the business eight years, and has built up a large trade.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

The debate on the tariff in the Senate, Monday, attracted members of the lower house, which was forced to adjourn for lack of a quorum. In a speech which occupied three hours in delivering Senator Gorman charged the President with duplicity in connection with the tariff bill. Three of his associates testified to the truth of his charges. Among the nominations sent to the Senate were those of C. H. Robinson for pension agent at Des Moines and E. H. Hunter for postmaster at the same place.

The President's letter on the tariff again occupied the Senate on Tuesday. Mr. Hill spoke earnestly in defense of the executive, replying to Mr. Gorman's attack. In the House, a bill was passed to reinstate Democratic postal clerks dismissed from service by Mr. Wanamaker in 1889.

The debate in the Senate Wednesday was rather tame. The galleries were crowded, as usual, in expectation of a renewal of the great struggle of the past few days. Mr. Caffery got the floor early and resumed his speech. His remarks did not arouse much interest, and the galleries were soon visibly thinned out. Mr. Hunton, of Virginia, and his colleague, Mr. Daniel, followed with short and uninteresting speeches, and at 2:30 the Senate went into executive session, and shortly afterward adjourned. In the House a bill was passed permitting fourth-class postmasters to administer oaths to pensioners in remote districts.

In the Senate Thursday only six votes were cast for free coal and iron ore, Hill's motion to recede being defeated. The day's proceedings in the House were dull in the extreme and one by one the members left their desks, until by 3:30 o'clock there were not half a hundred members in the chamber. The conference report on the fortifications bill was agreed to. The day had been assigned to the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, and some twenty or thirty bills reported from this committee were passed, among them the following: To establish a lighthouse at the entrance to Galveston harbor, Texas, at a cost of $35,000, making Oakland, Cal., a port of entry; amending the act for the construction of a bridge across the St. Louis River between Minnesota and Wisconsin; to bridge the Osage River in Missouri and the Missouri River near DeWitt, Mo., and to authorize the St. Louis, Avoyelles and Southwestern Railway Company to bridge Bayou Des Glaises and Atchafalaya River in Louisiana. At 4:52 p. m. the House adjourned.

The Senate is still occupied with the tariff. The measure has been reported back to conference. There was not a quorum of members in the House Friday at any time, and all the business transacted was by unanimous consent. Only once was there a hitch, and in this case advantage was taken of the absence of a quorum to prevent action on a bill. The message announcing that the Senate insisted on its amendments to the tariff bill and agreed to the request of the House for a further conference was received by the House at 3:15 p. m. without giving rise to any demonstration. At 5 o'clock the House took a recess until 8 o'clock. The evening session was devoted to private bills.

The Senate's work Saturday was altogether with the tariff. The House held a short session, but managed in two and one-quarter hours to transact a good deal of business of a private character. Half a dozen private bills, heretofore favorably acted upon at the Friday night sessions, were passed, as were also a number of other Senate and House bills. The only thing of importance in the day's proceedings was the discussion without action of a bill to amend the Revised Statutes so as to give Federal courts additional powers in dealing with violations of the copyright law as it applies to plays and operas. A joint resolution was adopted still further extending the appropriations for 1894 until Aug. 13, and as the thermometer was within speaking distance of the century mark at 2:20 p. m. the House adjourned.

Bringing Up of Mothers.

A young person has been writing an article on the bringing up of mothers. Thirty years ago mothers were not brought up; they just grew. They wore caps early, gave up dancing when their children were in short frocks and knickerbockers, and developed all sorts of incorrect ideas about chaperons and flirtations. Formerly the young idea was trained the way it should go. Now the old tree is pruned and pared into shape. Girls have assumed the responsibility of looking after their mothers. Mothers are kept to see to a well-ordered house, coax refractory fathers and attend to bores. They must, moreover, be ornamental, look well at the head of the table, dress becomingly, keep up with the fashions, look nice when the girls take them out with them, and smile encouragingly at the young men. Nor are their morals forgotten. Frequently one hears a girl say: "It is an interesting show, but not one I'd care to take my mother to."

Graphic Description.

Alvin R. Berry, a real estate dealer, is suing his wife for divorce in the Chancery Court at Newark. Berry testified that his wife had gone riding with David B. Carpenter, a livery stable keeper. A servant girl who had been employed by Mrs. Berry said she had seen her greet Carpenter with a kiss as he entered the house. Asked if it was a hearty kiss the witness replied: "It sounded like a cow taking her hoof out of the mud."

Eats Eye Stones.

The cat's eye stone, now prized as an ornament, is a very different thing from the ancient cat's eye or eye stone of India, an agate cut so as to show the so-called eye or eyes. It is supposed by some that this latter was used as money in parts of India four centuries ago, and specimens found to-day have an interest to numismatists.

Revolutionary Relic.

The public library of Easthampton, Mass., has been presented with a wedding dress over 100 years old. The garment is of "changeable silk," and weighs less than eight ounces.

This and That.

A RACE horse clears from twenty to twenty-four feet at a bound.

IT costs Great Britain $20,000 to scrape the barnacles off the bottom of one of its big men-o'-war and repaint it, and this has to be done twice a year in the case of nearly every vessel.

BEFORE beginning to fold clothes, or even to hang them out on the line, put on a clean apron if you wish to have the clothes entirely clean. There is always a chance of the damp muslin wiping something from anything soiled with which it comes in contact.

A SIMPLE but graceful and decorative match safe may be made of a goose or duck egg. Break near the smaller end, not being at all particular to make the edges even. Fasten a piece of sand paper with good glue. Decorate according to fancy.

EVERY once in awhile something new is recommended for destroying the odor of onions. The last thing advanced in this line is that parsley is absolutely effective. We give the information to our readers for what it is worth, as we have never tried it. This same vegetable is also strongly recommended as a remedy for tired nerves. The Early Greeks.

The early Greeks depended upon the natural springs and cisterns hewn in the rock, but the insufficiency of the supply led to daring engineering works. As early as 625 B. C., a tunnel, 4,200 feet long, eight feet high, was cut through a hill which stood between Samos and a coveted supply of water. Fifty or sixty years later extensive works of a similar nature were constructed to bring water to Athens from the hills of Hymettus, Pentelicus, and Parnassus. Two conduits from Hymettus passed under the head of the Ilissus, and were cut in the rock for most of the distance. This conduit and one from Pentelicus met in a large reservoir just outside Athens, and from this the water was distributed throughout the city by underground channels. Some of the ancient aqueducts continue to supply Athens at the present time.

How the Hillmen Turn Tail.

It is possible that before our soldiers get to close quarters with the enemy they will see the latter "turn tail." Let them not be deceived. Turning tail is a different thing with the hillmen to what it is with us. The inhabitants of one group of villages, the Rengman, are noticeable for wearing a caudal appendage. This, of course, is not natural. It is fashioned of wood, eighteen inches long, curved upward, tapering to a point. This is fitted to the back, being suspended from the shoulders and secured in position by a sash, which is tied tightly around the waist. This singular appendage is worn in battle and is intended to signify defiance. The wearers turn their backs toward the adversary, and by balancing the body alternately on either leg, wag defiantly in his very face.—National Review.

Patron Saint of Shoemakers.

In the third century Crispin and his brother Crispian, members of a noble Roman family, fled from Rome in consequence of the cruelties inflicted on Christians by the Emperor Diocletian. They settled in the town now called Soissons, in France, where they worked as shoemakers, while they preached the gospel to the Gauls. Crispin was so benevolent that he even stole leather to make shoes for the poor! Hence a charitable deed done at the expense of others is sometimes described as a Crispinade. In 287 both brothers suffered martyrdom, and the shoemakers have ever since taken "King Crispin," as he has been styled, for their patron saint. Out of respect for the brothers, shoemaking is often called "The Gentle Craft."

Three Unsuccessful Euphemisms.

"Wood's Hole" was the original name of a place on the coast of Massachusetts. When it became a fashionable watering place the name was changed to Wood's "Holl," as being more genteel, although meaningless. The national Government has just revived the first name officially, and the genteel folk are indignant, as others of their ilk were when the Government refused to change the name of New York's dangerous waterway, "Hell Gate" to the idiotic "Hurl Gate." This Miss Nancy delicacy recalls the Vermont purist who replaced a vigorous apostrophe of Byron, beginning "O God!" with what he thought the more refined "O Gosh!"—Boston Pilot.

Gounod's Lesson in Modesty.

Gounod, the great musician who died a few months ago, was once waited upon by a young poet anxious for guidance in some work on which he was engaged at the time. Advice was generously given, and then, struck perhaps by his friend's demeanor, Gounod told him that as he grew in his art he could judge of the masters of the past as he (Gounod) now judged of the famous composers of former days. "At your age," Gounod proceeded, "I used to say 'I;' at 25 I said 'I and Mozart;' at 40 'Mozart and I.' Now I say 'Mozart.'"

Artistic.

Nature sometimes does a bit of fantastic gardening on her own account. Just over one of the splendid entrances of the Grand Opera at Paris, there is a young plane tree in full leaf and about three feet high, growing from a chink in the masonry. Some bird is supposed to have deposited the seed of the tree there. Both the director and the architect of the opera have decided that the tree shall be permitted to live and flourish, inasmuch as the entrance has been greatly improved in appearance by it.

Remarkable Coincidence.

John Thacker of Waterford, Va., being accidentally at Cincinnati, bought at a sale of unclaimed baggage a trunk in which he found property that proved to be that of a relative who had been missing for years, and the incident has led to the reunion of a long separated family.

Lobsters.

Lobsters are not peace-abiding crustaceans. They cannot be persuaded to grow up together peaceably. If a dozen newly-hatched specimens are put into an aquarium, within a few days there will be only one—a large, fat, and promising youngster. He will have eaten all the rest.

BALLARD—What's good for a cold, doctor? Dr. Blank—Well, a plentiful stock of pocket handkerchiefs is about as good as anything.

A Use for Half-Burned Carbons.

There is already a demand for the unused and half-burnt carbons from the arc lights. Someone has discovered that carbon is a cure for consumption, and it is a well-known fact that men who work in carbon factories are singularly healthy. Just how the fragments of carbon are broken up and the particles inhaled does not appear, but people collect them a good deal and profess to derive benefit from their use. It has been claimed for years that a smoky atmosphere is a good one for a consumptive patient, although this has been denied by doctors again and again. The carbon theory may account for what some people believe to be nonsense and others an infallible theory.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"He Sniffed an Earthquake."

It is a well-known fact that horses can hear sounds that are not perceptible to human ears. For days previous to the great earthquake in the Riviera the horses of that locality showed every symptom of abject fear, which continued without change of character unless it was in the direction of greater frenzy till the fury of the great convulsion broke forth. Not until a few seconds, however, before the earth began to tremble, did human beings hear the subterranean rumblings. One writer from the scene says that in his opinion the horses knew that the great quake was on the way from seventy-two to 100 hours before their masters heard or felt the first jar.

The Dynograph.

The dynograph-car is one of the most wonderful inventions in railway work. It has only to be rolled over a track to indicate every imperfection in the rails, whether it be spread rails, open joints, or defective iron. Suitable markings are left on the track, according to the fault to be denoted, so that the trackman who follows in the wake of the car has a large proportion of his labor saved, and can see at a glance where his repairs or alterations must begin.

How to Ease Prickly Heat.

If the baby is broken out with heat and is very restless put a teaspoonful of baking soda in a pint of water as hot as you can bear your hand in and wring a soft cloth out of it and rub the child all over with it; it may take a second and even a third application, but it nearly always allays the itching. Be sure the water is quite hot; just hot water applied in an almost scalding temperature will sometimes answer.

Japanese Pipes.

The Japanese smoke in a peculiar manner. The pipes have small metal bowls, with bamboo stems and metal mouthpiece, and only hold enough tobacco for three or four whiffs. They use a tobacco which is cut extremely fine, and looks more like light blond hair than anything else. It is of a very good quality, however. The Japs take a whiff of smoke and inhale it, letting it pass out through the nostrils. They rarely smoke more than one pipeful at a time.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BUTLER.

Items for last week failed to reach the press in time for publication. (Got them next day.—Ed.)

The dry weather is playing havoc with our cornfields.

Dr. J. B. Helwig is expected to fill the M. E. pulpit next Sunday.

Ben Ackerman and Mr. Berger, the Lake Shore operator, have purchased new chainless wheels. Benny was so delighted with his wheel that he rode to Waterloo and back last Sunday morning before breakfast.

J. A. Campbell, agent, sustained no less than four lightning damages by the electrical storm that passed over here the night of the 24th of July. The sufferers were W. A. Mason, Butler; Israel Ringler, Fairfield township; E. R. Shoemaker, Smithfield township, and John Waller, of Metz, and all are being adjusted as rapidly as they can be reached.

Mr. Chilcote, who recently purchased the Perky grist mill seven miles north of Butler has succeeded in fixing up the millstones so that he is making a very good grade of old-fashioned flour. He tells us that he is unable to keep up with the demand for his work, and those using his flour speak very favorably of it. He takes the old time toll—10 per cent. only.

LAST WEEK

J. A. Campbell visited Orland and Fremont on business last week.

D. W. Tombow has married his next door neighbor, Miss Sophia Gengnagle.

Al. Gengnagle has tired of life in Baltimore and has returned to live in Butler.

Machinery is being placed in the canning factory and its operation is only a question of a short time.

The aged mother of J. M. Otis was buried last week. She was among the early settlers in Steuben county.

Orla J. Campbell escaped the cyclone that swept about 90 per cent from the running force on the new Wabash and is still running his car.

Threshing is progressing about here, wheat yielding from 15 to 35 bushels per acre, of an excellent quality and selling at from 49 to 50 cents per bushel.

The basket factory is again in full blast, after a few days of idleness caused by the strike. Three carloads were shipped last week and many other orders are awaiting shipment.

A dozen or more of the families that moved from Butler to Ashley are again moving back to Butler, all on account of a small strike that these people found uncomfortably near to them.

It does one good to hear the old soldiers enlogizing President Cleveland for his patriotic response to the country's call for help during Debs' anarchistic rebellion and to see the old rebel soldiers standing manfully by him.

T. C. Fralick has been making a vigorous effort to obtain work on some of the railroads, and though thousands of places are being filled that had belonged to discharged strikers, yet he found several men waiting ahead of him at every point. The strike was surely ill-timed, to say nothing about its merits or cause.

Rev. John B. Helwig, of Urbana, Ohio, filled the Lutheran pulpit last Sunday. Dr. Helwig is among the first ministers of Ohio, and though past the meridian of life, yet possesses all the vigor of his best years. The Dr. is an inveterate enemy of the saloon (as all good men ought to be) and deals with this enemy to all that is good and noble in life with such scathing anathemas as to make his hearers fear and loathe the contemptible evil.

CONCORD.

P. Notestine, of Cedarville, visited relatives over Sunday.

Tell Elson visited his father at Fairfield center over Sunday.

W. D. Rickel, of Auburn, came down Saturday on a business trip.

Maggie Baughman is slowly recovering from her recent illness.

J. A. Brent has sold Uncle Sol. Shilling some land adjoining his home farm.

Ida and Della Koch, of Fairview, visited their sister, Anna Baker, last Thursday.

Canstance and Clara Burley, of St Joe, visited their aunt, Linna Johnson, Tuesday.

Mrs. Maud Monroe and Master Stanley visited in the family of Henry Milton last week.

Mrs. Howard, of Warsaw, and Miss Hilt, of Auburn, spent several days with Mrs. Mansfield.

Charlie Wyatt and family from Auburn, are spending a few days with his parents, D. W. Wyatt.

Misses Loretta Cody and Maud Notestine, of Ft. Wayne, were the guests of Alice Draggoo over Sunday.

Mr. James, of Ft. Wayne, who has been visiting relative here, has been very sick for three days past.

Mrs. Sade Woodcox and children, of Auburn Jc., came down Saturday morning, returning in the evening.

Will Pence came home from Garrett Thursday with a mashed foot. He was in the employ of the railroad company.

Charlie Rhodes and family, of Spencerville, and D. D. Borley and family, of St. Joe, visited in the family of J. B. Gibford last Thursday.

The meeting was largely attended last Sabbath, there being over sixty communicants. Rev. Hugh Steckhouse, her travelling president, delivered one of his excellent sermons.

Mollie Buchanan, Ellen Baker, Dide Bone, Mat James, Mol. Hennessey, Jen. Hull and Anna Ricketts spent Wednesday with Nancy Kennedy in Spencerville. They were well entertained, a good feature being a splendid dinner.

Last Sunday after returning from church Rilla Coy was taken violently sick. She suffered a partial stroke of paralysis in connection with brain trouble. Her physicians have meager hopes of her permanent recovery.

Best for Flux.

Mr. Thomas Bate, editor of the Graphic, Texarkana, Arkansas, has found what he believes to be the best remedy in existence for the flux. His experience is well worth remembering. He says: "Last summer I had a very severe attack of flux. I tried almost every known remedy, none giving relief. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was recommended to me. I purchased a bottle and received almost immediate relief. I continued to use the medicine and was entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending this remedy to any person suffering with such a disease, as in my opinion it is the best medicine in existence." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

PAINT cracks.—It often costs more to prepare a house for repainting that has been painted in the first place with cheap ready-mixed paints, than it would to have painted it twice with strictly pure white lead, ground in pure linseed oil.

forms a permanent base for repainting and never has to be burned or scraped off on account of scaling or cracking. It is always smooth and clean. To be sure of getting strictly pure white lead, purchase any of the following brands:

"Anchor," "Collier," "Eckstein," "Shipman," "Armstrong & McKelvy," "Southern," "Beymer-Bauman," "Red Seal," "Davis-Chambers," "Fahnestock."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a one-pound can to a 25-pound keg of Lead and mix your own paints. Saves time and annoyance in matching shades, and insures the best paint that it is possible to put on wood.

Send us a postal card and get our book on paints and color-card, free; it will probably save you a good many dollars.

Illinois and Wisconsin,

As every one knows, contain the most delightful summer resorts in the northwest, and they are best reached by the Wisconsin Central, which has been very aptly termed "the line of lakes." Particular attention has been paid to this class of travel, and every comfort and convenience of passengers looked after. There are good hotels at all these retreats which open about June 1st and afford very good accommodations at reasonable rates. For full particulars, rates, maps and guide books, address Jas. C. Pond, Genl. Pass. Agt., Milwaukee, Wis. 31

Cured the Children.

The success of Mrs. Annie M. Beam, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, in the treatment of Diarrhœa in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many mothers. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnstown, Pa., after the great flood, on account of my husband being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the diarrhœa very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I knew of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be excelled and cheerfully recommend it." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

The Hub's Boy's Head-to-Foot Outfit.

For several months past our readers have seen the advertisement in our columns of "Boys Head-to-Foot Outfit. $5.00." It includes a suit of all wool clothes, Stanley Cap to match the suit, and a pair of stout and shapely shoes. It is sent on receipt of price, or, if the buyer wants to examine the goods before paying for them he sends $1.00 and the outfit is then sent by express with privilege of examination, then if satisfactory the purchaser pays the other $4.00. If not he announces that he does not want the goods and they are sent back to the express company and the Hub sends the dollar back. Nothing could be fairer than this, and the offer comes from one of the biggest houses in the United States.

$1,000 For Nothing.

Curtis Buntin, President St., Brooklyn N. Y., spent $1,000 with doctors, and at famous Springs, in the effort to cure a bad case of Rheumatism; but to no avail. Drummond's Lightning Remedy helped him from the start, and by its use he was fully restored. It will do the same for you if given a trial. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co, 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will send to your express address a month's treatment—two large bottles of their remedy. Agents wanted. 31-32

TO A YOUNG WOMAN.

You have asked me to write you a poem—
Alack, what a task you have set
For a slave, who is weak, but so willing
To bring to you all he can get
From the field of his fancy and feeling
And lay it down here at your feet,
Ashamed of the tribute he offers,
Because it is so incomplete.

Had you loaned me your eyes with their dreaming,
Had you loaned me your cheek with its glow,
Had you loaned me your brow with its sweetness,
Had you loaned me your brow with its snow,
Had you loaned me your voice with its music,
Had you loaned me your hand with its clasp,
Had you loaned me your heart with its promise—
What a poem would be in my grasp!

But all these treasures of beauty,
Of hope and affection and thought,
Into some other poet's poem,
I fear me, are already wrought,
And I take up my pen with doubting
To write a response to your call,
For the bricks I am making are strawless—
I can't write a poem—that's all.

First Public Concerts.

Public concerts owe their direct encouragement to John Banister, who had won fame by his playing on the violin, and who succeeded the celebrated Baltzar as leader of Charles II's band of 24 violins. Pepys, in an entry in his dairy for February, 1667, tells us the court gossip of the day—"how the king's viallin Banister is mad that the king hath a Frenchman come to be chief of some part of the king's musique."

It was rumored that he was dismissed from the royal service for saying English violins were better than the French, a statement which was no doubt regarded as heretical, opposed as it was to the prevailing court view as to the superiority of France in all questions of taste, and especially with regard to music.

Banister's concerts at the close of the year 1672 were advertised in the London Gazette as follows: "These are to give notice that at Mr. John Banister's house (now called the Musick School), over against the George Tavern in White Fryers, the present Monday will be musick performed by excellent masters, beginning precisely at 4 of the clock in the afternoon, and every afternoon for the future precisely at the same hour."

Four years later on we read again: "At the Academy in Little Lincoln's Inn Fields will begin the first part of the Parley of Instruments, composed by Mr. John Banister." The admission was at this time as a rule a shilling, and these concerts seem to have been held pretty regularly down to within a short time of Banister's death, which took place in 1679.—Chambers' Journal.

Observation Cultivated.

A novel method of cultivating the faculty of observation in children has been introduced by a teacher in an up town kindergarten. She tells her pupils that she is about to have a call from some one who will remain only three minutes; that no one must directly stare at him, but that the pupil who gives the best description of him after his departure will receive a prize. The other day her father, a Grand Army veteran in uniform, performed the part of caller, and some of the personal descriptions after he had bowed himself out denoted unusually quick and accurate attention to detail. One boy had counted all his buttons and gave the number correctly, another noticed an almost invisible scar on his face, and various others gave details of the color and shape of his beard, hair and uniform. The one who received the prize was a little girl, who declared he had "an expression on his face."—Philadelphia Record.

INVESTIGATING AN ACCIDENT.

The Railroad Engineer Gets Out of Trouble For Running Too Fast.

Superintendent Warren of the Eastern Illinois railway was telling the other evening of a certain engineer in the employ of the road who had been repeatedly cautioned against running too fast. He was running a freight train, and on one portion of his division there was a steep hill. His orders were to never permit his train to go down that hill faster than 15 miles an hour, but it was general belief that whenever he had a safe opportunity he sailed down that grade just as fast as the wheels would turn. One day he did go down the hill so fast that the entire train left the track at the bottom, and there were box cars piled up high. An investigation immediately followed, and the engineer, in railroad parlance, was put on the "carpet." He swore in the most solemn terms that he went down the hill not faster than 15 miles an hour, but that just before reaching the bottom he lost control of the airbrake, and the speed became so great the train could not keep the track; hence the wreck, for which he was not responsible.

"But," said his superintendent, "we have a man here, a farmer, who was on the hillside that day when you came down. He stood at the edge of a clearing, saw you at the top and all the way down, and he will swear that he never saw a train going so fast in all his life, and he is a man 60 years old. He says that it was next to an impossibility to see the wheels. What do you say to that?"

The engineer never hesitated.

"I know the man. I saw him the day after the wreck, and he told the same story to me, only there was a little more to it."

"What was that?"

"Why, he told me that it was the first train of cars he had ever seen in his life, and I don't think he would be a very good judge of speed."

There was silence in the room for a few moments, and the engineer got off with a 60 days' suspension.—Chicago Herald.

Ibsen and Tolstoi.

Blumenthal, the great theater manager of Berlin, was once talking with Tolstoi about Ibsen and said: "I have put a good many of his plays on the stage, but I can't say that I quite understand them. Do you understand them?" "Ibsen doesn't understand them himself," Tolstoi replied. "He just writes them and then sits down and waits. After awhile his expounders and explainers come and tell him what he meant."—San Francisco Argonaut.

He Didn't Object.

"But, my dear sir," said the man who procrastinates, "if I pay you this money I will have to borrow it of some one else."

"Very well," replied the cold blooded citizen, "so long as you pay what you owe me I don't object to your owing what you pay me."—American Industries.

A Curious Point of Philology.

It has been found in the case of primitive river names in the old world that a syllable meaning water occurs once at least and in many instances several times in the same name. From this philologists have been able to trace successive conquests as each conquering tribe added its own name for water or river to the syllables already forming the names of streams within the conquered district. The same thing has happened in this country, as the whites have tacked the word river to many Indian names already including the word.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OPPORTUNITY!

$4.80 Worth of Sheet Music,

Best Book on Hypnotism,

75 Complete Stories, neatly bound,

Our Monthly for one year,

Transportation all prepaid,

All for 50 cents to every person answering this advertisement.

And also a Fine Watch Free, as a present, to the persons sending each thirtieth answer received from day to day in reply to this advertisement.

IS THIS POSSIBLE? YES, IT IS TRUE!

We repeat: For 50 cents received from you we send you the $4.80 Worth of Sheet Music, the best Book on Hypnotism, also 75 Complete Stories, neatly bound, and our house hold monthly for one year; and besides that, we make a present to the sender of each thirtieth answer to this advertisement of a fine watch (ladies' or gents's, as desired) of excellent appearance and workmanship (regular price $7) absolutely free.

THE MUSIC is strictly first-class, new, COPYRIGHTED, regular 40-cent sheet music, printed in the finest manner on a superior quality of paper, with engraved title. (Publisher's price, 40 cents a sheet.) It does not consist of old or hackneyed pieces, but of perfectly new copyrighted pieces, which will be sent to our subscribers monthly, as published. As the newest pieces will be included it is impossible to give the titles in advance, but it will comprise the latest and best vocal and instrumental pieces by the leading composers. When you see this music you will be filled with wonder at our being able to furnish it for less than several dollars. If you want to see it before accepting our offer, a sample sheet will be sent for 10 cents.

THE BOOK ON HYPNOTISM is a complete exposition of the wonderful and mysterious sciences of Mesmerism, Hypnotism, Clairvoyance and Mind Reading and explains the secrets of these peculiar sciences so clearly and forcibly that those things which to most people have appeared strange, unreal, mysterious and supernatural, are made as plain as the light of day.

THE 75 COMPLETE STORIES, neatly bound, are a collection of the most excellent and absorbing stories of love, heroism and exciting adventure.

Was so much good value ever offered anywhere for so small a sum? Here you have a supply of fresh and splendid music for a year, and an attractive supply of tip top reading for the same period, all for the small sum of 50 cents, and then you may be one of those who receive the watches as well. That is an important thing for you to remember. We are anxious to double our subscription list within 60 days, and we have realized that a supreme effort is required, in view of the dulness of the times. If you do not already grasp the magnitude of our offer, please read it again and "take it in." Let us hear from you at once. If you can get up a club of thirty persons to join in answering this advertisement you thereby make sure of the watch, as the latter is presented to the sender of each thirtieth answer or subscription. The thirty subscriptions can all be sent in one letter to us. Each subscriber in such a club of course receives each and every one of the premiums mentioned above.

You need not cut out this advertisement. Simply state that you accept our offer and enclose 50 cents. Save this advertisement, as it is our contract with you which we will carry out in every particular.

Reader, we ask you to favor us with your own immediate response. Your particular individual support is worth much to us. Address, HOMES AND HEARTHS PUBLISHING CO., No. 21 Park Row, New York.

Read What DRS. KENNEDY & KERGAN Have Done.

"At 14 years of age I learned a bad habit which almost ruined me. I became nervous and weak. My back troubled me. I could stand no exertion. Head and eyes became dull. Dreams and drains at night weakened me. I tried seven Medical Firms, Electric Belts, Patent Medicines and Family Doctors. They gave me no help. A friend advised me to try Drs. Kennedy & Kergan. They sent me one month's treatment and it cured me. I could feel myself gaining every day. Their New Method Treatment cures when all else fails." They have cured many of my friends."

CURES GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED.

Cured 5 years ago. Capt. Townsend.

"Some 8 years ago I contracted a serious constitutional blood disease. I went to Hot Springs to treat for syphilis. Mercury almost killed me. After a while the symptoms again appeared. Throat became sore, pains in limbs, pimples on face, blotches, eyes red, loss of hair, glands enlarged, etc. A medical friend advised Drs. Kennedy & Kergan's New Method Treatment. It cured me, and I have had no symptoms for five years. I am married and happy. As a doctor, I heartily recomend it to all who have this terrible disease—syphilis." It will eradicate the poison from the blood."

The Hub, Clothiers, Hatters, Furnishers and Shoers, CHICAGO, ILL. STATE & JACKSON' STS

A Model State Camp.

Harper's Weekly.

The great State of New York, as befitted her rank among her sister commonwealths, and profiting by the experiences of the railway riots of 1877, was among the first to undertake the placing of her militia forces on a baeis of efficiency, and to hold the troops in preparation for the sterner duties of the soldier. The establishment some years ago of the State Camp at Peekskill has proved the main factor in the surprising improvement in soldierly qualities and the high state of discipline which are now characteristic of the National Guard of the State. It would be hard indeed to find a more picturesque site or one better adapted for the purpose than the plateau on which the camp is pitched. Situated right at the entrance to the gorge of the Hudson Highlands, on a flat-topped promontory jutting out from the high hills surrounding it on three sides, the canvas of the tents, creamy white in the bright sunshine, gleams in contrast with the dark verdure beyond, while, stretching in lake like expanse to the heights on the opposite shore, the broad river curves, disappearing around the rocky bluffs to the north. On two sides smooth parades stretch to the edge of the grassy plain—ideal drill grounds for any branch of the service, horse, foot, or dragoons; and the surrounding country, wooded and hilly, crossed by winding roads and dotted with clearings, offers opportunitias for manœuvers and exercises in minor tactics.

Hard work is done at the camp; there is no leisure, and the militiaman's time is fully occupied. At five o'clock, with the boom of the morning gun and the sonorous rolling of the drums beating reveillie, the camp wakens to the work of the day, and the long streets of tents swarm with men, as at the call for assembly the companies spring into ranks, and the monotonous tones of the sergeants' voices are heard calling the roll. Then, as the ranks are broken, the reports are made, and the soldiers scatter to make the rough camp toilet and prepare for the morning drill soon to follow. At 7:30 the drums over at the guard tent rattle "Pease upon a trencher," and the companies swing off with measured tread to breakfast in the mess hall, from which they return to police the quarters and place everything in order for the daily recurring inspection. All over the camp the men are busy as bees, sweeping, rolling up tent walls, making up the beds, removing rubbish, scouring cups and basins, raising tent floors, and placing everything in apple-pie order.

Sea Necklaces.

Almost every one has seen the curious "sea ruffles" or "sea necklaces," which are found plentifully on ocean beaches. These are the egg cases of the sea snails. They consist of a number of small dish-shaped envelopes attached along a sort of stem, the largest being in the middle. In each envelope there is a little spot of thinner material, which the young break through when they are ready to be hatched. When the female gasteropod is about to lay she buries herself in the sand, from the surface of which the "necklace" of eggs is gradually extruded. Being thus set adrift and and exposed to the elements, as well as to devouring enemies, few of the eggs are ever hatched, but those which do come into the world safely and survive doubtless live to a very great age.

Dedicated to the League Chainless,

By UNCLE JOHN DENNISON, of Ft. Wayne.

Give me the wheel with a bevel gear.
Climbs a hill without a strain;
Don't have to tug and work and push,
Like you do with the darned old chain.

Runs easy? Well I should say—yes;
And I'll tell you the reason why:
The gear is in oil all the time,
While your darned old chain is dry.

I'm not one of those racing lads,
I'm too fat to bend, you know;
When I get astride my Chainless
I've someplace I want to go.

I don't ride it just for fun,
I mean business when I go;
And one don't need knee pants or guards,
When you ride the Chainless, you know.

She's a daisy, boys, get one and ride,
And you will say the same as I,
That gears that always run in oil
Are better than a chain that's dry.

HUCKLEBERRY STRIKE.

How the Wisconsin Indians are Letting Their Thoughts Turn Lightly to Civilization.

BLUEBERRIES are what they call them in Wisconsin, while in Michigan you are liable to have the hotel waiter ask if you will have "crackleberry pie." But, whether they grow in marshes or on uplands, your true Hoosier always calls them "Huckleberries." Only in cultured Boston society do we hear them alluded to as "whortleberries." But we are wandering from the subject. We started in to talk about a new-fangled strike. Strikes are becoming fashionable. Even the Indians who pick huckleberries on what are called "blueberry farms" in northern Wisconsin have struck for higher wages. Every season these Indians are permitted to leave their reservations to pick the blueberries for the owners of the berry swamps and other berry lands. This year they picked a few days and then left, declaring the pay too small. If the crop is not gathered soon, it will spoil. Here is a chance for the A. R. U. to order a "sympathetic" strike all over the country. If anyone else goes in to pick those berries and save them from spoiling, the "scabs" should be kept out by force. When they get a pailful of berries gathered, the A. R. U. should kick it over, waste the fruit, burn the marshes, and pound the "scabs" over the head. They should also contribute to support the Indians in idleness until the monopolistic owners of the huckleberry bushes give in. Then the Indians might all be called together and resolutions passed denouncing capital and advising them all to support the populist party. All this is no more out of reason, than what has already been done in several cases.

PROUDER'N PEACOCKS.

COMMON WEALERS are getting proud. It is but a few short months since the first "commonweal army" started on foot from Massilon, O, to march to Washington. D. C., to astonish congress with their haughty demands and overawing presence. Soon, from all over the Union, similar "armies" took up the line of march, all on foot. Coxey, the "general" of the first "army," rode in a carriage drawn by valuable horses, and several of his "officers" rode other horses of high degree. But the rank and file went on foot. Eventually they reached Washington. Soon, other "armies" from east and west joined them, mostly coming in on foot But at times even the haughty tramp-wealer grew tired and his knees knocked pitifully under the weight of his body as he swung himself along the dusty road. He grew tired of the long tramp and began asking farmers along the line of march to turn out and help the "soldiers" along with their teams. Many farmers did this, in order to save their smoke houses and chicken coops from attack by these incipient populists But even the good nature of the farmers gave out under these repeated and heavy calls. So they quit neglecting their crops to haul Coxey's recruits across the country. Then the tired "wealer" began to steal trains. Trains were better, even, than wagons. They go faster, and they could join their idolized leader at Washington so much sooner. True, there are laws against capturing trains, or even stopping them. But what is law for common people, should not, they argued, be construed as against the "soldiers of the commonweal of Christ," as they profanely termed their aggregation of tramps and dead beats. Well, stealing trains went on merrily for a time, till the U. S. courts and U. S. troops had to be called in to help put a stop to it. But the commonwealer was not to be stopped by fines and prison bars, and so, not discouraged by the punishment meted out to the first train thieves who went to jail and prison, the new "armies" keep pressing forward and stealing new trains. They no longer propose to walk. The "living petitions on foot" that were to strike terror into the hearts of timid congressmen with small majorities at their backs, were to be changed to "living petitions on railway trains." In brief, the wealers had become proud, proud as peacocks. They began to look down on tramps of the common sort—those who beg from door to door and go on foot. They did not now have to beg. When an army reached a town, a delegation was sent out to show them where they could pitch their camp. Good food was provided and no begging to do. Why should not the "wealer" grow proud? So he goes on stealing trains, and living, or trying to live, on the fat of the land, without money and without price, and what evidently suits him better, without work. And, indeed, is he not a man and a brother? Yes, verily, and he has a vote, a great big purchasable vote. A vote that will count in electing men to reform our laws and bringing about a millennium that, singularly enough, respectable lawmakers seem to have overlooked. So the Coxey followers are proud again. Their great leader has become a great leader in a would be great party. He has become a populist. The populists are proud of Coxey and proud of his wealers, provided the latter will vote right, and Coxey is proud of his new-found party home. Some of these thoughts were started into form by the fight on Friday last between an army of wealers at Connellsville, Pa., and trainmen. The wealers had overrun and intimidated the town and eaten all the food to be had, then boarded a train, 200 strong, to ride free to the next town. The train was sidetracked and the trainmen tried to drive the proud wealers off. A big fight resulted. About 100 wealers went to jail. Several on both sides were injured. Truly the commonwealer is getting too proud for his own good.

BICYCLE RACE MEETS.

THERE have been several events of this kind lately, tho' so far Auburn has not been the favored locality. Still, anyone can see it is an interesting event, though seldom as striking as in our picture. But they have been held all around us, and many of our citizens have attended them. The largest and most important was held at Ft. Wayne July 6 and 7. Columbia City also had a big meet the 31st ult. A number of our most prominent wheelmen were in attendance at these races, which were the finest ever held in the state.

August 9, there will be a reunion of cyclists at Defiance, at which time a 25 mile road race will be run. The winner in the race will receive a $50 gold medal. But the big race of the season will be held at Kendallville sometime in September. The flyers will all be there. There will be a fat man's race, an old man's race, a lean man's race and a boy's race, all on bicycles. This will be the great race meet of the season. Auburn ought to have it, and might if she would, but she has rather chosen to make other meets a success by her presence.

Arctic Chilliness.

A person who has never been in the polar regions can have no idea of what cold is. When we have the temperature down to ten degrees or fifteen degrees above zero, we think it bitterly cold, and if our houses were not as warm as at least fifty degrees above zero we should begin to think of freezing to death. Think, then, of living where the mercury goes down to thirty-five degrees below zero in the house, in spite of the stove. Of course in such a case fur garments are piled on until a man looks like a great bundle of skins.

Dr. Moss, of the polar expedition of 1875 and 1876, among other odd things, tells of the effect of cold on a wax candle which he burned there. The temperature was thirty-five degrees below zero, and the doctor must have been considerably discouraged when, upon looking at his candle, he discovered that the flame had all it could do to keep warm. It was so cold that the flame could not melt all the wax of the candle, but was forced to cut its way down, leaving a sort of skeleton of the candle standing. There was heat enough, however, to melt oddly shaped holes in the thin walls of wax, and the result was a beautiful lacelike cylinder of white, with a tongue of yellow flame burning inside it and sending out into the darkness many streaks of light.

Teachers' Institute.

The DeKalb County Teachers' Institute will be held in the First M. E church in this place August 27 to 31 inclusive. The regular daily instructors are Wm. H. Maes, Ph. D., Professor of History in Syracuse University, New York, and Mrs. Sarah Tarney Campbell, late Professor of Methods in the Indiana State Normal School and reviser of the Indiana State Series of Readers.

The Annual Institute Lecture Course is not to be excelled by any previous effort. Monday there will take place a fine musical concert, a reunion of the teachers and, possibly, a banquet. On Thursday evening the Annual Institute Sermon will be given, and Wednesday and Thursday evenings will be devoted as usual to popular day lectures. These will be given respectively by Col. Geo. W. Bain, "Kentucky's Favorite Orator," and Rev. Robert McIntyre, the "eloquent divine" of Denver, Colorado.

Street Fair at Butler.

The Butler street fair takes place Sept. 4, 5 and 6. There will be trotting and other races and bicycle races in the streets. There will be a baby show on Tuesday, at which a prize will be given. The first evening there will be an illuminated bicycle parade, second evening a grand concert of 100 voices, and the third evening there will be fireworks. Each evening a balloon ascension. All free. All are invited to wait for the Butler street fair and then come and enjoy it. 32

An Indiana Man a Slave and in Prison for Twenty-one Years—Fort Wayne's Big Race Meeting—An Explorer Murdered—Drowned.

$20,000 IN PURSES.

To be Given at Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 27 to Sept. 1.

Extessive improvements have been made by the Fort Wayne Driving Club in anticipation of their great August race meeting. A large number of new stalls have been built, and a new electric car line will land passengers almost into the grand stand.

SAMUEL ENSIGN.

A Valparaiso Man Was Twelve Years in a Spanish Prison.

Valparaiso (Ind.) special: Samuel Ensign, who left this city twenty-one years ago to make a trip as engineer of an ocean steamer, returned to this county the other day and tells a strange story of his absence. The vessel on which he shipped went to Cuba, where the captain got into trouble with the authorities, and the crew was seized by the Spanish authorities. Ensign was thrown into a cell in the old government prison, where he was kept prisoner for twelve years, when he was taken out and given to a prominent Catholic priest as a body servant, and for nine years he was a slave. The priest with Ensign as valet, started on a year's tour, arriving in New Orleans about a month ago, when Ensign deserted him, starting north to try and find his wife, whom he had left in this city. The other day he reached Michigan City and made his way to the home of James and John Prentice, two prominent farmers, who are nephews of his, and where he found his wife.

A Famous War Governor Dead.

Ex-Governor Austin Blair, Michigan's "war governor," passed away at his home in Jackson. His death was peaceful. His ailment was inflammation of the bladder and kidneys. The bladder trouble had bothered him for years, but this was not considered dangerous until complications of the kidneys arose, from which he has been gradually sinking for some time, having been confined to his bed for two months. A year ago he announced that he would write a book on "Recollections of a War Governor." He was busily engaged on this for some time, and it is believed this had something to do with hastening his end.

Vigilant Wins Again.

The American yacht Vigilant defeated both of her British rivals, the Satanita and the Britannia, in the great event of the Royal London Yacht clubs. The course was around the Isle of Wight, a distance of 55 miles. It was estimated when the Britannia finished that the Satanita was nearly half an hour astern of the victorious American. Time at the finish: Vigilant, 5:04:35; Britannia, 5:12:48; Satanita, 5:46:20. The whistles of the yachts and the voices of the multitude were silent when the white sloop swept across the line.

Attempt to Wreck a Train.

Chicago special: An east-bound Pan Handle passenger train was ditched at Western Avenue and Fortieth Street by two men who threw a switch and derailed a couple of cars. There was considerable excitement but no one was injured. After three hours' delay, the train resumed its journey. The two train wreckers, who were arrested, gave their names as Frank Conners and Fred Palmer. It is not known if they are strikers or even sympathizers.

Explorer Murdered.

Tien Tsin (China) special: Jules Deutril De Rhines, the eminent French explorer, has been murdered at Thibet and his body thrown into the river. The French envoy to China has addressed a protest to the government, demanding the recovery and return of the unfortunate man's body and papers. The envoy also demands that the Chinese Government make an apology for the occurrence and provide a proper compensation for the family of the murdered man.

Big Fire in St. Paul.

Fire broke out at Minnehaha and Macubin streets, St. Paul, and destroyed $120,000 worth of property, including a bridge belonging to the city, an ice house belonging to the St. Paul Lake Ice Company with 6,000 tons of ice, 400 tons of hard coal, 250 tons of soft coal, 1,000 cords of wood and eight cars belonging to the Northwestern Fuel Company.

Men Turned Away.

Two thousand men who applied for work at the Chicago stock yards Tuesday were turned away. A crowd of 500 attempted to interfere with the work of new men at Forty-seventh street and Center avenue and the police were called upon to disperse them. The butchers' strike continues unabated.

Drowned in the Ohio River.

John and Charles Moore, brothers, aged 13 and 18, were drowned in the Ohio River near Toronto, Ohio, while out skiff riding with another boy and three girls. The skiff broke in two in fifteen feet of water. The other four persons in the boat were rescued.

Quick Trip with Tea.

San Francisco special: The British ship Queen Victoria made a quick trip across from Yokohama. She was just thirty-eight days on the trip. Her cargo was composed entirely of tea, and all was consigned to Eastern dealers.

Iowa Town Burning.

Des Moines special: The town of Adair, sixty miles west of here, is burning. Help has been asked from Stuart.

Buying Arms.

London special: In spite of the instructions which, as announced, were sent to Admiral Sir E. R. Fremantle, in command of the China station, not to allow British ships to carry war material to either China or Japan, it is known that the Chinese Minister here is busy with the Armstrong people of England, and the Krupp concern of Germany. All parties having good, bad, or indifferent war material for sale are in negotiation with both the Chinese and Japanese representatives, and both countries are known to be placing large orders. The Japanese, for instance, expect to be able to dispatch a steamship full of war material from England for Japan next week. It is stated that this furnishing of munitions of war to Japan and China is a clear violation of the laws of neutrality.

IN AN ICE JAM.

Walter Wellman's Steamer Wrecked, Goes to Pieces, But the Explorer Pushes on to the Pole.

Chicago special: A cablegram was received in this city from Tromsoe, Norway, announcing that Capt. Emil Pederson, Engineer L. Winship, H. Westfalt, mountainer and cook, and one sailor of the polar expedition which left that place on May 1, on the steamer Ragnvald Jarl, under command of Walter Wellman, have returned to Tromsoe on a Whaler. They bring information of the loss of the Ragnvald Jarl on May 24, or three weeks after the vessel had left Danes Island, near Spitzbergen. A great field of pack ice was encountered and despite efforts to escape, the boat was ground to pieces. Commander Wellman and his party had sufficient warning of the impending destruction to enable them to escape to the ice with the greater portion of their scientific instruments, aluminum boats, provisions, and dogs. Undaunted by the misfortune Commander Wellman and the remainder of the party, resolutely set out in the search for the pole. They were then within a few degrees of the latitude reached by Lockwood, of the Greely expedition. The loss of the Ragnvald Jarl will greatly hamper the intrepid explorer, but it is probable that another boat will be fitted up at once and dispatched to the relief of the party.

THE GUILLOTINE.

It Will End the Career of Carnot's Assassin.

Lyons special: Cesario Santo, the assassin of President Carnot, was found guilty and sentenced to death by the guillotine. It took the jury only a quarter of an hour to agree upon a verdict. It went out at noon and fifteen minutes later returned with its verdict ready. The courtroom was crowded, and, although there was no question as to what the verdict would be, the excitement was intense. The gallery was filled with ladies. The prisoner himself was apparently the most disinterested person in the Courtroom. A guard of four gendarmes watched his every movement, but he was quiet and gave them no trouble until the verdict had been read and sentence passed upon him.

The verdict was "guilty without extenuating circumstances," and immediately after the reading of it the presiding judge, M. Breuillac, pronounced the sentence of death by the guillotine. Then it was that Santo jumped up and cried: "Vive la revolutionize sociale!" but he was immediately seized by the gendarmes and hurried away to his cell beneath the court-house. As he left the room, however, he turned and shouted: "Courage, comrades! Vive l'anarchie!"

PUBLIC DEBT STATEMENT.

An Apparent Increase of $1,552,604 During the Month of July.

The regular monthly statement of the public debt, issued by the Treasury Department, shows that the aggregate of the public debt on July 31, 1894, was $1,633,806,240, as against $1,632,253,636 on June 30, 1894. This apparant increase of $1,552,604 is owing to the increase in the issue of certificates and treasury notes, which, however, are offset by an equal amount of cash in the treasury. Aside from this item, the statement shows a net decrease in the public debt of $873,905. On July 31, 1895, the interest-bearing debt amounted to $635,042,590, an increase for the month of $700. The debt on which interest has ceased since maturity amounted to $1,840,850, a decrease of $10,390. The debt bearing no interest was $379,950,470, a decrease of $54,215. The amount of certificates and treasury notes, offset by an equal amount of cash in the treasury, was increased from $615,355,820 on June 30, 1894, to $616,972,397 on July 31, 1894.

THE FLOOR FELL.

And Nine Firemen Went with It—Two Are Dead and Seven Hurt.

Philadelphia special: A tack dropped in a picker machine caused a $50,000 fire in the four-story mill at Randolph and Jefferson streets, occupied by McCloskey & O'Hara, carpet cleaning works, and John A. Cronin & Co., yarn spinners, and two firemen were killed and seven injured by a falling floor. The firemen killed were George Geissell, hoseman, and George W. Dockerell, truckmen.

The firemen, after about an hour's work, extinguished the fire. While eleven of the firemen were on the third floor playing on the bales of wool to extinguish the sparks among them, the charred joists gave way and the floor went through to the cellar, carrying with it nine of the men. Geissell and Dickerell were instantly killed and the others badly bruised and cut by the mass of debris that fell upon them. The injured firemen were quickly gotten out and sent to a hospital.

Plucky Express Messenger.

St. Louis special: An unsuccessful attempt was made the other night to rob the Texas express on the St. Louis and San Francisco road, but the plans of the robbers were frustrated by the determined resistance of the express messenger, who received two bullet wounds while defending his charge. Train No. 3, in charge of Conductor Mansfield, left the St. Louis Union Depot at 8:25 p. m. About 9:30, when the train was nearing Eureka, in St. Louis County, thirty miles from the city, Wells Fargo Express Messenger Ferguson started to go from the car in which he was at work, to the one immediately in the rear. At the door he was confronted by a masked man with a drawn revolver who commanded him to hold up his hands and inform him where the keys to the safe could be found. But the messenger was brave. He, too, had a gun, and he immediately began using it. The robber returned the fire and put one bullet through Ferguson's shoulder and another through his hand. Then he jumped from the train and escaped. Ferguson believes he wounded the robber, but is not certain.

City in Ashes.

Lamour, N. D., is in ashes. A great fire broke out on Front street, and, fanned by a strong wind, laid waste the entire business center of the town. Four blocks of stores burned, including the county Court House and the records. The Leland Hotel and a drug store are the only buildings left standing. The loss is $200,000, only partially covered by insurance.

Tragic Death.

The village of Gahanna, Ohio, was the scene of an extraordinarily tragic death. Frank Ross visited Gahanna, and imbibed quite freely of intoxicants. He started home, accompanied by John Hines. The horse ran away and jerked Ross over the dashboard, the lines to which he clung becoming entangled around his neck. The animal dashed away in the darkness, dragging Ross at frightful speed. It was not until 6 o'clock next morning that the horse or its master ceased their wild flight. At that hour the animal dashed up to the gates of Hine's residence with the corpse of Ross, mutilated almost beyong recognition. His neck was broken, his skull fractured, his face crushed in, and his chest mashed almost flat by the animal's hoofs.

Lashed at a Stake.

Connellsville (Pa.) special: A strange showing of the transplanted customs of the Slav element in this region was made near Leith recently. The victim was a young woman who had violated the moral code that is supposed to govern these people. A party of Slavs took her from her friends, stripped her of clothing, pinioned her hands and feet, lashed her to a stake and whipped her savagely over an hour. She was reviled, tormented and spat upon by anybody who cared to. She was left at the stake and remained there six hours, as the case is stated to the local authorities, before anybody dared to release her. A young man offered to release some of the cords, and was beaten off by the mob. When the girl was taken down she could scarcely move.

Russian Newspapers Are Warlike.

The Russian newspapers are unanimous in saying that whatever the result of the war between China and Japan, Russia will not tolerate any diminuition of Corean independence. Russia, it is declared, will not permit any interference upon the part of Great Britain or any other power, if such interference endangers Russian interests. The newspapers urge the Government to adopt military and naval measures in the Pacific and upon the Russian-Corean frontier, calculated to uphold the interests of Russia should she be called upon to defend them.

A Woman Killed.

Miss Tillie Sabern made a balloon ascension from Ironwood park, Anderson, Ind. When she cut loose with the parachute it failed to open until within a hundred feet of the earth and the sudden jerk when it spread broke her hold and she fell to the ground and was dead when picked up. Her neck was broken, the spine badly crushed and every limb broken. The girl was but 17 years old. Her home was at Richmond, Ind. It was her first trip and her death was witnessed by a brother and cousin.

Asked Protection.

Washington special: Acting under instructions from the Executive Committee of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Southern Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. J. W. Bachman, its representative here, has called on Secretary Gresham and the Japanese Charge to ask that measures be taken to protect the missionaries of that Church in the East. Secretary Gresham told Mr. Buchman that he did not think there was any immediate danger to the missionaries, but that they would be protected.

The Boiler Exploded.

By the explosion of a sawmill boiler, ten miles west of Milan, Mo., John West, the engineer, was killed and three others were probably fatally injured. West's head was blown to atoms and one leg and one arm blown off. Parts of his body have been picked up 250 feet from the scene of the explosion. Two men named Scott, and another, whose name is West, were so badly scalded that they cannot possibly recover. Low water in the boiler caused the explosion.

His Mysterious Fall.

County Commissioner McMillen was found lying at the bottom of the twenty-foot wall surrounding the Courthouse at Youngstown, Ohio, suffering from a fractured thigh, upper jawbone broken, and base of the brain fractured. There is a mystery surrounding the case which McMillen has so far refused to reveal, and nothing is positively known as to the cause of the accident. His recovery is very doubtful.

Judge Holt Dead.

Judge Joseph Holt, who was Judge Advocate General of the army and at one time acted as Secretary of war, died at his residence in Washington. His death was due indirectly to a fall sustained a few days ago, but to which he paid little attention.

Spring Wheat.

Chicago special: It is reported on 'change that one of the best known crop experts, John Inglis, who has been through the Northwest for clients, estimates that the spring wheat yield will be larger than last year's as a whole.

Crushed His Head.

While working in a well at Shelbyville, Ind., the mud pail slipped and fell a distance of about thirty feet, striking Joseph Lewis on the head. He cannot recover.

Burned in His Cell.

Bill Tequency, an Indian, while lodged in jail at Bosvln, Mich., set fire to his cell and was burned to a crisp.

Old Man Killed.

Sebastine Engbert, aged 70, was run down by N. Y., P. & O. cars at Dayton, Ohio, and killed.

ACRES ARE IN ASHES.

TWO DESTRUCTIVE CONFLAGRATIONS IN CHICAGO.

Greatest Blaze Since the Memorable Fire of 1871—Flames Sweep Over 300 Acres—Three Men Killed and Eight Injured—Loss Over $1,500,000.

Work of Fire-Bugs.

To many thousands of persons in the suburbs it appeared Wednesday night as though all of Chicago was burning up. The flames, reflected on the clouds, were seen more than fifty miles away, and recalled to many the terrible fire of 1871. The conflagration, which proved to be the most destructive known in the city in over twenty years, started in the lumber yards of the S. K. Martin Company at Blue Island avenue and South Lincoln street, and, before it could be gotten under control, swept over a district four blocks wide and nearly a mile in length. About ten million feet of lumber and the plants of a dozen manufacturing establishments were destroyed. The estimated loss is over

LOOKING SOUTHWARD ON WOOD STREET.

$1,500,000. Three men were killed and eight others injured during the progress of the fire. Chief Swenie was obliged to call out fifty engines and both fire-boats, the largest force ever employed at a fire in any city in the world. The wind, which at times was almost a hurricane, scattered the blazing embers in all directions and added greatly to the difficulty of fighting the flames. It was only by the greatest efforts that the flames were prevented from crossing the river and extending into the residence district.

According to a Chicago dispatch the 300 acres lying between Hoyne avenue on the west, Ashland avenue on the east, Blue Island avenue on the north and the Chicago River on the south are a desolation, a desert of ashes and blackened embers. Wednesday this space resounded with the hum of industry. Whirring machinery filled the air with its noises, some 3,000 men were at work, vast piles of lumber covered the ground and at the docks lay many laden vessels. Now a few smoldering heaps of charcoal are all that remain of the millions of feet of lumber. Broken and twisted cogwheels and shafting inclosed by crumbled brick walls mark the sites of the big mills and manufactories, and the ships are gone. Of the long trains of railroad cars that stood on the tracks in this great area, only the wheels and axles remain. Everything combustible perished in the flames that swept with a besom of destruction this busy spot.

Seldom has property been so completely annihilated. Acres of the burnt district are entirely bare, except for the deep carpet of hot ashes that covers them. The largest lumber piles were reduced to small hummocks of blazing charcoal, on which the worn-out firemen threw streams of water all day Thursday. In one of the canals lay the fireboat Geyser, almost a wreck. Every pane of glass in her upper works was broken and the wood at her sides was scorched and blacked by the flames that beat over the vessel with such fury and robbed brave Lieutenant John McGinn of his life.

More Fiery Rain.

On Thursday night at about the same hour and for the second time within twenty-four hours the Blue Island avenue lumber district was swept by a maelstrom of fire, and but for the favorable direction of the wind the loss would have been even greater than that of the previous night.

Engines were responding to an alarm of fire on West Van Buren street shortly after 8 o'clock when a watchman for the McBean Cedar Post Company at Ashland avenue and the west branch of the river saw flames shooting up between two piles of lumber in the yards of the John Spry Lumber Company. Second and third alarms had already been sent in for the West Side fire, and when the box at the Ashland avenue bridge was pulled by McBean's watchman it created consternation at fire alarm headquarters.

Ten minutes later a second call for engines came from the lumber district, and this was soon followed by a third call.

Special calls were now being turned in by Chief Swenie for the fire in Van Buren street, as the blaze threatened to sweep a large portion of the West Side. Special calls were coming in to headquarters from the lumber district and the West Side fires at the same time. In less than an hour from the time of the discovery of the fire in the lumber-yard thirty engine companies and five hook and ladder crews were on the ground. The fire boats Geyser and Yosemite, which had done such valiant service at the previous night's fire, were also there. The wind was blowing from the north, and it was in a great measure due to this fortunate circumstance that the entire lumber district along Twenty-second street was not laid in ashes. Had the wind shifted to the west or east, no fire department in the world could have stopped the flames that wound through the millions of feet of dry lumber.

The John Spry Lumber Company, which fortunately escaped the fury of the flames Wednesday night, will lose $100,000 by Thursday night's blaze. The insurance is nearly double the amount of the loss. The burned district is about 600 feet fronting Ashland avenue and 200 feet in width. Between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 feet of lumber was destroyed. This was about one-third of the lumber contained in the yards.

NO SENATOR SPECULATED.

Sugar Investigation Committee Makes Its Report to the Senate.

Senator Gray, chairman of the sugar investigating committee, presented the report of the committee to the Senate, and asked that the committee be discharged. The report, which has the approval of the full committee, recites the causes which led up to the investigation and quotes the article from the Philadelphia Press on which the charges against Senators were based. It also recites the facts, which have been published already, as to the refusal of the correspondent Edwards to answer questions put by the committee. Secretary Carlisle is exonerated, and the parts of the article reflecting on him are declared to be without foundation. The conduct of Mr. Edwards, says the report, in publishing specific charges against public men without having personal knowledge of the facts, calls for the serious reprobation of the Senate. The committee also says:

There has been no testimony presented before your committee, and your committee has been unable to discover any, tending to show that the sugar schedule was made up as it then stood in the proposed amendment to the tariff bill in consideration of large or any sums of money paid for campaign purposes of the Democratic party. No witness has testified before your committee that such was the fact, and all the Democratic members of the finance committee and all the Senators whose names have been mentioned in the public press as especially interested in protecting the sugar-refining industries, or in whose States sugar refineries existed, have under oath denied that such was the truth, or that they had any knowledge or information as to any sums of money, large or otherwise, having been paid for campaign purposes of the Democratic party by the sugar trust, by those connected with it, or by anybody, as a consideration for favorable treatment of its interests by said party.

The committee also reports the substance of the testimony of the sugar refiners as saying that the campaign contributions were made only to the local committees and not for the purpose of influencing national campaigns, or for the purpose of securing and defeating national legislation.

The committee also unites in saying that no evidence has been adduced tending to show improper conduct on the part of those engaged in the framing of the sugar schedule in the tariff bill. "Though perhaps outside the scope of the duty imposed upon your committee," they say, "they take occasion to strongly deprecate the importunity and pressure to which Congress and its members are subjected by the representatives of great industrial combinations, whose enormous wealth tends to suggest undue influence and to create in the public mind a demoralizing belief in the existence of corrupt politics."

The committee reports in the negative upon the question, whether any Senator has been speculating in sugar stocks during the consideration of the tariff bill. As to the latter branch of the inquiry, which brought out a photographic copy of an order to buy sugar stocks, dated March 2 and purporting to be signed by Senator Camden, and says that Battershall, whose testimony was expected to bear upon the inference from the photographic copy, is a man of doubtful character. Senator Smith is also exonerated from blame. Summing up, the committee say that "no charge or charges have been filed before them alleging that the action of any Senator has been corruptly or improperly influenced in the consideration of the tariff bill and no attempt has been made to influence legislation." All the testimony taken by the committee is submitted as a part of the report.

Messrs. Davis and Lodge, Republicans, submitted a supplemental report devoted entirely to the subject of the influence of the sugar trust, so called, on the making of the sugar schedule as it now stands in the tariff bill. They say that "no evidence has been submitted to the committee which proves that the sugar schedule was made up in order to fulfill obligations to the sugar trust for campaign contributions," but they consider it their duty to go into some detail as to the method employed in making up the sugar schedule, for which the Democratic members of the Finance Committee, it is pointed out, are publicly responsible. They say:

It is also admitted and it is proved by the sworn testimony of every witness called that the present form of the schedule was that desired by the representatives of the refineries or the sugar trust. The sugar trust, by the evidence of its President and Treasurer, has contributed freely to the State and city campaign funds of both parties, and their contributions have been made in years when national elections were held. This is a thoroughly corrupt form of campaign contribution, for such contributions being given to two opposing parties are not for the purpose of promoting certain political principles, but to establish an obligation to the giver on the part of whatever party comes into power. The trust does not give to political parties for the promotion of political principles in which it believes, but for the protection of its own interests, as appears by the same testimony. The fact that it gives to both political parties is sufficient proof of the purpose of its contributions and of their dangerous nature.

Minor State Items.

GOSHEN is laying 4,000 feet of new gas mains.

THERE are now 3,000 Sons of Veterans in Indiana.

WORK has been begun on Elkhart's electric street railway.

RICHMOND hopes to have a military encampment next year.

THERE is a lady in Richmond who has never seen an electric car.

JAMES GERAGHTY'S saloon, Arlington, was blown up by dynamite.

FIRE broke out in a Fort Wayne junk shop, and did $10,000 damages.

GOSHEN Council is still wrestling with the water supply question.

JACOB SINKLE'S barn, near Lagro, was destroyed by lightning. Loss, 2,000.

THIS year's Bartholomew County wheat crop is estimated at about 1,000,000 bushels.

MISS ELIZABETH SPURLIN, Shelbyville, died of lock-jaw, caused by running a needle in her foot.

JOHN SPANGLER, farmer, residing two miles north of Decatur, was gored to death by a vicious bull.

WORK at the block coal mines, near Brazil, is again cut short by the inability of the railroads to supply cars.

A MAN near Goshen dodged a butting ram and collided with a buggy wheel, breaking several ribs.

THE Edwin J. Wood, a small packet, was sunk in the Ohio River, near Evansville. The eighty-five excursionists on board were saved.

DURING a drunken fight over a woman at Fort Wayne, Stephen Bercoll fatally cut Jewell Parrott. The latter was literally hacked to pieces.

LEROY WRIGHT, Muncie, grabbed a wire that crossed a "live" electric wire, and was killed instantly. Two men who tried to pull Wright away were seriously shocked.

THE farmhouse and barn of John Newton on Wild Cat Creek, three miles from Lafayette, were burned. His oats crop was also destroyed. Loss, $4,000; insurance, $2,000.

A LARGE searching party has been organized in Elwood to search for a large amount of gold which tradition says was buried somewhere within the corporate limits of that city many years ago.

A NUMBER of township trustees and school corporation treasures met in Richmond and decided to fight the decision of the Supreme Court regarding the return to the State of surplus funds.

AT Indianapolis, Frank Malone, who had been losing rest because of a pet felon, went to sleep while seated in the window of his room, forty feet above the pavement. He was found lying on the pavement, having fallen out. He will die.

AN unknown man was killed at Longwood, by an east-bound train over the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton. He is about 28 years of age, supposedly a tramp, and was asleep on the track. Nothing was found by which he could be identified.

DR. C. M. BECK of Columbus, while calling on his fiancee, Miss Grace Cohee, shot through the window at a supposed eavesdropper. The bullet's victim was his intended bride, who had gone out to close the shutters. She will die.

ADAM ANDERSON, aged 19, residing in the country five miles northwest of Bedford, while visiting in Guthrie, accidentally shot himself, the ball entering his left side. The wound is not necessarily fatal. He was handling a pistol and it was accidentally discharged.

AT Logansport George Weavet, a veteran, 46 years old, who is totally deaf, stepped off the sidewalk of the Third street bridge in front of a rapidly moving electric car. He was thrown down and frightfully mangled. His skull was fractured and left arm broken. He was taken to his home, but died before reaching it. He leaves a widow and seven children.

THE following patents have been issued for Indiana: Clinton C. Aikman of Dana, gate; George S. Anderson and R. C. Anderson, Jefferson, cylinder for feed cutters; August H. Albershardt, Crawfordsville, holder for umbrellas; Thomas Duncan, Fort Wayne, electric meter; Christopher B. Herman, assignor of one-half to J. W. Bradshaw, railway rail joint; John L. Koch, Lawrenceburg, harness saddle; James D. Wayt, Indianapolis, garbage furnace.

THE farmers of Indiana, for the first time in the history of the State, are feeding their wheat to their hogs and selling their corn. Wheat brings but 43 cents per bushel when delivered at the country stations, and corn sells readily at from 45 to 47 cents. The farmers say that one bushel of wheat contains as much nutriment as two bushels of corn, and as hogs are bringing good prices and corn is higher than wheat, it is economy to feed the latter and sell their corn.

A FIVE-HUNDRED-HORSE-POWER engine in the wire department of the American wire, wire nail, and rod mill was completely wrecked recently. The accident occurred while the machinery was running at full speed, and the two hundred operatives in the room were greatly excited and barely escaped a panic. The engineer had a narrow escape from flying pieces of the engine. The accident is unexplainable, as the machine was comparatively new. This break will shut down the entire factory for two or three weeks, forcing 600 operatives out of employment.

JORDAN OLCOTT, aged 19 years, youngest son of Dr. W. A. Olcott of Patriot, was drowned while bathing. He was a bright medical student, just ready to enter college, and one of the most deservedly popular young men in the county.

THE State Gas Inspector has submitted an annual report, showing that little of the gas belt remains to be developed. Over $300,000,000 has been invested in manufactories. In his judgment the gas supply is diminishing, the field pressure now showing an average of 240 pounds, as against the original pressure of 320 pounds.

AT Knox two new brick blocks have just been completed and a large stone and brick school building is now in process of construction. The Knights of Pythias have a three-story brick temple under way, and it will be finished this fall. The extension of the Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa Railroad from Knox to South Bend is being rapidly pushed forward, and affords employment to a large number of men. The County has an abundance of cheap land which is being bought up by thrifty farmers from Illinois and Ohio, and a steady flow of desirable immigration has set in. The County is now in a fair way to become one of the leading Counties in the State.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

The Senate wore an aspect of peace and serenity Monday, in striking contrast to the excitement of last week. Vice President Stevenson had returned and occupied his accustomed seat. Among the bills introduced in the Senate Monday was one by Mr. Allen to provide for the issue of $50,000,000 in treasury notes to be distributed pro rata among the States "for the relief of the worthy poor." It was referred to the finance committee. The report of the conferees on the agricultural appropriation bill, announcing agreement on all the amendments but the one appropriating $1,000,000 for the extermination of the Russian thistle, was agreed to. The Senate formally insisted on this amendment and sent the bill back to conference. The sundry civil bill was presented and Mr. Cockrell gave notice that the deficiency bill would be reported. The House joint resolution further extending the appropriations until Aug. 14 was passed, as was also a bill authorizing the life-saving service of the Treasury Department to employ crews and man the stations along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts from Aug. 1 in each year until June 1 of the succeeding year, and along the lake coasts from the opening to the close of navigation in each year. Beyond the passage of a few unimportant bills by unanimous consent nothing was accomplished by the House. Mr. Boutelle offered a resolution congratulating and recognizing the Hawaiian Republic, but on a point of order it was referred to a Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The only feature of interest in the proceedings in the Senate Tuesday was a discussion of the site for a new Government printing office. The general deficiency appropriation bill was reported to the Senate and placed on the calendar, as was also the House bill to provide a uniform system of bankruptcy. The report of the conference committee on the Indian appropriation bill was adopted. The session of the House was brief. Much of the time was spent discussing the Senate amendment to the agricultural bill appropriating $1,000,000 for the destruction of the Russian thistle in the Northwestern States. The House instructed the conferees to further insist on its disagreement to this amendment. Representative Boen, of Minnesota, has introduced a bill to abolish national banks. He would make it unlawful to charter a bank or provide additional currency for those already chartered, and directs the secretary to withdraw all deposits of public money from the banks and return them to the treasury.

The Senate on Thursday passed the sundry civil bill. The most important amendments adopted were the increase of the quarantine fund from $624,000 to $1,000,000, and donating 1,000,000 acres of "desert" lands to the States to which the desert land laws apply, as well as to Nebraska, Kansas, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma. In the House the contested election case of Moore vs. Funston was decided in favor of Moore. The conference report on the District of Columbia appropriation bill was agreed to. The House passed a bill authorizing the purchase of the property and the franchise of the Choctaw Coal and Railway Company. A bill was passed to remove the charge of dishonorable dismissal from the record of Cyrus Paine. An hour was spent in the discussion of a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to establish and maintain free public schools for children under 17 years of age at Worthington, on the Pensacola Bay, Fla., but no action was taken.

The last of the appropriations, the deficiency bill, was passed by the Senate Friday evening after it had been under discussion nearly the entire day. The House bill for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works was passed. The House spent a large portion of the day discussing two bills, one for reclassification of the railway mail clerks and one for the classification of clerks in the first and second class postoffices, but neither was acted upon. The conference report on the river and harbor bill was agreed to without division. An evening session was devoted to pension bills.

How Baltimore Got Rid of Tramps.

The tramp nuisance had reached such immense proportions in Baltimore that the hospitable people of that city got tired feeding the vast multitude of knights of the road who annually blew around there at the first sign of snow and lived on the charity of the citizens during the cold months of the year. Last winter the latter resolved to change the order of things and opened up two establishments, to which the people were directed to send the genus tramp. Having arrived there Dusty Rhodes was invited to take a bath, with soap, and was then directed to a wood or stone pile. After exercising his muscle for a while he was furnished food and lodging. The result was the tramp as a species soon emigrated from Baltimore.

The Condor's Strength and Voracity

The enormous strength of the condor is only equaled by his voracity and boldness. This immense bird often pounces upon small animals, but, from the shape and bluntness of his claws, he is unable to carry anything very heavy, so he contents himself with fixing it against the ground with one of its claws, while with the other and his powerful beak he rends it to pieces. Gorged with food, the bird then becomes incapable of flight and may be approached, but any attempt at capture is furiously resisted.

Now the Lobster Is Going.

The lobster is becoming scarcer and scarcer every year. The delicious crustacean, which was found in countless numbers along the New England coast, and the coasts of Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Labrador, will before many years be missing from our table, and the wonder is what will people eat in place of it. The fisherman and the canning factory have practically ruined the supply, which, it was thought, was inexhaustible.

IN sewing upon delicate work, sometimes, spite of the best of care, a pricked finger will leave behind it a blood stain. This may be removed by an application of damp starch. Put a little ordinary raw starch in a cup and pour on it enough cold water to make it into paste. With a knife spread the paste upon the stain. When dry shake off, and if a trace of the discoloration still remains make another application of the starch paste.

UNITED AT LAST

MISS M E BRADDON

CHAPTER XX—Continued.

"My pet," said Lord Clanyarde, in a pleading tone, "I have brought a new doctor to see you, a gentleman who may be able to understa d your case even better than our friend Webb."

"No one ever knew her constitution as well as I do," commented Dr. Webb, sotto voce.

Constance raised her heavy eyelids and looked at her fa her with a languid wonder as if the figures standing by her couch were far away, and she saw them faintly in the distance, without knowing what they were.

The new doctor did not go through the usual formula of pulse and tongue, nor did he ask the old-established questions, but he seated himself quietly by Constance Sinclair's sofa and began to talk to her in a low voice, while Dr. Webb and Lord Clanyarde withdrew to the other end of the room, where Gilbert was standing by a table, absently turning over the leaves of a book.

"You have had a great sorrow, my dear lady," said the German doctor, in that low and confidential tone which sometimes finds its way to the clouded brain when louder and clearer accents convey no meaning. "You have had a great sorrow, and have given way to grief as if there were no comfort either in earth or in heaven."

Constance listened with lowered eyelids, but a look of attention came into her face presently, which the doctor perceived.

"Dear lady, there is always comfort in heaven; there is sometimes consolation on earth. Why can you not hope for some sudden, unlooked-for happiness, some great joy such as God has sometimes given to mourners like you? Your child was drowned, you think. What if you were deceived when you believed in her death? What if she was saved from the river? I do not say that it is so, but you can not be certain. Who can know for a certainty that the little one was really drowned?"

The eyes were wide open now, staring at him wildly.

"What's the old fellow about so long?" asked Gilbert, impatiently.

"He is talking to her about her child," replied Lord Clanyarde. "He wants to make her cry if he can. He's a great psychologist."

"Does that mean a great humbug?" asked Gilbert. "It sounds like it."

"Hope and comfort are coming to you, dear Mrs. Sinclair," said the German doctor; "be sure of that."

Again Constance looked at him curiously; but at the sight of the smoke-colored spectacles and the sallow old face, half covered with white hair, turned away her eyes with a sigh. If she could have seen eyes that looked honestly into hers, it might have given force to that promise of comfort, but this blind oracle was too mysterious. She gave a long sigh and kept silent.

The Doctor looked at the open piano on the other si e of the fireplace, and remained in thoughtful silence for a few moments.

"Does your mist ess sing sometimes?" he asked Martha Briggs, who sat on guard by the sofa.

"No, sir, not since she's been so ill, but she plays sometimes, by snatches, beautiful. It would go to your heart to hear her."

"Will you sing to me," asked the Doctor, "if you are strong enough to go to the piano? Please, try to sing."

Constance looked at him with the same puzzled gaze, and then tried to rise. Martha supported her on one side, the Doctor on the other, as she feebly t ttered to the piano.

"I'll sing if you like," she said, in a careless tone that told her how far the mind was from conscious ness of the present. "Papa likes to hear me sing."

She seated herself at the piano, and her finger s wandered slowly over the keys, and wandered on in a dreamy prelude that had little meaning. The German doctor listened patiently for a few minutes to this tangle of arpeggios, and then, bending over the piano, played the few notes of a familiar symphony.

Constance gave a faint cry of surprise, and struck a chord, the chord that closed the symphony, and began "Strangers Yet," in apathetic voice that had a strange hysterical power in curious contrast with the feebleness of the singer.

She sang on till she came to the words "child and parent." These touched a sensitive chord, and she rose suddenly from the piano and burst into tears.

"That may do her good," said Dr. Webb, approvingly.

"My friend is no fool," replied Lord Clanyarde.

"Take your mistress to her room," said Gilbert to Martha, with an angry look. "This is only playing upon her nerves. I wonder you can allow such folly, Lord Clanyarde!"

"Your own doctors have agreed that some shock was necessary, something to awaken her from apathy. Poor pet; those tears are a relief," answered the father.

He went to his daug hter and assisted in arranging the pillows as she lay down on the sofa. Martha calmly ignored her master's order.

The German doctor bent over Mrs. Sinclair for a moment, and whispered the one word, "Hope," and then retired with the three other gentlemen.

"Would you like to prescribe anything?" asked Dr. Webb, taking the stranger into a little room off the hall.

"No; it is a case in which drugs are useless. Hope is the only remedy for Mrs. Sinclair's disease. She must be beguiled with hope, even if it is delusive."

"What?" cried Dr. Webb, "would you trifle with her feelings, play upon the weakness of her mind, and let her awaken by and by to find herself deluded?"

"I would do anything to snatch her from the jaws of death," answered the German doctor, unhesitatingly. "If hope is not held out to her, she will die. You see her fading day by day. Do you think there is any charm in your medi ines that will bring her back to life?"

"I fear not, sir," answered Dr. Webb despondently.

"Then you or those who love her must find some more potent influence. She is heart-broken for the loss of her child. She must be taught to think that her child is still living."

"But when her mind grows stronger it would be a still heavier blow to discover that she had been deceived."

"She would be better able to bear the blow when health and strength had returned, and she might have formed an attachment in the meantime which would console her in the hour of disillusion."

"I don't understand," faltered Dr. Webb.

"I'll make myself clearer. A child must be brought to Mrs. Sinclair, a little girl of about the age of her own baby, and she must be persuaded to believe, now while her brain is clouded, that her own child is given back to her."

"A cruel deception," cried Dr. Webb.

"No; only a desperate remedy. Which are her friends to do—deceive her, or let her die? In her present condition of mind she will ask no questions; she will not speculate upon probabilities. She will take the child to her breast as a gift from heaven. A mind distraught is always ready to believe in the marvelous, to imagine itself the object of supernatural intervention."

Dr. Webb looked thoughtfully and half convinced. This German physician, who spoke good English, seemed to have studied his subject deeply. Dr. Webb was no psychologist, but he had seen in the mentally afflicted that very love of the marvelous which Dr. Hollendorf spoke about. And what hope had he of saving his patient? Alas! none. It would be a cruel thing to put a spurious child in her arms, to trifle with a mother's sacred feelings; but if life and reason could be saved by this means and no other, surely the fraud would be a pious one.

"Mr. Sinclair would never consent," said Dr. Webb.

"Mr. Sinclair must be made to consent. I have already suggested this step to Lord Clanyarde, and he approves the idea. He must bring his influence to bear upon Mr. Sinclair, who appears an indifferent husband, and not warmly interested in his wife's fate."

"There you wrong him," cried the faithful Webb. "His manner does not do him justice. The poor man has been in a most miserable condition ever since Mrs. Sinclair's illness assumed an alarming aspect. Will you make this suggestion to him—propose our introducing a strange child?"

"I would rather the proposal should come from Lord Clanyarde," answered the strange doctor, looking at his watch. "I must get back to London by the next train. I shall tell Lord Clanyarde my opinion as he drives me to the station. I think I have made my ideas sufficiently clear to you, Dr. Webb?"

"Quite so, quite so," cried the little man, whose mother was an Aberdeen woman. "It is a most extraordinary thing, Dr. Hollendorf, that although I have never had the honor of meeting you before, your voice is very familiar to me."

"My dear sir, do you suppose that Nature can give a distinctive voice to every unit in an overcrowded world? You might hear my voice in the Fee-ees to-morrow. There would be nothing extraordinary in that."

"Of course, of course. An accidental resemblance," assented Dr. Webb.

The German would take no fee; he had come as Lord Clanyarde's friend, and he drove away in Lord Clanyarde's brougham without any further loss of time.

Gilbert Sinclair and his friend devoted the rest of the evening to billiards, with frequent refreshment on Gilbert's part in the way of brandy.

"You talked the other day about finding a purchaser for this confounded old barrack," said Mr. Sinclair. "I hate the place more every day, and it is costing me no end of money for repairs—never saw such a rickety old hole, always some wall tumbling down or drain getting choked up—to say nothing of keeping up a large stable here as well as at Newmarket."

"Why not give up Newmarket?" suggested Mr. Wyatt, with his commonsense air.

"I'm not such a fool. Nemarket gives me some pleasure, and this place gives me none."

"You must keep up a home for Mrs. Sinclair, and a London house would hardly be suitable in her present state."

"I can take her to Hastings or Ventnor, or to my box at Newmarket, if it comes to that."

"Isn't it better for her to be near her father?"

"What does she want with her father, an old twaddler like Clanyarde, without a thought beyond the gossip of his club? Don't humbug, Wyatt. You told me you could put your finger on a purchaser. Was that bosh, or did you mean it?"

"It was not bosh," answered Wyatt; "but I wanted to be quite sure you were in earnest before I p shed my proposal any further. You might consider it an impertinence for me to think of such a thing."

"What are you driving at?"

"Will you sell Davenant to me?"

Gilbert dropped his billiard cue and stood staring at his friend in blank amazement. Here was a new state of things, indeed. The professional man treading on the heels of the millionaire.

"You!" he exclaimed, with contemptuous surprise. "I did not think fifteen per cent. and renewals could be made so profitable."

"I'm too thick-skinned to resent the insinuation," said James Wyatt, cushioning his opponent's ball. "I can afford to buy Davenant for the price you gave for it. I've got just enough money disengaged. I sold out of Palermos the other day when they were up, to provide the purchase money. I brought down a deed of transfer, and if you are in earnest we can settle the business to-morrow morning."

"You're buying the place as a speculation," said Gilbert, suspiciously.

"Not exactly. But what would it matter to you if I were? You want to get rid of the place. I am ready to take it off your hands."

"You have heard of a bid from somebody else."

"No, I have not."

"Well, you re a curious fellow. Going to get married, I suppose, and turn country squire."

"Never mind my plans. Do you mean to sell?"

"Yes."

"Then I'm ready to buy."

The deed was executed next morning. Gilbert stipulated that he was not to surrender the house till the midsummer quarter, and that James Wyatt was to take the furniture at a valuation.

Mr. Sinclair was much pleased with the idea of getting back five-and-thirty thousand pounds of ready money for a place the purchase of which had been a whim, and of the occupation whereof he was heartily tired. Those miners of the north were still holding out, and money had not been flowing into his coffers nearly so fast as it had been flowing out during the last half year. He had made unlucky bargains in horseflesh—squandered his money on second-rate stock, and in winning small races that were not worth his people's traveling expenses. In a word, he had done all those foolish things which an idle man who thinks himself extremely clever, and yet lends an ear to every new adviser, is apt to do.

"Five-and-thirty, thou' will put me into smooth water," he said, as he signed the contract with a flourish.

The one suspicion as to Mr. Wyatt's intentions, which would have prevented Gilbert Sinclair agreeing to the bargain, had never presented itself to his mind.

James Wyatt went back to London that afternoon, promising to meet his client next day at the Argyle street branch of the Union Bank, and hand over the purchase money. At eight o'clock that evening he presented himself at Sir Cyprian Davenant's chambers. He found his friend sitting alone among his books, smoking an Indian hookah.

"Wyatt, old fellow, this is a surprise," said Cyprian, as they shook hands. "Have you dined?"

"Thanks, yes; I took a chop at the Garrick. I've just come from Davenant."

"Indeed! How is Mrs. Sinclair?"

"Pretty much the same, poor soul. How long is it since you heard of her?"

"I saw Lord Clanyarde at his club about a week ago."

"Well, there's been no change lately. Something wrong with the mind, you see, and a gradual ebbing away of strength. She's not long for this world, I'm afraid; but she was too good for it. Angels are better off in heaven than they are with us. We don't appreciate them."

"No more than swine appreciate pearls," said Sir Cyprian.

"What would you give to get Davenant back?" asked Mr. Wyatt, without preface.

"What would I give? Anything—half my fortune."

"What is your fortune worth?"

"About a hundred and fifty thousand."

"Well, then, I sha'n't want so much as half of it, though your offer is tempting. Davenant is mine."

"Yours!"

"Yes, at the price you got for it, with another five thousand as a sporting bid for the furniture and improvements. Give me five-and-twenty per cent. on my purchase and Davenant is yours."

"Willingly. But how about Mrs. Sinclair? Will it not grieve her to lose the place?"

"Whether or no, the place is sold. I tell you, Sir Cyprian, I stand before you the owner of Davenant and all its appurtenances. I did not buy it for myself, but on the speculation that, as I bought it cheap, you would be glad to give me a profit on my purchase. I knew Sinclair well enough to be very sure that he would let the roof rot over his head before he would consent to sell the place to you."

"You have done a friendly thing, Wyatt, and I thank you. I should hesitate, perhaps, in agreeing to such a bargain were any other man than Mr. Sinclair in question, but I do not feel myself bound to stand upon punctilio with him.

"Punctilio, man! There's no punctilio to stand upon. Sinclair sold the the estate to me, unconditionally, and I have an indisputable right to sell it to you."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

LO LOVES REVENGE.

An Eye for an Eye and a Tooth for a Tooth Is His Law.

You may educate an Indian as much as you please, carry him through all the higher branches, and fairly steep him in moral philosophy, but you can't eliminate the spirit of revenge from his make-up, says one who has lived among them. A great many of them have been taken in hand and fairly well educated, but the eye for an eye and tooth for a tooth law is strong among them.

An incident of this characteristic occurred recently in Oregon. About twenty-five years ago a Klamath Indian was foully murdered by three others, who departed for another portion of the Northwest. The murdered man left an infant child, a boy about a year old, and a squaw. When this boy was about 11 years of age his mother died and he was taken charge of by some white persons, who became interested in his brightness and sent him to school. He was an apt scholar and learned rapidly and he did so well in the primary branches that his education was continued. At 19 his studies ceased and he was given employment as a tally keeper at one of the Columbia River fisheries. It was remembered, after the occurrences that I am about to relate took place, that the young Indian was continually making inquiries of one sort or another of every visiting Indian who happened to reach the neighborhood. At last one day he threw up his position and disappeared. Within the next two weeks three old Siwash Indians were found killed in three different sections of the Puget Sound country. It turned out that they were the murderers of this young Indian's father, and that from his infancy to the time she died his mother had devoted herself to instilling into his mind the idea that it was his holy duty to avenge his father's death.

Paris' City of the Dead.

Some forty or fifty years ago the catacombs of Paris were the objects of daily visits, and the sight was one which every visitor to Paris felt called upon to see. Accidents, however, frequently took place, and at present no one enters the catacombs except at certain periods of the year, when the engineers have to make a formal report as to their condition. The ventilation is effected by means of numerous holes communicating with the upper air. The names of visitors are called over before they go down and again when they come up. The general aspect of the place is not so solemn as might be imagined. It suggests rather a vast wine cellar, in which the cases inclose bones instead of bottles. The relics of 4,000,000 persons now repose there. This subterranean city contains streets and passages like the city above.

Footing the Bills of the Fair.

The American custom of paying for your friends in cafes or restaurants prevails in Spain, though nowhere else on the continent, says a traveler. Formerly gentlemen who accompanied ladies on their shopping expeditions were in the habit of paying for everything their fair friends bought, so that gallantry became a too expensive luxury, and the custom wisely died out. It used to be said in Andalusia, where women were more extravagant than in the north, that a long purse was needed for a short walk with a lady. The custom is obsolete now, and she who allows you to make pur hases for her is supposed to be devoid of high breeding.

THE BEEF INDUSTRY.

Some Interesting Figures Upon Its Growth and Profits.

The growth of beef packing operations in the United States has been largely increased in late years, chiefly incident to the business of pork packing. Exact satistics have not been made available with reference to this industry. The introduction of refrigerator cars for the safe transportation of fresh product has effected great changes in the beef trade of the larger towns and cities throughout the country, the local killing of animals giving way in a great measure to the more economical methods reflected by the dressed meat operations of large concerns.

Cattle killing for commercial supplies of beef is chiefly prosecuted at Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis and Omaha, with considerable in the aggregate at other places. The total number of cattle killed in the four centers in 1880, was about 750,000; in 1885, it had advanced to 1,450,000; sebsequent years showed an important increase, reaching a total of 3,275,000, in 1890; the following year no gain was shown, but there was a fair increase in 1892, and 1893, reaching a total in excess of 4,100,000 in the latter year. These figures, while they embrace animals slaughtered for local requirements, are instructive as illustrating the important extention of beef production for commercial distribution in these centers.

The exportation of beef has greatly enlarged in late years, although the total for 1893 was decidedly reduced in comparison with several years previously. In 1890 the total reached 398,000,000 pounds, the maximum recorded; for ten years ending with 1892, the annual average was 261,000,000 pounds; in 1893 it was 290,000,000 pounds, having a value of nearly $35,000,000; the annual average exports for ten years ending with 1892 was $21,000,000.

Here at Cincinnati there have been no positive efforts heretofore for competitive operations in the beef trade, but in the past year a large plant has been completed which has inaugurated an important industry here, and it is to be hoped that success will attend the new undertaking. Such enterprises tend to elevation of this center as a market for live stock, and indirectly to the general development of commercial growth. — Cincinnati Price Current.

DAGGER THAT KILLED CARNOT.

It Has a Sharp Triangular Blade About Six Inches Long.

The accompanying cut is an authentic representation of the dagger used by the assassin Cesario in taking the life of President Carnot.

Cesario remained in Cette, where he had been working in a bakery for several months, until June 23, when he left for Lyons, the scene of the crime. The dagger was purchased in Cette, June 22, two days before the murder, from a cutler in the Rue Gambetta, named Guillaume. The triangular blade is very sharp and measures 16 centimeters, about 6¼ inches, from the point to the guard. Its greatest thickness is 2½ centimeters, about an inch. It bears the usual Spanish inscriptions, on one side "Toledo" and on the other "Recuerdo."

Careless Fruit Picking.

The crop of cherries, and the crop of apples and pears of next year, must be started this year in the fruit buds. "Very few people," says C. E. Todd in the Country Gentleman, "know this important fact. I frequently see the ground beneath and around cherry trees covered with fruit-spurs, and the leaves attached to them. Fruit-pluckers haul off, and throw to the ground all the spurs that are loaded with fruit, and then separate the fruit, and throw away the spurs and buds that would be loaded with fruit next year. By hauling off all the twigs and spurs from the bodies of the branches, the limbs are induced to grow long and slender, and produce all the fruit at the extremities of the long branches. We often see long and naked limbs, sixteen or twenty feet, without a leaf, twig or branchlet. Such trees have been pruned in a very unscientific and damaging manner. Look at our cherry trees. I can climb around in the tops and pluck almost every cluster of ripe fruit. Examine my neighbor's trees. There are several bushels of choice fruit on them which they cannot gather. Why? Simply because the fruit-spurs and twigs have been pulled off every year with the fruit, and that injudicious annual pruning has induced the trees to shoot upward, and to send out such long and slender limbs, bearing very little fruit, except so high and out of reach that the crop cannot be gathered. If those trees had been managed judiciously, and the long branches had not been hauled in with hooks and mutilated, and if all the fruit-spurs had not been hauled off from year to year, and every branchlet broken off when it was loaded with ripe fruit, a person would be able to climb around on the branches and gather most of the fruit.

His Misery.

He came slowly and uncertain of step into the office of his friend the physician.

"Hello," greeted the Doctor cheerfully. "you look like a wreck; what's the matter?"

"Can't you let me have something to relieve my misery?" he groaned, as he sank into the chair.

"What's the matter? What do you want?" inquired the Doctor solicitously, reaching for his pulse.

"Oh," he groaned "I'm dead broke, and I want $10," the same which he did not get.

Why They Are Shifted.

The shifting about of the admirals of the United States navy necessitated by the approaching retirement of several now commanding in foreign water is a thing of frequent occurrence, because no rear admiral ever long enjoys that rank on the active list. Of last year's six rear admirals only three remain on the active list. Few of the rear admirals can remain more than three or four years on the active list. Admirals Drum, Greer, Walker and Stanton, who are among the latest promotions, have been in the service from forty-four to forty-seven years.

CAUTION.—If any dealer offers you W. L. Douglas shoes at a reduced price, or says he has them without the name stamped on the bottom, put him down as a fraud.

W. L. DOUGLAS Shoes are stylish, easy fitting, and give better satisfaction at the prices advertised than any other make. Try one pair and be convinced. The stamping of W. L. Douglas' name and price on the bottom, which guarantees their value, saves thousands of dollars annually to those who wear them. Dealers who push the sale of W. L. Douglas Shoes gain customers, which helps to increase the sales on their full line of goods. They can afford to sell at a less profit, and we believe you can save money by buying all your footwear of the dealer advertised below. Catalogue free upon application. W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein Jessie Dancer is plaintiff and John Gall, and Caroline Gall his wife, Martin V. B. Cole, Louella Martine, George Martine, Bertha Knight, Chas. Knight, Elizabeth St Clair, George St. Clair, John Melville Wescott, and Lillie Wescott are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred seventy-three dollars and ten cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder on Saturday, August 25th, 1894,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the court house, of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The south half (½) of the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section eight (8) in township thirty-three (33) north of range thirteen (13) east; containing twenty (20) acres, be the same more or less, situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and cost, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

GEO. C. RALSTON, Sheriff of DeKalb County, Auburn, Indiana, August 1st, A. D. 1894.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....AUGUST 9, 1894.

Caucus Notice.

I would advise that all township caucuses be held during the last week of August, on such day of that week and at such hour as the township chairman may designate. These nominations of township officers are important and the caucuses should be attended by every democratic voter.

JOHN F. SHUMAN,
Co. Chairman.

PULLMAN shops started up again last Thursday, with about 300 men.

ATTEMPT made last week to rob the grave of Andrew Jackson, near Nashville.

RAILROAD shops of the Eastern Illinois are being removed from Brazil, Ind., to Momence, Ill.

SAID that plenty of counterfeit money has got into circulation. That ought to suit the populists.

SAM HONG, a Chinese laundry man at Anderson, has left for China to join the army and help to whip Japan.

WISCONSIN democrats have again nominated Gov. Peck, author of "Peck's Bad Boy," for governor. He is now serving his second term.

COLORED camp meeting at Muncie broke up last week, because the younger darkies insisted on dancing jigs when lively tunes were sung.

AFTER defeating the Chinese in two naval battles, the Japanese were themselves defeated in a land battle by the Chinese about a week ago.

ANDERSON nail mill burst its cylinder last week and will have to shut down for a month, throwing out 700 men till it can be repaired. Blame it on Cleveland.

RICHMOND, Ind., citizens thought they could find lots of gold, and went to digging for it. Found more water than they could control, and after sinking $1,000, gave it up.

JOKE on Debs. It is claimed that when he went back to Terre Haute, he went in a Pullman sleeper. Some of his A. R. U. members ought to have held up that train about two days, and let him see how his own medicine tastes.

COYOTES in Oklahomo, not having any water to drink since the hot weather dried up the streams, are eating up the watermelons to quench their thirst. It is claimed the crop will be ruined in some counties. After all, the life of a coyote is not such an unhappy one, as it might be.

"COUNT RYBYKOWSKI" and his army of Polish Commonwealers got mad last week because the citizens of Fremont Ohio, would not feed them, and set fire to the buildings on the fair ground where they were being sheltered. We suppose if the authorities try to punish them, they will object and join the populists.

SENATOR HILL of New York, has prepared a bill to exclude foreign anarchists from coming to live in the United States. This is a sensible move, but it will always be found difficult to prevent them or any other class from coming. There will always be found means to evade the laws, unless a better plan is invented than that adopted to keep out the Chinese.

THE tendency of the populists is against law and order. Their sympathies are going out plainly in favor of tramps and Coxeyites, rather than for the better elements of society. They uphold the late strike riots and denounce the authorities that put the riots down. No party can ask or expect the support of respectable hoters if it cannot conceal this tendency to anarchism.

IT IS said it will take over 300 cars to carry away the rubbish of the cars, etc., burned in the Panhandle yards at Chicago in the strike. Ten long trains of this have gone out already. And yet we have men, claiming to be good citizens, who are trying to have Debs considered a good man and much abused gentleman. Half the men in our penitentiaries are there for crimes smaller than Debs is guilty of.

BASE ball cranks at Chicago got hurt Sunday. They were watching a game when it was discovered that the grand stand was on fire. A cigarette fiend had done the mischief by his carelessness. The stand was full of people, who went wild, and many jumped over and through the barbed wire fence that separated the crowd from the ball players. Several were cut and torn by the wire. What business had they to have a ball game on Sunday?

A REGULAR army officer at Omaha, ordered the soldiers to practice at target shooting on Sunday. One man refused and was punished for disobedience. Now President Cleveland orders the officer who gave the command to be court-martialed for disobeying an order against such desecration of the Sabbath which was issued by President Lincoln in 1862. It is also against the state laws of Nebraska. Army officers should be taught that Sunday should be observed. They have plenty of time for all their work on week days.

IT IS quite interesting to hear republicans talk about the decline in the price of wheat, etc., since the democrats came into power. Let us see. Wheat was $1 25 to $1.50 and over when republicans came into power. After thirty-two years of continuous republican rule, wheat had fallen in 1892 to 60 cents. Now after two years of democratic administration, it is about 52 cents. But though we have a democratic administration, every law on our statute books that could affect the price of any commodity is a republican law, passed by republican congresses and signed by republican presidents. Can they deny this?

SENATOR VOORHEES is improving but not yet able to be at work.

TWICE as many cheap John foreigners left the United States in July as came in. Good.

CONGRESS has not agreed on a tariff bill as yet, but there is a prospect that they will eventually agree.

TENNESSEE state election last Wednesday showed a democratic majority over the combined republican and populist vote greater than in 1892.

THE STRIKE is over. The A. R. U. men have given up the fight except on the Santa Fe road and the Eastern Illinois. Strikers are now out of work.

ALABAMA election Monday went over 20,000 democratic, although the populists and republicans had united on the same ticket. Populists made some gains in the country, but the democrats had gained more in the cities. It is a very marked victory.

KESSLER SIDING, west of Kendallville had another attempt to rob a train Tuesday night. It was the same train and same express messengers that were robbed there a year ago. Got nothing this time, as the train would not stop though several shots were fired.

HENRY COLERICK, the jumping jack o the Ft. Wayne bar and Ft. Wayne democracy, says that as between Cleveland and silver, he will follow silver. This is no new thing for Henry. Everybody knows which is the most powerful motive with him. But to use his own stereotyped and ever-on-tap expression, whatever he may chance to say or not to say on politics is "irrelevant, incompetent and has no bearing on the case" Henry has evidently changed drinks lately. If so, he will find the populist drink about the "bitinest" in the market.

POPULISTS curse Cleveland for helping to stop the riots in Chicago. The mob nestroyed about three millions of property and caused the loss of many more by stopping business of all kinds. These were high handed crimes. Do the populists wish to be understood as favoring crime? Are they opposed to having criminals punished? Are they opposed to law and order? If a man burns property, kills people and terrorizes the neighborhood, are we to understand that the populist party upholds him, and that the only complaint they have to make is against those who try to punish criminals? From their talk and the talk of their papers, no other conclusion can be reached.

STATE Geologist had said in his last report, that Indiana gas is showing a reduced pressure, and reduced yield. Gorby was probably in his too frequent condition. Now come all the chief towns in our gas belt and say his report is a lie. Elwood makes a full showing. It is located in the heart of the gas belt, and the condition of the gas there may be taken as an index by which to judge of its condition elsewhere. There are twenty five gas wells in Elwood and among this number there is not a single dry one. The first wells drilled early in 1887 are still in use and show a rock pressure of 350 pounds, as high as they did when discovered. During all of this time three wells have supplied Elwood with gas and oil, doing so to-day, the output not having diminished a single pound. At times the pressure shows an increase of from five to ten pounds. Of the twenty five wells here, not one among them shows a pressure under 320 pounds This same state of affairs exists all over Madison county, and in parts of Grant, Howard and Delaware counties, which are the heart of the gas belt. The output shows no signs of diminishing.

THE American Railway Union in its address to the country is guilty of a plain falsehood when it says, "The American Railway Union has not interfered with interstate commerce and the carrying of the mails." The truth, as everyone knows, is, that the A. R. U. and its leader, Debs, ordered their members—all railway employes—to stop work. And their stopping work, of course, stopped the running of trains. Switchmen would not turn the switches in the yards at Chicago and other points where hundreds of tracks cross and recross in such a confusing way that no one but the switchmen who are employed in them know how to let a train through. The A. R. U. switchmen alone could stop the running of trains. But there were conductors, brakemen, engineers, firemen, etc., who were members of the same order, and, as many of these struck also, of course travel and freight stopped on all railways where such members were employed. These were the men who stopped the trains. They were the only men who did this, for they were the only ones who could, except it might be train wreckers who stop trains by placing obstructions on the track. So the A. R. U., in sending out such a report, must think the country is easily deceived.

Last Sunday evening when Mrs. George Vanzyle and two sons were returning home from Leo their horse took fright and ran away, throwing them out of the rig. It overtook Tell Elson on the way, but with the exception of slight injuries sustained by Mrs. Elson, it passed them safely, and ran on till caught by D. W. Wyatt and John Lawhead. Mrs. Vanzyle and one son were severely hurt, the boy being kicked in the face and chest. The horse was but slightly hurt.

While Greely Provines was returning from the picnic his horse ran away. To make the matter more serious both lines broke, leaving Greely at the mercy of his horse. But Greely prides himself on being able to ride as fast as any horse can run, and he staid in the rig while the horse ran about three miles at a breakneck speed. When his father saw him coming he opened the gate and they turned in all right. Just as they made the turn Greely jumped out and the horse leaped the next gate, leaving the buggy behind and took a wild flight down the lane and through the woods beyond. Mr. Provines Sr. was slightly hurt and the buggy and harness badly discomfitted. It was quite fortunate that Miss Mattie S. was safely at home when the accident occurred.

To Atlantic City.

In order to give its patrons an opportunity to visit the Seashore at nominal cost, the B. & O. R. R. will run a low-rate excursion from all points west of the Ohio River and east of Wellsboro, Ind., to Atlantic City, N. J., on Tuesday, August 14, 1894.

Atlantic City has acquired such fame as a summer resort, that a description of its varied attraction is superfluous. Thousands are annually attracted to this delightful resort for the enjoyment of magnificient surf bathing, and to avail themselves of the unequaled opportunities for sailing, fishing, etc.

A promenade along the famous "board walk" (an elevated platform skirting the shore for several miles), will alone repay the tourist for the trip.

None should fail to embrace this opportunity to visit the most charming of the many resorts on the Atlantic Coast.

Tickets for this occasion will be on sale at all B. & O. R. R. ticket offices, at rate of one fare for the round trip. They will be available on all regular trains, and will be good for return ten days from date of sale, thus giving ample time for an enjoyable outing, and stop off at Washington on the return trip, if desired. 32

The Suffrage Tea.

The meeting, or social given by the W. C. T. U. at the residence of W. H. McIntosh Monday evening was largely attended. It was fortunate that a place had been chosen, where there was so much room, for a residence of the ordinary size would not have accommodated them. The 6th of August, is the 79th birthday of the Mrs. Zerelda Wallace, the venerable mother, of Gen. Lew Wallace. And for the reason that Mrs. Wallace is not only a temperance worker, but also an earnest champion of female suffrage, this meeting was made a "suffrage meeting." Mrs. Baldwin the president, called them to order, when a very eloquent prayer was offered by Mrs. G. S. McCord. After singing by the audience Mrs. A. Lewis read an account of "How Mrs. Wallace became a suffragist." Mr. Hastings sang a solo, and then followed two minutes talks by Mrs. D. T. Smith, W. B. Campbell, W. H. McIntosh, J. W. Baxter and James Griswold. Mrs. E. L. Casebeer read a very able and interesting paper. There was also a song by Mrs. Cuppy, all the exercises being well given and in excellent taste. Lunch came next including a social hour or so, which was all enjoyed. The exercises closed by a sort of suffrage catechism conducted by Mrs. Barns, and responded to by about thirty members of the audience. Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh, have the thanks of many for their share in making the evening such a pleasant occasion.

A Persian theological student, J. B. Mooshy, lectured at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening, giving a great amount of interesting information about that distant land and its people. He is attending Wabash College at Crawfordsville, and will become a missionary and go home to preach to his people.

Emanuel Stafford's barn was burned Saturday evening, being a total loss. It was full of wheat, hay, etc., all the recent harvest, so that the loss fell hard on him, for there was no insurance. We understand that liberal hearted friends, both in country and town, will contribute some friendly mites to help him through his trouble.

A letter from L. T. Rice at Wabash, says they are settled down in their new home. His new gallery is ready for business and they have a fine and pleasant location, right up in the busines part of the city. They send good wishes to the old neighbors and friends in Auburn. The COURIER will try and keep them posted on the news.

The Fayette Normal University is a school with a purpose. Those who are most familiar with its work speak in the highest terms of its excellent methods and equipments.

"There is a Salve for every wound." We refer to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, cures burns, bruises, cuts, indolent scores, as a local application in the nostrils it cures catarrh, and always cures piles.

"I always objected to Harry's smoking in the house, but since he began using Kessler Bros.' Receipt, I let him smoke in any room. They are so fragrant."

The Christian Endeavors of the Lutheran church will give an ice cream social on the court house lawn Saturday evening. All are invited to come out and help them and enjoy the features of the evening.

To make fine photos and neatly frame pictures, it takes a man with an artistic taste and practical experience. To get the best satisfaction, patronize one who makes a specialty of his own line of business. J. G. Clapp's specialties are fine photos and frames.

The fall term of the Elkhart Institute will begin Aug. 21, and continue until Oct. 26th, '94. Instruction thorough and eminently practical. Both sexes and all grades admitted. Address the Secretary, Dr. H. A. Mumaw, Elkhart, Ind., for announcement giving full information. 30 33

Last Thursday the weather took a sudden turn from hot and dry to cool and dry. Of course this did not help the corn and potatoes, which at the present time do not bid fair to be more than half a crop. In condition, the fields range all the way from good to nothing, for some are in such a condition that rain would not save them.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.—The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Robbins & McCord. tf

The regular Monday evening rehearsals of the Auburn Musical Club will hereafter be strictly private to all excepting the active and associate members and those personally invited by its members. But the Club extends an invitation to all to attend their meetings on the first Monday evening of each month, as on those nights the chorus work will be especially pleasing, and a specialy prepared program will be rendered and a fee of ten cents will be expected.

The Potter & Dilgard meat market went out of business Saturday evening, as we understand they though it would not pay them to continue, thought we believe they had a fair share of the patronage. We believe also, that the business will be opened up again at the same place, probably by Joseph Rainier who had his headquarters there so long. He is a good business man, and especially good in the meat market business, and will no doubt get his share of the trade

A number of tramps were hanging around the south end saloon last Thursday evening, and finally got into trouble with the saloon men and some of the latters' friends. Finally, agent Zent, was appealed to by the tramps, who had their cards to show that they were not regular tramps, but union men, out of a job and dead broke. Zent, asked the parties to desist, and they did for a time. But later on the trouble broke out again, and ended in a fight with the result that the tramps came out ahead. And they say several south end men were laid up for a day or two.

Ft. Wayne Journal, Aug. 5.—Lieutenant Davis, the Eighth cavalry recruiting officer, has received notification from the war department that the term of enlistment will hereafter be three years instead of five, and that only citizens of the United States will be enlisted. The Proctor law, passed by last congress, forbidding re enlistment after ten years' service or thirty years of age, has been repealed, and soldiers who were discharged from the army under this law are given the privilege of re-enlistment, with full benefit of re enlistment pay if joining within sixty days from the passage of the repeal law.

Mr. and Mrs. Coe and family went to Butler, their new home, on Tuesday. Mr. Coe takes charge of the schools of that place, as superintendent, bringing to his work a ripe experience, the fruit of many years of thorough service in all branches and grades of school work. He is thoroughly fitted by training and by an abundance of those qualities so much needed in a teacher, to give the people of Butler a good school, and the pupils valuable service. No one wishes him success more heartily, than the writer of this. And society in Butler will find in him and his wife, a most desirable addition. The good wishes of Auburn people go with them.

Orva Weeks, who has been in Kalamazoo for some time, thinks of taking a position in Chicago, if the job suits him. He will probably work on the "Chicago Searchlight." He is a young man of ability, and is bound to succeed. George is running a job office in Indianapolis.

Fires in lumber yards have been very common for two weeks past. In Chicago nearly a million was lost. Detroit also has suffered. Joseph Miles, well known here, he being a brother-in-law to Judge McClellan, lost $20,000 in a fire in his lumber yard at Detroit last week. He was fortunately insured.

Three ladies from the country, drove to town Monday evening to attend the Suffrage tea given by the W. C. T. U. at Mr. McIntosh's. They also drove home after it was over, going a distance of six miles or more. They are, Mrs. Stewardt, Mrs. L. D. Nelson and Mrs. S. M. High All are neighbors in east Jackson.

A letter from W. J. Bowman at Washington, D. C. speaks of the loss of all his household goods in a recent fire in that city. Mrs. Bowman was absent on a summer visit and their goods were stored for the time, in the storage warehouse of Knox express company which was destroyed by fire. Our people will all sympathize with them in their trouble. Mr. Bowman is in the employ of the government and we hope can hold his job so as to help out financially.

R. W. Cobb, Ira Thrush and Lyman Ashelman left Auburn the 31st ult for Columbia City a-wheel. They rode 58 miles in 4 hours and 18 minutes easily. Mr. Ashelman came home, while Thrush and Cobb continued their trip through several counties, riding about half the time. They reached home Thursday evening about dusk, coming in from Van Wert, Ohio, covering in all about 228 miles. They had no mishaps and all reported a delightful trip All rode the League wheel, "Chainless," which promises to be the wheel of the future.

Angola Herald—Fire, starting from a spark from an engine on the Lake Shore road, near the bridge south of town, swept eastward last Saturday afternoon and destroyed two straw stacks, about sixty rods of fence and killed a number of apple trees on the farm of T. P. Hendry. The threshing had been done only the day before, and it was with difficulty that the separator, which had been left in the field, was saved. The barn and residence of Ambrose Snyder was also in imminent danger. * * * During the first shower on Tuesday evening of last week lightning struck the barbed wire fence in front of Ben Davis' house, near the Fox lake bridge south of town, following the wire along several panels of the fence, then ran down the post into the ground. Mr. Davis, who had stepped out of the house just before the bolt struck, was considerably shocked for a moment, but not otherwise injured.

Closing Out

In about TEN DAYS we leave Auburn, and much as we regret to, we must close out our business here. We do not want to remove one dollar's worth of goods. We have less than two weeks left to us to dispose of our

$10,000
STOCK OF MERCHANDISE.

It is plain that to do so our prices must be extraordinarily low. We have met the emergency by making the prices so ridiculously low that they will not even bring in first cost; but the goods must go. Never before have you had such an opportunity. Such chances come but once in a lifetime and it will pay you to buy for a year ahead.

Below we mention a few of the many Great Big Bargains:

Men's Suits were $4, now at $2.25.
" " 6, 3.50.
" " 8, 4.75.
" " 10, 6.50.

Boys' Suits in the same proportion.

Child's Suits for 90 cents, worth $1.50.
Child's Suits for $1.50, well worth $3.00.
Child's Suits for $2.25, worth $4.00.

Big Bargains in Knee Pants.

Men's $1.00 Pants now 74 cents. Men's $1 50 Pants now $1.00.
Men's $2 50 Pants now $1.50. Men's $3.50 Pants now $2.25.

All through our large stock you will find a reduction in prices as above.

COME and SEE! COME PREPARED to BUY.

Such Opportunities do not often present themselves. Remember only TEN DAYS that you can avail yourself of such prices.

Dick Abrams and Elmer Greenwood, two Butler toughs who are brought up here about every term of court for stealing, are in trouble again. Last week they were brought here on a charge of stealing a lot of wool of Jake Hook. They sold the wool in Hicksville and are both in the county thief-cure hospital as a result. So far, they have always got clear, but it looks now as if this time they would have to settle down to a steady diet of corn bread and sorghum at Michigan City.

A SIGN of hard times—"To rent."

THERE is nothing as busy as an idle tongue.

IT is said that the fashions in Lapland have not changed for a thousand years. Happy husbands!

A COUNTRY editor believes that the reason why tramps are so poverty-stricken and wretched is because they don't advertise.

CHICAGO has an ordinance against "doctored cigarettes." Exactly what has been found to put into them which is worse than tobacco does not appear.

IT is predicted by Edison that in a few years the forge and anvil of the present day will have disappeared entirely. Welding and all working with iron and steel will be done by electricity.

IT is told to the credit of the wife of Senator Wetmore, of Rhode Island, that when at Hamburg, the Prince of Wales, who was then with his gay set, invited her to luncheon, and she very promptly declined the honor. Whereupon the Prince issued orders that no Wetmore should ever be received at court.

A DYNAMITE mine was discovered under the track of the railway over which the Czar was to travel to the maneuvers of the Russian army. The incident causes little surprise. It is only when no mines are discovered along the line of contemplated travel by the Russian monarch that people have reason to wonder what is the matter with the Russian people.

THERE is a bright prospect ahead for the farmers of the nation. Crops are reported as being in good condition from nearly every section of the country. This means that the farmer will have his full share of whatever good comes to us in this year, and will not have reason for complaint, all things considered. Even though prices rule low, there will be bread to eat and clothes to wear for all who till the soil. This we have to be thankful for, and it is a great deal.

AT the agriculture experiment station of Maine State College, observations covering the period of growth of four years have shown that the excess of moisture in forest above that of open field averages 10 per cent., reaching 14 per cent. in the middle of the day. The excess would undoubtedly be greater in a very dense forest. The presence of patches of forest in any region exerts a marked influence on the hygroscopic conditions of the atmosphere, and this condition, in turn, is an important factor in the growth of vegetation.

EVEN within a year past, when times have been hard, many thousands of Canadians have come to this country in search of employment, which they have generally been able to find in Eastern manufacturing places and in the lake regions. The rural Canadians make good farm hands, but they demand higher wages than landowners are willing to pay, more than twice as high as they could get in any of the provinces of Canada, where both hay and provender are poor on the farms. Most of the French Canadians who come to this country are able to speak English, a language which is held in scorn by the Frenchmen of France.

A LARGE part of what is now Holland in Europe was reclaimed from the ocean, and the huge dykes which keep the water from rolling downward on the land are lined with windmills which pump the water out of the inclosure and empty it into the ocean. Now the Dutch Government has decided to undertake the reclamation of the Zuyder Zee, an immense inland shallow bay. This sheet of water is sixty miles long and about 210 miles in circumference. It is proposed to reclaim 500,000 acres, which will be worth $150,000,000. A considerable part of the expense will go to pay the Zuyder Zee fishermen for the loss of their fishing grounds. The work will require several years to accomplish it, as it is the largest single effort to reclaim from the ocean that has been attempted.

A WESTERN exchange says that Iowa farmers during the past few years have found clover seed their most paying crop, some receiving more for the seed per acre than the land itself cost. At this rate it pays better to raise clover for seed than for any other purpose, and the seed is a better crop than anything else the farmer can raise. There are very few articles which will pay as much as the land is worth, and clover seed will not do this when farmers generally raise it.

THERE can be no objection on the score of health to these plum olives, but on the score of honesty there is a large one—the same that applies to the sale of oleomargarine as butter, or to the sale of any commodity as something which it is not. It must be that food tastes differently according to its name, and had Shakspeare been a merchant of to-day he would have known that in a name was a good market or a poor one for whatever he wished to sell, from novels to potatoes.

A GOOSEBERRY farmer on the eastern shore of Maryland shipped to Baltimore twelve thousand seven hundred pounds of green gooseberries and sold them at four and a half cents a pound. He gathered more than six hundred bushels of gooseberries from six acres. The gooseberry is one of the fruits that sell better green than ripe. Green gooseberry sauce is esteemed an admirable accompaniment to meats in the land where the gooseberry grows, and green gooseberry pie, though less beautiful than cranberry tart, is an admirable product.

THE Legislature of Louisiana has just voted an appropriation for the erection of a monument to the memory of Thom Laffon, a New Orleans negro celebrated for his philanthropy. It is in order to inquire how many States in the North have done such a thing. Of all States in the South Louisiana would doubtless be the last to receive credit for such a movement, and yet Louisiana has evidently taken hold of the race problem and the difficulty of solving it while other sections are talking it over. The act is a highly hopeful sign, as it suggests an ignoring of race prejudices that is very significant.

STATISTICS illustrating the growth of trade relations between the United States and Canada have been transmitted to the Senate by the Secretary of the Treasury. The statistics, which have been prepared by both the United States and Canadian authorities, cover a period of seventy-three years, from 1821 to 1893, inclusive. The figures given show, among other things, that the exports of merchandise in 1821 from the United States to Canada amounted to $2,014,520, and the imports from that country to the United States to $414,500. In 1893, on the other hand, the exports amounted to $24,138,482, and the imports to $22,108,916. The total of exports for the seventy-three years covered by the statistics was $1,467,159,324, and total of the imports amounted to $1,299,957,798.

PITTSBURG DISPATCH: A novelty in the hatching of eggs has appeared in the shape of an electric incubator. The special feature of this machine is that the heat of the egg drawer is automatically regulated to the fiftieth part of a degree Fahrenheit. It consists of a tank incubator, heated by radiation from the bottom of a water tank, which is constructed on the multitubular system. When the egg drawer reaches the temperature of 104 degrees Fahrenheit an electro thermostat connects up a dry battery with an electro-magnet, which actuates a damper, allowing the heat to escape though the open air instead of passing through the flues of the water tank. This entirely automatic device is said to effect a saving of 30 per cent. in the fuel used for heating.

SAYS the Massachusetts Ploughman: Plums in their original character are delicious food, but it seems that certain merchants are not satisfied with plums as plums but propose to change them into olives. It may be doubted if plums by that name will taste as sweet as in their first state. These metamorphosed plums are to masquerade in the market as olives. The plums are bought green, sold to the large pickling houses of the country and appear on the table as the best imported olives. They are now of the right size for treatment as French or Italian olives as the demand may be. The plum orchards of New York supply the greater part of these American olives. One grower has sold the crop of 7,000 trees, amounting to some 15,000 or 20,000 bushels, to an olive pickler.

A Grewsome Scheme.

A florist in the Boulevard St. Germain has this year had the ingenious idea of attracting people to his shop by organizing what may be called a tableau vivant of Christ in his tomb. The tradesman's back shop, converted into a chapelle ardente, is decorated with garlands of roses, and white lilacs, which hang in profusion from the ceiling, and are attached in festoons on the walls. Enveloped in a white shroud, lying in the position of the Christ of Philippe de Champaigne, with bare arms, feet, and hands, stained with the stigmata, the forehead apparently bleeding, from the crown of thorns, with disordered hair around his bowed head, and with a pall face and sunken eyes, a figure—that of Jesus—is shown to the public, not in wax, but in living flesh and blood. The man who lies thus in the florist's shop during ten hours of the day is a painter's model. The crowd of persons outside anxious to witness the spectacle has been so great that policemen had to be told off to keep them in order while awaiting their turn to enter.—Paris letter.

VICTORY FOR JAPAN.

WINS HER FIRST GREAT NAVAL ENGAGEMENT.

Desperate Naval Battle in Which Many Chinese Are Slain—Chinese Battle-Ship Chen-Yuen Sunk and Two First-Class Cruisers Captured or Destroyed.

The Chinese Out-Classed.

The Japanese have been victorious in the first big naval battle of the war over Corea and have sunk next to the largest battleship in the Chinese navy. The battle was fought Monday and was desperately contested, both nations being represented by large and strong fleets. The Chinese, however, did not understand the handling of their ships as well as the Japanese, and that put them at a serious disadvantage.

The full details of the fight are not at hand, but it is known that the Chen-Yuen was sunk and two other large Chinese vessels, believed to be first-class cruisers, were either captured or destroyed. The loss of life was great also. The Chinese fleet carried nearly 1,000 men, and few, if any, escaped. Two German officers, who were in command of the Chen-Yuen, are reported to be among the lost also.

Throughout the engagement the Japanese showed greater skill and ability in the handling of their boats, and consequently had things much their own way. Their work with the guns was effective, and they also showed that they thoroughly understood the handling of torpedoes. The Chinese did the best they could, but they were lacking in seamanship and also in ability to handle their guns effectively. They demonstrated the truth of the claim that they have nothing like the ability and training of the Japanese seamen and gunners, and are at a big disadvantage on the water.

Cruisers Built by the Armstrongs.

The two cruisers said to have been captured or destroyed are believed to be the ones built for China by the Armstrongs. They were modern war vessels and among the best in the KING OF COREA.

Chinese navy. Their loss will seriously cripple China on the water and materially increase Japan's advantage. A harder blow could hardly have been dealt China in a single battle than the destruction of their two cruisers and the big warship Chin-Yuen. The loss of life is insignificant compared to it, although that was severe for a naval battle.

The Chen-Yuen was a battle-ship of 6,400 tons displacement, carrying 14 inches compound armor at the water-line. Her battery included four 12-inch guns, protected by an armor breastwork, and two smaller Krupps. She was also furnished with eleven Hotchkiss cannon and tubes for Whitehead torpedoes. In addition, the Chen-Yuen had two 8-inch and 6-inch Krupps in her main battery and a secondary battery of Hotchkiss revolving cannon. The Chen-Yuen was built for China at the Stettin Works. She was a sister ship of the Ting-Yuen and was the most powerful warship in the Chinese navy with the exception of Ting-Yuen.

Japan's Official Statement.

The following official statement of the difficulties betweeen China and Japan, which led to the outbreak of hostilities between these two countries, has been issued by the Japanese Government: Japan and China were approaching a settlement of these difficulties, when China suddenly requested Japan to withdraw her fleet from Corea and to give a formal compliance with the Chinese demands by the 20th; otherwise the whole Chinese forces were to land and a sea advance upon the part of China was to be made. The Japanese regarded this as an ultimatum; but, acting under the advice of the friendly powers, they agreed to the proposals in principle in amended form, at the same time declaring that if the threatened Chinese advance was made on the 20th it would be regarded as an overt act.

EMPEROR OF JAPAN.

It is conjectured that the Japanese naval commanders were instructed to be on the watch for the Chinese warships and, seeing the latter advancing on July 27, they opened fire.

The Japanese do not believe that the Kow Shung, the Chinese transport sunk by a Japanese cruiser, was flying the British flag, but were that the case they regard it as being a ruse. The Japanese indignantly deny the charges of brutality brought against the officers and crew of the cruiser which sunk the transport. No official report has been received at Yokahama of this engagement.

Germany Suspicious of Russia.

The German press regards with suspicion Russia's attitude toward the Japanese-Chinese conflict, although the comments of the Russian newspapers indicate that the St. Petersburg government is far from pleased with Japan's energetic action. The Vossische Zeitung says:

"The germs of further conflicts are already in the air. If the efforts to restrict the war to collisions such as have already occurred fail Russia probably will interfere. This almost certainly will force England to act."

The writer concludes that the European powers soon will have to intervene.

The Paris newspapers affect an attitude of neutrality and impartiality toward events in Corea, but a strong general tendency in favor of Japan is noticeable.

Misgivings are officially expressed at Madrid regarding the possible result to the Philippine Islands in the event of Japan becoming the dominant power in the far east. It is said to be possible that Japan might utilize the troubles at Mindanao Island, Malay archipelago, as a pretext to execute her ambitious designs.

HOPE FAST FADING.

Farmers, Speculators and Railroad Men Alarmed at the Prospect.

The corn crop last year was worth $600,000,000 on the farm—almost three times as much as the farmers got for their wheat crop; and last year's crop was a comparatively small one and the average farm price was low, 37 cents. In 1881 the corn crop was worth $900,000,000 to the farmers. The corn crop is always worth to the country as much as all the other grain crops put together; sometimes worth a good deal more than all the others put together. It is no wonder, consequently, that, the prospect having within two weeks suddenly changed from one for a full corn yield to one for a corn failure, everyone is excited, grain speculator, railroad manager, stock speculator and merchant.

The government report issued July 10 indicated a corn yield of more than 2,000,000,000 bushels. The acreage was put at 76,000,000; the condition very high. Only once was the acreage any larger, in 1889, and that year saw the record-breaking yield, 2,112,000,000 bushels.

Up to the middle of July there seemed nothing to mar the promise of the most important crop of the country. There had been dry weather, but a drought can last a long while without creating any alarm. It is only after one hope for rain after another has been disappointed that the farmer begins to worry, and only after the farmer has told of his fears for a week or more that the speculator, railroader or merchant begins to borrow trouble.

Semi-Panic Over the Corn Crop.

But now every interest, from the first to the last, is in a semi-panic over the corn crop which began with such amazing promise and which has now apparently been almost overtaken with disaster.

"We don't dare to say," said General Manager St. John, of the Rock Island Railroad, "how bad we believe the corn situation to be. Half which the great granger roads haul takes its origin from the corn crop. There is the grain itself, about 400,000,000 bushels, being hauled by the roads; 100,000,000 bushels of it to Chicago alone in good years. There are the hogs and the cattle, both dependent on the crop. It is not any wonder that the railroad officials are afraid to tell all their fears; nor any wonder that the shrewd ones in Wall street are getting out of their holdings of the great corn roads, the Burlington, the Rock Island and the others. The vessel men get three-quarters of their tonnage from Chicago from this crop. The elevator owner knows it is the grain which pours into Chicago all winter to pour out again in the spring at the opening of navigation. The general merchant is well aware that a curtailment of the important crop of the country, which feeds the live stock and furnishes all the carriers the bulk of their tonnage, cannot be cut short without cutting down the purchasing power of that part of the country which makes good times or bad—the West."

Iowa Crops Nearly Ruined.

The drought has been severest in Iowa and Nebraska; the two States which raise usually about 400,000,000 bushels of corn, about one-fourth the entire yield. There has been dry weather everywhere in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Ohio, Indiana, Iowa and Nebraska; but there has been partial relief of late except in the two biggest States. Half this crop is made in the seven States named and a quarter in the two States where the heat and drought have been the fiercest.

"Nobody in Chicago," says James Windsor, the well-known Des Moines porkpacker, "appreciates the condition of things in Iowa. There is no salvation left for the largest part of the corn. It is dead. The heat and drought have been enough even to kill the hay. On my farm, where I had 600 tons of hay last year, I cut forty-five tons this year."

Rain would, of course, relieve the situation everywhere. Even in Iowa and Nebraska there would be a remnant saved, possibly 200,000,000 bushels, where 400,000,000 was originally promised. Illinois has had the most rain and is in the best condition. The acreage in Kansas is very large and showers there have helped to relieve the exigency. But rain delayed now every twenty-four hours means millions more corn lost. That is why the signal service man is the center of interest early each morning, and why the weather predictions are scanned so eagerly each noon and why special dispatches from the corn States are read first of all each morning.

TAINTS THE NATION.

THE PROTECTIONIST POLICY DEPRAVES LEGISLATION.

It Demoralizes Industry and Pollutes Society—Suppresses Free Thought, Free Speech, Free Ballots, and Free Legislation—The Battle for Freedom.

Protecting Debility.

We have lately had some very disgusting proofs of the way in which the protectionist policy has corrupted our National Legislature. Given legislation which may put millions into the pockets of private citizens and corporations, and the obtaining of that legislation becomes a matter of business. It is sought in the same spirit and by the same means that business men seek cheaper raw material, lower freights, or advantages of any kind over their competitors. Direct corruption of a legislator may or may not be resorted to. That depends on the honor and decency of the men who seek his vote. But no pains is spared to make it his interest to agree with the vote seekers. It may be money aid to the party, it may be payment of the legislator's campaign expenses, it may be by information that will enable him to deal profitably on the Stock Exchange—whatever the method or the means, the protected persons or corporations treat the matter as a strictly business one, with which sentimental considerations have only a very remote connection. The result is what we all know and are ashamed of.

That is one side of the matter. There is another that is not more pleasant. The tendency with protected industries is to trust much to protection and not much to wit and energy and skill. Undoubtedly the effect in so large a country and with so active a people as our own is counteracted by the spur of competition from within. We have absolute free trade among a population nearly as large as that of France and England, or of France, Spain, and Italy combined, and, considering the character of the population, the domestic competition is stronger than international competition in the latter group. When the counteracting interior competition is confined to the people of a country like France, it is relatively weak, and the effect of protection in demoralizing the general energies is correspondingly strong. It results in a modified form of state socialism, which is all the more mischievous for being veiled and insidious. Men who would be active and successful in an open fight with vigorous competition, become inert. They are constantly relying on the state to remove obstacles and reduce difficulties in the way of their prosperity instead of increasing their own energy and overcoming difficulties and obstacles. And not only their mental but their moral senses are perverted or put to sleep. They think of protection only as preserving the home market for them, ignoring the injustice of shutting their customers up to the same market.

Jules Simon, one of the acutest and soundest of the political reasoners of France, has recently described this effect of the control of the Government secured by the protectionists:

"They have favored and developed that vice of indolence which is peculiarly French. We have impetuosity in war, but indolence and timidity in business and industry. The habit of being governed over much makes us count on the Government instead of on ourselves. We look to it alone for safety and profit. At the slightest danger to our persons, our property, or our capital we run to the Government. We oppose readily enough, and with strong arguments, the theory of state providence, but on the first occasion we bid good-by to our theory and implore the state to protect us. In our marriages we look for dowry rather than character; in our investments we prefer a moderate but sure return; in industry, routine; in occupation, the peaceful mediocrity of the functionary to the chances and changes of the independent worker. We are essentially a woolen stocking people. Disasters are rare with us, but progress is slow, and this slowness, in the presence of the continually accelerated industry and enterprise among our competitors, is equivalent to defeat."

This is not a pleasant picture. There is no reason to doubt that it is a fair and accurate one.—New York Times.

Dangers of Protection.

Nothing better illustrates one of the inherent evils and dangers of protection than the present situation in Congress. We refer to the objection against protective duties urged so strongly by Congressman Tom L. Johnson, viz: the difficulty of abolishing them. Mr. Johnson's main reason for preferring an income to a tariff tax is that an income tax can be abolished without opposition from wealthy individuals and corporations, while the mere suggestion that tariff taxes ought to be reformed downward arouses the powerful opposition of thousands of millionaire corporations that fatten on protection.

We have not, since the adoption of protection in 1861, had a fair and open discussion of the tariff question, either in Congress or on the stump. The beneficiary of protection is always on hand with his "subtle power," as Senator Carey calls it. He frightens or discharges his employes who are inclined toward free trade. He refuses to advertise with the free trade editor or he purchases a controling interest and changes the policy of the paper. He employs speakers to tell the people that protection is entirely for the good of his dear employes. If he loses at the polls he carries his case to Congress, where, by bribery and corruption, he usually gets the decision reversed. Several times since 1866 the Republicans have tried to reduce duties. In every case they have been unable to keep their promise to the people because of the corrupt influence of greedy protected corporations. They have succeeded only in reducing revenue duties that they might advance protective duties. Grant, Garfield, Arthur and Sherman all believed in free raw materials and in revenue duties. Both in 1883 and in 1890 the Republicans expected to reduce duties. They were unable to resist the pressure of protected interests which had given large campaign contributions and which employed hundreds of lobbyists at Washington with large corruption funds.

At last, unable longer to control, frighten or buy voters, they were brought face to face with a Congress elected to reform the tariff on free trade lines. The situation was desperate but they did not give up hope. They resolved to save as much McKinleyism as possible from the wreck. They established big corruption offices at Washington and made a study of men and conditions at the Capitol. They were unable to "swing" the House, but did succeed in frightening its Ways and Means Committee so that it dared not bring forth a radical revenue bill. In the Senate they have not only held their control over all Republicans but have made a few friends in Democratic ranks. They have succeeded in prolonging McKinleyism and may prevent the passage of a tariff bill worthy of the name.

A system which has maintained itself for thirty years by the suppression of free speech, by purchased votes and by bribed legislators is not compatible with American freedom. One or the other must go. Which shall it be? BYRON W. HOLT.

Only Free Trade Can Save the Farmer.

The agricultural situation has rapidly assumed a very grave aspect. With the unheard-of fall in the price of wheat, together with the official report of a largely increased wheat-acreage in Argentina—now fast becoming our rival in foreign wheat markets—the farmers of the West and Northwest must be at their wits' end to know how they can "make both ends meet" next year. Almost every grain crop will bring low prices, and Southern cotton is not likely to fare better. A magnificent season in Great Britain and good crops in Europe will reduce the foreign demand for American farm products till 1896.

The Secretary of Agriculture recently said in the Forum:

> Selling in competition with all the world, the most serious drawback to the American farmer is his compulsory buying in the "home market," whence all competition of the outside world is excluded. * * * It is a great wrong upon agriculture to force it to sell in the free trade markets of the earth, and then restrict, coerce and bulldoze it into buying the things which it is somewhere compelled to purchase in the United States, whence by the high protective tariff all competition is absolutely shut out. Under commercial freedom the purchasing power of the farm's yearly produce would buy more at a low price than it can now even at a high price in a restricted market which is walled in and guaranteed competitionless to the protectees.

The Herald has shown by official statistics that the McKinley tariff forces up the prices of all articles farmers have to buy to nearly double their value, and the aggregate sum it thus takes every year from the people as bounty to home manufacturers and trusts is not less than $2,000,000,000. If this tariff is not repealed distress, bankruptcy and ruin must be more widespread next year than now, especially among agriculturists. Should the German tariff bill pass some relief will be felt, but the relief will be slow and scanty.

American agriculture is groaning under a mountain of tariff taxation, and yet every Republican Senator and Congressman opposes the Wilson bill, which would, if passed, take off $1,000,000,000—a whole billion of dollars—of taxation from agriculture—avast sum, not one cent of which goes into the Treasury, but all of which is extorted from farmers and planters to swell the fortunes of the "protected" trusts. The negroes under the old Southern slave holder were less crushed beneath the iron heel of despotism than our farmers now are under this brutal "protection." Only free trade can save American agriculture from pitiable decadence and disaster. All farmers and planters should at next November's elections and now make a hot and heavy fight against every candidate for the Legislature or Congress who has not proved himself a fearless and honest advocate of real tariff reform and commercial freedom.—New York Herald.

Protectionist's Last Ditch.

There is no doubt that the great majority of the people are with the President and the House of Representatives in the final struggle over the tariff. Even the Republicans cannot help admiring their courage and fidelity and unselfish devotion to principle. Probably some of the narrower partisans in the opposition would not be sorry to see a breach that could not be healed between the Senate and the House. That would leave the Republicans a little longer enjoyment of whatever can be got out of the McKinley law. But how long would that last? Not long, we may be sure. In all human probability, only a few months. A failure to pass a tariff act—if the House stood firm—would not be charged to the Democratic party, which controls the House, but to the treachery of those who cheated the party of its control in the Senate. It would be plain to the country that the chief agency in this treachery was the sugar trust, which would thus be made the objective in the Congressional elections this fall. If any politician thinks there would be victory for the trust in such a fight, he can safely be left to discover his mistake.—New York Times.

Prosperous Paper Industry.

The Paper Mill says of the general condition of trade:

> The active members of two very large paper distributing houses declared yesterday that for the moment they had all the business they could well attend to, and that orders were coming in very freely. And it is only the middle of July. What do you think of it? Look out for a very material revival of business in September.

Tariff or no tariff, this industry will succeed because it is able, in spite of protection, to compete in the markets of the world.

> The London correspondent of the Paper Mill writes, under date of July 7: "The low rates at which American 'news' (paper) can be put upon the European market have created a sensation." Last year the British manufacturers were complaining of the low prices made by Germans and Norwegians, but now the Americans threaten even these cheap producers.

We are exporting about $2,000,000 worth of paper a year. Cheap labor cannot compete with dear labor.

THE postponement of tariff reform is a grievous thing, especially at this time, but the people will forgive the postponement a good deal more readily than they will a cowardly surrender of principle for the sake of securing a present peace and the mere shadow of reform.—Detroit Free Press.

STEAM DITCHER.

Will Form a Ditch on Both Sides of a Railway Roadbed.

This machine, as described in the Scientific American, is adapted to form a ditch on one or both sides of the roadbed of a railway, the ditching mechanism being operated by engines on the rear end of the platform car on which the apparatus is arranged. The improvement has been patented by Mr. William Harvey, Stanberry, Mo. The front ends of the sides of each of the scrapers are connected by chains with a draught bar connected with a draught beam pivoted on the car, and held in place by a pivoted brace, to permit of swinging the draught beam inward when not in use, the rear end of the scrapers being also similarly connected to a draught beam. The inner side of each scraper has a pivoted wing, to prevent dirt from falling on the track, and is connected with a link regulating the depth the scraper is to work, while the outer side has a pivoted wing adapted to give the desired slope to the side of the ditch. Each of the scrapers is suspended from a shaft connected with levers pivoted on swivel blocks, sliding transversely in guideways on the car platform, the front and rear levers of each scraper having each a clevis from which a rope extends up to a hoisting drum on a longitudinal shaft journaled in standards. This shaft is actuated by a sprocket chain from the main driving shaft, operated by engines of any approved construction on the rear end of the car. As the car on which the apparatus is arranged is pushed forward by a locomotive the scrapers dig into the ground until they are full, the car being intermittently moved forward only about the length of the scrapers at a time. The operator then, by means of a clutch mechanism, connects the hoisting drums with the driving shaft, whereby the scrapers are lifted, and the car is drawn by the locomotive to the place of dumping, where the dirt is automatically discharged.

HIS DRUNKEN DOUBLE.

Senator Hill's Image Arraigned in a Police Court.

United States Senator David B. Hill's friends were distressed for a long time because he had no "double." They were afraid that he would not make much of a run for President unless they could fix him up with a good mascot, in the shape of a "double." They were on the point of advertising for one, when they happened to run across a fairly good one. He was a barber at Albany. It is true he was not perfect, but he had to serve the purpose and did as well as he knew how.

It is only a few months since a man was arraigned in Essex market police court for being drunk and disorderly. Every one in the room recognized the drunk as the long-sought-for double of Senator Hill. His likeness was absolutely perfect. When his name was asked he replied, "Hill."

Everybody laughed but the justice, who frowned severely at the drunk, and asked for his full name. "James L. Hill, your honor," he replied. Hill said he was an insurance agent, who had been out of a job for some time. He had just obtained one, and had started out to celebrate it, when he was "snaked in." The police justice discharged him, telling him he was a perfect fac-simile of Senator Hill and ought to maintain the dignity of his resemblance.

A Second-Hand Baby.

Mrs. Kelly, the actress, is fond of telling a good story, and for her latest she claims absolute originality. One of her tradesmen, it appears, had just received an addition to his offspring. His son, a small boy, was taken to see the new arrival, whom he eyed very critically.

"Why, he's got no hair, father," was his first remark.

The fact was admitted.

"And he's got no teeth, father," was the next comment.

The circumstance could not be denied.

"I tell you what, father," was the final observation, "you've been 'had'—he's an old 'un!"—Tid-Bits.

Bushels of Marbles.

Most of the stone marbles used by boys are made in Germany. The refuse only of the marble and agate quarries is employed, and this is treated in such a way that there is practically no waste.

Men and boys are employed to break the refuse stone into small cubes, and with their hammers they acquire a marvelous dexterity. The little cubes are then thrown into a mill consisting of a grooved bedstone and a revolving runner. Water is fed to the mill, and the runner is rapidly revolved, while the friction does the rest.

In half an hour the mill is stopped and a bushel or so of perfectly rounded marbles taken out. The whole process costs the merest trifle.

FIRE FIEND'S FURY.

THREE TOWNS SWEPT WITH THE BESOM OF DESTRUCTION.

Phillips, Wis., and Belle Plaine and Brooklyn, Iowa, Almost Annihilated—Thirteen Lives Known to Have Been Lost—An Unprecedented Disaster.

A Day of Horrors.

Thirty-nine buildings out of 700 stand amid smoke and ashes on the site of what was Friday the flourishing city of Phillips, Wis, the county seat of Price County, and one of the wealthiest and most prosperous of all the towns in the timber regions of Wisconsin. Three thousand people are homeless, and, except those who have been offered shelter in the neighboring towns, have no covering for their worn out bodies. Worse than all, at least thirteen people are known to have lost their lives. The dead are:

James Locke, butcher, wife and five children.

Frank Cliss, in charge of the dry kilns of the John R. Davis Lumber Company, and 2-year-old child.

Mrs. David Bryden, wife of the foreman of the Fayette Shaw Tannery, and two children. Mr. Bryden was also supposed to have died, but returned home that night, having been away from the city, only to hear that his family had perished.

Unknown man.

All the dead were drowned in Elk Lake while trying to escape from the fire, except the unknown man whose body was found in the ruins of the house of F. W. Sackett, editor of the Phillips Times.

The property loss cannot at this time be accurately estimated, but it will reach at least $1,250,000.

The immense plant of the John R. Davis Lumber Company is a total loss, amounting to between $500,000 and $600,000. On this property there is an insurance equal to at least four-fifths the value of the plant. Of the rest of the city about half the property was insured. Many of the poorer people carried no insurance on their homes, and they have lost everything. There were many fine business blocks and private residences in the city, and every one was burned to the ground. Many of the residences cost upward of $3,000, and were handsome even for a Northern Wisconsin city.

Not since the cyclone of fire that wiped out the existence of the village of Peshtigo, when many people were burned to death, has there been a holocaust of the character of this one. Four gales of fire following each other, as soon as one had accomplished its work of destruction, cut four swaths through the city, leaving standing only the Lutheran Church and some dwellings near the southern limits, and freakish by jumping over the Woester Town Hall and a group of dwellings in the very heart of the burned district.

A system of water works, which would ordinarily be ample protection against the blazing forests, was rendered useless by the burning of the pumping station in the first fire.

Relief Come Quickly.

In almost no time provisions consisting of bread, butter, coffee and canned articles had been received from Fifield, Prentice, Dorchester, Medford and Butternut. Telegrams were received from the mayors of Ashland and Stevens Point. The former telegraphed that he would send what was wanted, and a man was at once sent to superintend the shipment. Stevens Point sent a car-load of provisions. Saturday night eight car-loads of provisions had been received. Major Upham, who has had experience with the terrors of fire, telegraphed that relief was on the way from Marshfield as soon as he arrived home from Milwaukee.

Governor Peck sent the following message from Oconomowoc:

Will bring you relief at once. Wire me at once what is most needed. Keep a stiff upper lip. We are coming as soon as cars can run.

A telegram was sent to the Governor in reply, asking him to send blankets and tents, together with mess tents, for 1,000 people. In response to this the Governor telegraphed that there were no tents available at present, but that he would be there in the morning with sheathing, hammers and nails, and to be ready to begin the construction of temporary quarters.

Railway Officials Render Aid.

General Manager Whitcomb, of the Central, sent the following telegram to all officers and agents:

You have heard of the disaster that has overtaken Phillips and other points on our line. Use your best efforts to get together supplies that will be immediately useful and forward them to meet the emergency. All supplies consigned to the authorized relief committee will be transported free, and you will give preference over other freight. If necessary send supplies on passenger trains to meet immediate wants.

People Have Been Courageous.

In the face of the calamity that has befallen the people of Phillips they have manifested a courage that is remarkable, and have really seemed in good spirits. Every effort put forth has been to care for the immediate wants of the unfortunate. Mayor Koch of Milwaukee headed a fund with $100, and $500 city funds were temporarily used. Eau Claire, Wausau, and Chippewa Falls were among those contributing liberally of cash.

IOWA TOWNS SUFFER.

Belle Plaine and Brooklyn Lose Upward of Half a Million.

A fire which started in a Belle Plaine, Iowa, blacksmith shop, on Saturday afternoon resulted in the nearly total destruction of the business part of town, only three buildings remaining. The loss is estimated at $500,000, with perhaps insurance amounting to $200,000. The flames, owing to the buildings being very dry, were soon beyond control. From Krohl's livery stable the flames leaped across the street into another livery stable and the engine-house and spread up the main street west to the Henry Hotel; then across the street into a billiard hall, and continuing east engulfed the entire business part of the city, leaving ruin and ashes in its wake.

It was a terribly fierce fire, and with one engine, hook and ladder truck, hose carts, and other apparatus nothing could be done to check the flames which speeded from building to building with great rapidity. People living in the upper stories of buildings were compelled to flee for their lives, and in one instance the family of John B. Leicht were rescued from the second story of the drug store of Vanmeter & Co. by means of ladders, so fast was the spread of the flames.

Brooklyn, Iowa, Stricken.

A disastrous fire broke out in Wood & Kibby's furniture and undertaking establishment at Brooklyn, Iowa, Saturday morning, and in two hours every business building on Front and Jackson streets was in ruins, including the Chronicle office, the postoffice, and the opera house. The loss is over $150,000 and the insurance nearly $80,000. The National and Niagara Insurance Companies are the heaviest losers. Others are the Continental, Home, Hartford, Farmers', Council Bluffs Capitol, North British, Ætna, and Phœnix.

The following are the losses, with the amount of insurance carried:

Brooklyn Chronicle, $5,000, partly insured; Butts' barber shop $100, no insurance; Wood & Kibby $3,000, insurance $1,500; Drs. Conawty and Busby $1,000, no insurance; Scott, Reed & Scott $300, no insurance; Poweshiek County Bank $3,500, insurance $2,300; Boston Clothing House $5,000, insurance $3,000; Postoffice $2,500, insurance $1,500; J. H. Wood $1,000, insurance $800; Rayburn & Lee $1,800, insurance $1,500; Dr. A. C. Landes $150, insured; Charles West $700, insured; E. H Talbott $500, insured; C. T. Rainsburg $5,000, insurance $3,500; Leonard Bros. $10,000, insurance $7,000; William Hankey $12,000, insurance $6,000; Graham Bros. $4,000, insurance $4,500; Dr. A. E. Auger $1,000, insurance $600; I. O. O. F. hall $10,000; insurance $6,200; George Kraft $3,000, by damage; Karr Bros. $12,000, insurance $10,000; J. W. Johnson $6,000, partly insured; Mills' variety store $2,000, insurance $800; Mustapher & Butts $1,000, no insurance; F. P. Shrader $5,000 insurance $3,500; W. L. Paul $600, insurance $300; I. L. Drake $150, insured; William Manatt $6,000, no insurance; Phil Kilmer $1,000, insured; Wood & Derrance $8,000, partly insured; First Bational Bank $100, insured; Sterling & Tabott building $100, insured; Bowers building $200, insured; Boughton, jeweler, $50, insured; E. R. Bigelow $400, insured; Westley Manatt $4,000, no insurance.

LAUNCHING A BATTLESHIP.

It Is a Complex Problem and a Slight Mistake Would Cost Millions.

Albert Franklin Matthews tells an interesting story of "The Evolution of a Battleship" in the July number of the Century. This is a history of the construction of the Indiana, so far the only vessel of this class we have in our navy. After describing the wonderful power of this monster, the most formidable engine of war in the world, and the manner of its construction, Mr. Matthews said:

"So the building goes on until the launching day comes, and two broad ways are built up against the bottom of the vessel, and the keel blocks on which it has been resting are knocked away. In the launch of the Indiana Mr. Nixon ran a row of electric lights beneath the bottom of the vessel, adding another innovation to the details of American shipbuilding. Each launching way consists of upper and lower planking, between which is spread thousands of pounds of the best tallow. At the bow of the boat these upper and lower planks are clamped together, and when all is ready they are sawed apart, and the vessel starts. The upper part of the ways slides into the water with the vessel, and the lower part with the smoking hot tallow remains stationary.

"A launch in these days is so smooth, and so soon ended, rarely occupying more than twelve seconds from start to finish, that one scarce recognizes its difficulty. Three things are absolutely necessary: It must be no time, when the tidal water is highest; it must be of smart speed, so as not to stick on its downward journey to the water: and it must be accomplished without straining. So complex a thing is a launch that the careful engineer in charge is able to estimate the strain on every part of the vessel for every position it occupies, at intervals of one foot, on its way down the incline.

"There is one supreme moment. It is when the vessel is nearly two-thirds in the water. The buoyancy of the water raises the vessel and throws its weight on its shoulders. Here is where the greatest danger of straining comes, and should the ways break down the vessel would be ruined, a matter of nearly $2,000,000 in a ship like the Indiana when it was launched.

"The launch over, the machinery is lifted in and fitted, and then comes the board of Government experts, who look the vessel over inch by inch, the fires are started, and the trial trip follows. For four hours, amid suppressed excitement that answers nervously to every quiver of the vessel, the engines are run at full speed. A premium or a penalty is at stake now. The breakage of a bolt or the disarrangement of a valve may mean thousands of dollars of loss to the contractors. Trained workmen are locked in the fire rooms, not to be released until the test is over. Cooled drinking water, with oatmeal sprinkled upon it, is run down to them in a rubber tube from a barrel on deck. A hose is played on the costly machinery in places where there is danger from overheating, as though it were on fire. Almost every pound of coal used on the trip is carefully selected.

"When the four hours are passed and the strain is over a sigh of relief from every one on board, and even from the vessel herself, goes up, and the ship passes from the contractor to the Government, and day after day while she is in commission the flag will be saluted, and the score or more of other ceremonies and formalities observed on a man-of-war will follow."

Buttermilk as a Summer Drink.

It would be a grand result, were it possible to bring it about, to secure the consumption of the buttermilk of the creameries around Chicago by the laboring people who put their money into the saloon. This would arrest the awful curse of strong drink, the workmen would be nourished, strengthened, and placed upon the road to health and longevity, and inevitable prosperity instead of that which now prevails in many quarters of penury, misery and want.

The Elgin Dairy Report says: Persons who are obliged to be out of doors during the intense heat of summer, and desire a nice, cool and strengthening beverage, will find nothing better than fresh buttermilk. It is better than the alcoholic drinks, beer, or cider, and for quenching thirst is preferable to lemonade. It is useful in fevers, and if it were not so cheap, and easily obtainable, would be used more freely than it is. It should not be taken in large quantities, but a little at a time, and that slowly. In every case where the body is heated by over-exertion, or burning with fever, drink little and often. Buttermilk acts freely upon the secretive organs, stimulating the action of the kidneys and liver, and acts as a mild laxative, purifying the blood by removing through the channels named the effete, and unhealthy secretions, and at the same time it is nourishing. When taking any drink to the field during the heat of summer, it should be kept as cool as possible, without the aid of ice, and whether in a can, jug or covered pail should be wrapped with a wet cloth, and kept in the shade. The contents will then always be found several degrees lower than the surrounding atmosphere.

A Natural Dog.

A Detroit man recently received, as a token of esteem from a southern friend, a fine hunting dog. The animal was such a pleasant, neighborly sort of a brute, that his new owner got on terms with him right away, and made a companion of him. One day during the last hot spell he took him for the first time to his office with him. Along in the afternoon the clerk came back into the private office with a rush.

"Come out here; come quick!" he gasped.

"What's the matter?" exclaimed the boss, jumping up.

"Your dog's mad."

"How do you know he is? Where is he?"

"His tongue is hanging out; he's panting dreadfully, and he won't touch water."

The gentleman immediately sat down.

"Go back to your work, you blamed jack," he said quietly; "didn't I tell you that dog came from Kentucky?"

Gave Them a High Fall.

A well-known Philadelphian, who in his youth was given a little to sport, has a particularly fine boy who is very spirited. At school he suffered very much up to a few months ago from bigger boys who abused and "pounded" him. Enjoining the lad to the strictest secrecy, the father employed a retired pugilist, a little bit of a fellow, and had him give the boy lessons several times a week in boxing. At odd moments he practiced with the boy himself. Finally the lad, with that assurance and sense of prowess which comes under such circumstances, wanted to be let loose, but the father held him back until he felt perfectly satisfied. Not long ago, just as the school was about to close he told his son to go ahead. An opportunity soon presented itself and it would be hard to describe the sensation that followed, when the young whipper-snapper who had been taking thumps for a year or two sailed in and laid out completely two of the biggest bullies and braggarts in the school.—Philadelphia Times.

Baby's Sitting Posture.

Careful mothers give much attention to the first sitting posture of a child in the baby carriage, where the continued motion may exert a wrong influence on curving the spine, says the Philadelphia Ledger. Miss Lindley, a physical culturist, observes that "careful thought should be given to the chair that succeeds the high chair at the table. This must have the seat of a length to correspond to the child's thigh from the back to the bent knee. Then the leverage of the spine in supporting the body in its correct sitting posture is brought from the extreme lower end, instead of at the waist, as is the case when the chair is too deep for the length of the child's thigh. The back of the chair should be straight instead of hollow.

Almost a Perfect Climate.

The climate of the Sierra, although not so very pleasant on account of the winds, is extremely salubrious, the heat never becoming enervating, as it does not exceed ninety degrees F., while the nights are deliciously cool. Lung diseases are unknown, and the sanitary condition of the Sierra may perhaps be inferred from the reply of an old American doctor, who lives in the now almost abandoned mining place, Guadalupe-y-Calvo. When I asked him to give his experience as to the health of the people, he said: "Well, here in the mountains, it is distressingly healthy, despite a complete defiance of every hygienic arrangement. With the graveyard, a tannery, and the sewer at the river's edge no diseases originate here.—Scribner's.

Built a Monument to His Recovery.

A tiny nubble visible on a bare rocky dome to the north represents an extraordinary proceeding on the part of a Massachusetts man, who came into the neighborhood of the mountain two years ago next summer and stopped at a farmhouse for the benefit of his health. He climbed the mountain daily for a couple of months and on the top indulged in the pastime of piling up a monument of loose rocks. It is ten feet high and some of the rocks are so large that he must have used skids and pries and labored with the energy of enthusiasm or despair. At all events, he built the monument, and it stands there now intact, and he went back to Massachusetts in better health than when he came.

When No Man Pursueth.

A few days ago, while a gentleman was buying stamps in the postoffice, some one took his umbrella, as he believes by mistake, and the loser put this card in the morning paper: "The kind friend who carried off my umbrella at the postoffice yesterday will bear in mind that the Gates of Heaven are only twenty-four inches wide. My umbrella measures twenty-eight. At the other place we won't need it. Didn't Dives pray for just one drop of water. He had better return it to No. 208 Chamber of Commerce, and no questions will be asked. A few days later a boy brought in an umbrella, but, alas! not the advertiser's. He had caught the wrong man's conscience.—Boston Transcript.

Oh, What a Surprise!

What an agreeable one, too, is experienced by the hitherto misguided individual who has been ceaselessly but vainly dosing for years past in the futile hope for curing constipation, when drastic pills and potions are abandoned for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a faithful auxiliary of nature, which does its work without griping or weakening, but always effectually. "Throw physic to the dogs!" and use this benign and thorough laxative, which achieves results which astonish as well as gratify those who use it. Not only a regular habit of body, but complete digestion and assimilation are restored by its use. It regulates the liver and kidneys, and counteracts a tendency to rheumatism. In no case where it is possible to procure it should its use be delayed. Fortify with it against malaria.

Marble Railroad Bridges.

"The only railroad in the world with marble bridges is the Marietta and South Georgia," said E. L. Turner. "The road passes through the best of the marble fields, and was built before there was any market for Georgia marble, which now ranks the world for furniture and building work. It was natural, therefore, that this stone should be taken for constructing piers, and they stand to-day built of the finest quality of marble, some of them most beautifully variegated. I have ridden over them many times between Blue Ridge and Murphy, and I never pass over the road without going upon the platform and looking at the bridges."

Broke His Leg Trying to Hang Himself.

Reinhardt Spittel, aged 40 years, was taken to the Maryland General Hospital the other night suffering with a broken leg. It was stated he attempted to hang himself at his home, 519 Kirby lane, by placing a noose around his neck and jumping from a second story window, after tying the other end of the noose to the bedstead. The noose slipped over his head and he fell to the front steps, breaking his leg. Baltimore Sun.

Reduction in Rates to Michigan Points.

The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad have arranged to make special low excursion rates to Michigan points; tickets to be sold for all trains of Tuesday, August 14th, good returning any time within twenty days. These tickets will be first class, good on any train of the date named, and will be sold at half rates for the round trip, the object of this being to accommodate those whose vacations do not extend longer than two or three weeks, and at the same time familiarize the public with the beauties and health-giving qualities of the Michigan resorts. This is an opportunity which cannot be ignored by invalids, or by tourists who are fond of fishing, hunting, boating or any of the numerous pleasures of outdoor life.

For full information, tickets, etc., call on any C. H. & D. R. R. ticket agent, or address D. G. Edwards, General Passenger Agent, Carew Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

A Beak.

A "beag" was originally the golden chain worn round the neck of a civic magistrate, and this naturally attracted the attention of the public, who called the man first a "beag" and then a "beak." Gradually the word grew vulgar and got enrolled among the slang terms of the million.

Winter Rye, 80 Bushels Per Acre.

This yield seems enormous, but a good number of farmers believe they can obtain it by sowing the new monster rye. Its hardy, prolific, laughing at all kinds of weather! It simply yields big crops every year, regardless of storms, droughts or the like. The World's Fair winter wheat is just like it for yields. The John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., will send you their catalogue and samples of above rye and wheat, upon receipt of 4 cents postage. C N U

SPEND YOUR OUTING ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Visit picturesque Mackinac Island. It will only cost you about $12.50 from Detroit; $15 from Toledo; $18 from Cleveland, for the round trip, including meals and berths. Avoid the heat and dust by traveling on the D. & C. floating palaces. The attractions of a trip to the Mackinac region are unsurpassed. The island itself is a grand romantic spot, its climate most invigorating. Two new steel passenger steamers have just been built for the upper lake route, costing $300,000 each. They are equipped with every modern convenience, annunciators, bathrooms, etc., illuminated throughout by electricity, and are guaranteed to be the grandest, largest and safest steamers on fresh water. These steamers favorably compare with the great ocean liners in construction and speed. Four trips per week between Toledo, Detroit, Alpena, Mackinac, St. Ignace, Petoskey, Chicago, "Soo," Marquette and Duluth. Daily between Cleveland and Detroit. Daily between Cleveland and Put-in-Bay. The cabins, parlors and staterooms of these steamers are designed for the complete entertainment of humanity under home conditions; the palatial equipment, the luxury of the appointments, makes traveling on these steamers thoroughly enjoyable. Send for illustrated descriptive pamphlet. Address A. A. SCHANTZ, G. P. & T. A., D. & C. Detroit, Mich.

ALL THE YEAR ROUND, just as thoroughly and as certainly at one time as another, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood. You don't need it at any special season. But when any eruption appears, or you feel weariness and depression that's a sign of impure blood, then you need this medicine, and nothing else. The ordinary "Spring medicines" and blood-purifiers can't compare with it.

The "Discovery" promotes every bodily function, puts on sound, healthy flesh, and cleanses, repairs and invigorates your whole system. In the most stubborn Skin Diseases, in every form of Scrofula—even in Consumption (or Lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages—and in every blood-taint and disorder, it is the only guaranteed remedy.

PIERCE Guarantees a CURE OR MONEY RETURNED.

Harvest Time,

With its long hours and hard labor, reduces the human system to a very weak and debilitated condition, thus opening the door to fever and other distressing diseases. Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier gives strength and vigor to the exhausted system and restores the failing health. If used after a "sick spell," it will enable the patient to retain strength and hasten recovery, and also guard against after effects. $1.00 per bottle. Sold by all druggists.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

CLIP SAVE AND SEND TO US

Do we not present a smiling countenance? Why should we not? It is true we have been overworked and even with our greatly increased facilities, have had to work nights, to supply the demands made upon us for Aermotors, tanks and towers. This ever increasing, never ceasing demand for our goods, even in times of great business depression, makes us tired, but happy, as witness the smiling countenance in our glittering Aermotor. While others cannot get work to do, we are overwhelmed with it. Why? Because we make the best thing that can be made, at the lowest price that ever was made, and material that is made, and back it all by the best reputation ever made for knowing what to do, how to do it and invariably accomplishing the result. All the world knows that the Aermotor Co. alone knows how to make Wind-mills, steel towers and tanks. Orders for them pour in we on from every nook and corner of the earth. A business depression in any one locality is not felt by us. The world is our field. In it, therefore, we are busy and are any output, even in these days of depression? Everyone on the Aermotor premises, from the owners, down to the smiling countenance, happy-hearted boy in the office who ties the designers, makers, managers and sellers of Aermotors. Even the purchasers of Aermotors are the wide-awake, intelligent, up-to-the-times cash buyers in any community. Aermotor people have no forebodings of disaster and hard times. Aermotor employes never strike. They are prosperous and contented. Even in the civil commotion and great upheaval recently raging in Chicago, the Aermotor people were at work, radiant with smiles and good cheer, and ready to help bring and welcome back the general prosperity, which must, as sure, inevitably return to our land.

A NARROW ESCAPE!

How it Happened.

The following remarkable event in a lady's life will interest the reader: "For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought every minute would be my last. There was a feeling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I couldn't sweep a room without sitting down and resting; but, thank God, by the help of New Heart Cure all this is past and I feel like another woman. Before using the New Heart Cure I had taken different so-called remedies and been treated by doctors without any benefit until I was both discouraged and disgusted. My husband bought me a bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and am happy to say I never regretted it, as I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. I weighed 125 pounds when I began taking the remedy, and now I weigh 130½. Its effect in my case has been truly marvelous. It far surpasses any other medicine I have ever taken or any benefit I ever received from physicians."—Mrs. Harry Starr, Pottsville, Pa., October 12, 1892.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. This great discovery by an eminent specialist in heart disease, contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

Diamonds and Diamond Cutting.

BY H. CUTTING BOUVER.

Home and Country (New York) for August.

* * * * *

The ruby mirrors the flame of fire, the sapphire reflects the blue of the heavens, the emerald pictures the depth of the sea, but the diamond is a dewdrop laden with sunbeams, the most poetic creation of an organic nature. Every moment it flashes a new color—now blue, now red, now royal purple, now golden yellow.

In the rough—that is, just as the stone has been washed out of the clay, and broken loose from the ore—a diamond presents the appearance of a crystal pebble, somewhat pointed at each end. It usually appears to be of a brownish hue, but now and again a ray of light will seem to leap from the very heart of the stone. From this rough form of the gem the diamond cutter decides what the shape of the finished jewel is to be. The crystalline shape of the diamond is that of an octahedron, although the stone is found sometimes as a rhombic dodecahedron, triakisoctahedron, or hexakisoctahedron, but it is always in accordance with the cubic system. It should be the aim of the diamond cutter to preserve this octahedral character of the gem. To accomplish this, the rough stone is first split, or chipped. The operation is a most difficult one, requiring an insight into the character of each individual stone. There are hardly two gems that can be treated in a precisely similar manner. Every diamond has a thorough individuality, and must be treated accordingly, in order to obtain the best results. The "splitting" is accomplished by fixing the gem in a block of cement, after which the angles must be split off, in accordance with the direction of the crystallization. Flaws are also taken out in this operation, and the diamond given its future shape.

The majority of diamonds are found in the East Indies, on the plateau of Dekhan, in Brazil, on the islands of Borneo and Sumatra; also in the Ural, and Australia. Within recent years very productive diamond mines have been put in operation in southeastern Africa, the Transvaal.

The diamonds most highly prized are the Indian and Brazilian stones; they are generally of the purest white, the most complete transparency "water," and the most brilliant "fire."

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phœbe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption, and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her, and she says it saved her life. Mr Thomas Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption. He tried without result, everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medecine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. Regular size 50c. and $1. 5

A Bright Magazine.

"Table Talk," one of the most unique household magazines in the present world of journalism, and the American authority on culinary topics, is, in its August issue, particularly attractive, containing many bright and readable articles on topics of seasonable interest to housekeepers. Besides the regular Housekeeper's Inquiry Department, by Miss Helen Louise Johnson are Menus for the month. The fertility of Mrs. M. C. Myers' mind is shown in her writings, which, as well as Miss Forney's, on Fashions, have an entertaining air that lead one to forget they are treating every day topics. An excellent article on Domestic Service by Eliza A. Turner, and one on "Milk Diet," by Elizabeth Grinnell, also appear. All this you find published in Philadelphia at $1.00 per year. Our readers are at liberty to send for a sample copy, without cost.

The Hub's Boy's Head-to-Foot Outfit

For several months past our readers have seen the advertisement in our columns of "Boys Head-to-Foot Outfit. $5.00." It includes a suit of all wool clothes, Stanley Cap to match the suit, and a pair of stout and shapely shoes. It is sent on receipt of price, or, if the buyer wants to examine the goods before paying for them he sends $1.00 and the outfit is then sent by express with privilege of examination, then if satisfactory the purchaser pays the other $4.00. If not he announces that he does not want the goods and they are sent back to the express company and the Hub sends the dollar back. Nothing could be fairer than this, and the offer comes from one of the biggest houses in the United States.

Prejudice Kills Them.

There are a few people everywhere who allow prejudice to kill them, and are not satisfied with confining that prejudice to themselves, but are often instrumental in keeping others from getting well. If you are seeking relief you should not listen to skeptical friends and jealous physicians, as you owe your health to your family, not to those who would not give you financial assistance. If you have tried everybody, it won't hurt you to go and see Dr. Fruth, Thursday, Sept. 6, at the Swineford House. 32 33

Best for Flux.

Mr. Thomas Eate, editor of the Graphic, Texarkana, Arkansas, has found what he believes to be the best remedy in existence for the flux. His experience is well worth remembering. He says: "Last summer I had a very severe attack of flux. I tried almost every known remedy, none giving relief. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was recommended to me. I purchased a bottle and received almost immediate relief. I continued to use the medicine and was entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending this remedy to any person suffering with such a disease, as in my opinion it is the best medicine in existence." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

The Korean Trouble.

From Harper's Weekly.

The exact nature or origin of the quarrel of Japan and China over Korea is not easy to define. China possesses a vague right of suzerainty in Korea, which has been acknowledged by the payment of tribute, but China has never exercised any open control there. Both China and Japan have trade relations with Korea and subjects living within its borders, of whom the Japanese seem to be the more numerous, active and wealthy. Both governments claim, by treaty with each other and with Korea the right to land troops to preserve order and protect the interests of their own people. It is now alleged by Japan that her subjects in Korea have been wronged, and are actually exposed to violence and maltreatment. It is also claimed by Japan that China was asked to join in sending troops to Korea to protect the treaty rights of the Japanese traders and residents and of her own, and not only refused, but protested against independet action by Japan. It is further claimed that an insurgent leader of Korea, having taken refuge in Japan, was decoyed by Chinese agents to Chinese territory, and there betrayed to the Korean government and slain—an act which Japan counts not only a violation of good faith, but a willful affront on the part of both the Chinese and Korean governments. In these claims there is nothing that could not be settled peaceably if all parties desired peace. Apparently none of them desires peace. China is friendly to the actual Korean government, because it is largely under her influence. Japan is friendly to the opposition faction in Korea, because it desires at least the influence which China possesses in Korea, and probably much greater. The Korean government, in peril from discontent and insurrection, is not averse to a foreign war in which it will have so powerful an ally as China. War of some extent seems now inevitable. The Koreans, it is said, with the support of the Chinese, have begun efforts to drive out the Japanese, and the latter are pushing forward reenforcements for the troop already in Korea.

Cured the Children.

The success of Mrs. Annie M. Beam, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, in the treatment of Diarrhœa in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many mothers. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnstown, Pa., after the great flood, on account of my husband being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the diarrhœa very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarhœa Remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I knew of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be excelled and cheerfully recommend it." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

BOWS.

Here's the Idea:

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendent (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendent, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

To be sure of getting a Non-pull-out, see that the case is stamped with this trade mark. It cannot be had with any other kind.

CHIEF GODFROY DEAD.

AN HISTORIC FIGURE PASSES AWAY.

He Was the Last Chief of the Once Powerful and Warlike Miamis. Details of his Life.

Fort Wayne Journal.

Saturday morning at 4 o'clock death closed the long life of an historic figure. At the ripe age of eighty-four years Chief James B. Godfroy, of the surviving remnant of the once powerful and warlike Miamis, succumbed to the encroachment of infirmities and disease. For two years or more the venerable chief had been in poor health and rheumatic heart trouble finally caused his death.

The deceased was a son of Francis Godfroy, or Godefroi, which is the old French form of the name. Francis was a war chief of the Miamis, of great power and influence succeeding the famous Little Turtle in 1812. His father was a Frenchman who took to wife a Miami maiden. Francis married Soc-a-jag-wa, a Miami girl, and they made their home near the site of the present town of Peru, where their son, James B. Godfroy, the subject of this sketch, was born in July, 1810.

James Godfroy came to Fort Wayne in 1844, and was married to Montosoqua, daughter of La Blonde, the daughter of the famous civil chief of the Miamis, John Baptiste Richardville. She was born near Fort Wayne in 1835, and died in March, 1885. They had twelve children—James, now deceased, Mary, now deceased, Louisa, wife of George Neid, residing on the reserve; John, who is living with four children on the reserve; Annie, wife of Wm. Strack; George L., and six children who died in childhood.

Ever since 1844 Chief Godfroy has lived on the 1,900-acre reservation four miles west of the city, on St. Mary's river. By the treaty of St. Marys, made in 1818 with Chief Richardville, a reserve of three sections of land was made to him, principally located some four or five miles from the city up the St. Mary's river, which since his death, has been in the hands and keeping of his descendant's. After the death of Chief Richardville's daughter, LaBlonde, it then descended to her oldest daughter, who became the wife of James Godfroy in 1844. Since his demise the reservation has been controlled by Chief Godfroy, whose death occurred yesterday morning.

Chief Godfroy had never identified himself with the activities of the civilization whose aggressive encroachments achieved a conquest of the empires of the forest and his people to the westward. His sentiments and passions, his hopes and predictions were of the past and inseparably linked him to an era which had gone. While this was true, with a philosophy rare among his race, he submitted to the inevitable, and after coming to Fort Wayne his relations and the relations of the survivors of his people with the white settlers were cordial and pacific.

With vast opportunities at his hand for the accumulation of wealth, Chief Godfroy's acquisitions were moderate and he died without having amassed a fortune.

Since the death of his wife he has made his home with his sons John and George Godfroy. The latter son is the most prominent member of the Miami tribe in Indiana. He is a noted secret society man, and is the highest in Masonry of any Indian in Indiana and in the world.

For two years past Chief Godfroy's health had been failing. Since 1891 he has been almost wholly without the power of sight and his hearing became within the last year and a half grieviously affected. For a year past he has spent his days indoors under the nursing his children and grandchildren who greatly respected the old chief in his declining years.

Rock Emery Millstones.

Important advantages are claimed for the rock emery millstones—the hardest of all stones except the diamond—by which is accomplished the pulverization cheaply of many hard substances that have heretofore been reduced only at much expense of wear and tear and by slow and tedious processes. Rock emery millstones possess the advantage, it is asserted, of reducing at once, the hardest rocks, as well as softer substances, grinding all to any degree of fineness. Heat does emery no harm, and one of the remarkable properties mentioned of these stones is their ability to run cool. They also form the most rapid grinder known, besides being as much more durable than other millstones as they exceed them in hardness, and the face of an emery millstone is never dressed. Again, they are made to take the place of all other millstones without any changes in the mill, and it is stated that wherever other millstones are used, millstones of this description will do better work at less cost and last much longer.

We have seen a number of watch chains ornamented with a pretty charm in the shape of a watch case opener, which obviates the use of a knife or fingernail to open the watch. They are sent free on request by the Keystone Watch Case Company, of Philadelphia, Pa. Your jeweler here may have one for you; if not, send to Philadephia.

The Keystone Watch Case Company is the largest concern of its kind in the world. Its capacity is 2500 watch cases per day. It manufactures every description of case, but its great specialty is that most popular of all watch cases, the Jas. Boss gold filled. These are equal in beauty and wear to solid gold—while they cost only about one half as much. Boss and other Keystone cases are the only cases that have the famous Non pull-out bow or ring, which saves the watch from theft and accident. The Keystone Company does not retail, but our local jewelers handle the cases and swear by the thief proof qualities of the ring.

How to Find Due South.

Due south can be readily ascertained if one possesses a fairly correct watch and the position of the sun is distinguishable. Point the hour hand to the sun and the south is exactly half way between the hour and the figure XII on the watch dial. For instance, suppose that it is 4 o'clock. Point the hand indicating 4 to the sun, and 2 on the watch is exactly south. Suppose that it is 8 o'clock. Point to the sun the hand indicating 8, and the figure X on the watch is due south.

Give the Veterans a Chance.

Bro. Campbell of the Dispatch gave the old soldiers a sort of stab last week by saying many of them received more as pension money than a laborer could earn. Now, if a wicked democrat—the COURIER fellow, for instance—had said that, it would have caused a bitter complaint from all republican editors hereabout, including, no doubt, the Dispatch itself. But it is a simon pure republican article and it is our turn to have fun. No one can ever claim that the COURIER has said such a thing, however. There may be a small percentage of pensioners who get more than they should, and some who spend it improperly, but in no greater proportion than in other classes of people about whom no unkind remarks are made. All in all, the veterans get no more than they have earned and the most of them just now cannot earn much by their own labor. The money they receive is about the only part of the federal taxes we pay that ever comes back among the people for general use. All else goes to support expenses at distant points. But each payday brings into DeKalb county a large sum of money that all goes into circulation in a few days. So, from a merely mercenary standpoint, Indiana has no cause to complain, for she gets more than she pays out. And from a patriotic standpoint: Indiana was not niggardly in the number and quality of her soldiers. There is no reason why her pensions should be.

Richland S. S. Picnic.

The annual picnic of the Richand S. S. will be held two miles west of the Center, on August 18. Good singing; speaking by ministers and others. Good program. Good time, music by the Sedan orchestra. All come.

THE WHEEL OF THE FUTURE.

THE WHEEL THAT IS AND IS TO BE.

The League Wheel "Chainless."

People who ride the Chainless and know it to be far superior to the Chain and Sprocket Wheel, LAUGH AT THE IDEA of a person buying anything short of a League Chainless. One can no longer expect to be strictly up to and ahead of date who does not ride this machine. This voices the sentiment of thousands of old chain wheel riders, who will have nothing but the best thing going.

Defiance and its Centennial.

In company with T. C. Fralich and Clark Brown, we left Butler on the morning of August 8, on wheels, at 3:30 o'clock. Darkness spread her mantle moderately over everything. We groped our way over all manner of rough places with a speed that carried us over hill, valley, bridge and culvert, with many a perceptible bump, as we sped through dividing darkness. A few small mishaps caused us some delay, but we passed sleeping Newville at 4:10. Not even a dog was visible in this little rural hamlet. We crossed the St. Joe without observing the significant warning "$5 fine for crossing this bridge at a greater speed than a walk." The roads now improving slightly, our speed increased and one hour and fifteen minutes marked our time from Butler to Hicksville, a distance of twelve miles. We stopped here about fifteen minutes to sample their hydrant water and adjust parts of our wheels. Again in single file we pulled eastward and for a few miles a good road assured us with hopes of an easy passage over the 21 miles of road that intervene between Hicksville and Defiance. Our hopes were soon rudely dispelled by a long stretch of road that was very difficult to ride over at all, caused by a high ridge in the center and deep worn ruts on each side filled with about four inches of soft dust. A rapid motion on this narrow center, about one foot wide, was the only way to make progress, and one after another of us were repeatedly unseated. The writer being a little better equipped, would sometimes be clear out of sight of his comrades. We reached Mark Center slightly behind time, but a better road here enabled us to make up for lost time. We sped forward here for a number of miles at about a four minute pace, passing teams by the score in dust so thick as to nearly suffocate us. We were here overtaken by a Mr. Sheppard and a friend of his from Hicksville, on their way to Cleveland. We reached Defiance about 6:45, making the thirty-five miles in three hours running time, just a little tired. A good, warm breakfast and a bath did wonders in restoring us to our normal condition. We found the city full to overflowing. Sought the old fort and enjoyed an hour of rest under its shade trees. The fort is situated at the confluence of the Maumee and Auglaize rivers, and was built on this point of land for strategic purposes, as the savages could only approach the fort from one direction, the two rivers forming natural defenses on two sides. The fort has been faithfully reproduced, and looks quite war-like, with its loop-holes and other arrangements for defense. The remains of the old earthworks is yet visible, though one hundred years have passed since its erection and occupancy. While I am engaged in writing this article my two companions lie stretched out in the cool shade on the river bank, fast asleep. The Maumee being slack water here, is about two hundred yards wide and deep enough for small steamboats to ply upon it. We enjoyed one of these rides of about four miles, which was most delightful. The attractions for the day were meager—a civic parade, a speech by Gov. McKinley and a few minor affairs made up the day. Fralick concluded to take the cars home, and Brown and myself pulled out of the old town at 3 p. m., taking the Bryan road. A strong west wind faced us all afternoon, and made our ride more laborious. Brown's wheel gave out and caused a delay of nearly an hour. We reached Georgetown about 5 p. m. From this point our route lay directly west through a veritable farmers' paradise. We reached Hennie's Bridge at sunset and Butler at dusk, considerably tired, owing to the strong wind that faced us all the way. Yet we made the 75 miles in about seven hours of running time.

Clean up the City.

Dr. Swarts, secretary of the city board of health, is after the people who do not keep things neat and clean. The Doctor is right. It is the duty of every citizen to see to this, and be as the health officer is required by law to compel them to do it, if they do not do so voluntarily. There are some bad smelling places in Auburn, such as privies, stables, and the like, and now and then an alley kept in a slovenly manner. If anyone does not know how to cleanse or purify any of these places, ask the Doctor. He stands ready to give all information. Then when we have got all else in healthy shape, let us out the weeds.

AUBURN'S MILITARY KIDS.

The South End Boasts Two Companies, Both "Armed and Equipped, According to Law," as the Statoot Says.

OW what are ye doin' my bonny braw lads?
Now where are ye goin' my laddies?
Oh, we're goin' for sojers wi' bugle an' gun,
To camp out an' fight like our daddies.

For the boys in the south part of Auburn had caught the military spirit not only from their "daddies," but from the recent parades and real service of the Auburn Rifles. How natural all this is! And how very proper it is that "boys should be boys," so long as their sports are innocent and their warfare is only a mimic. Imbued with this spirit of boyish adventure and boyish imitation, the lads organized a company with Hubert Hartman for captain. Or rather, it may be that Master Hubert himself organized the company with Master Hubert duly provided for as captain. Be that as it may, he is the captain. His father's sword, once used in his service as captain in the 100th Indiana in the rebellion, was adopted by him, and he managed to get an old revolver which his father and brother made certain was perfectly harmless. He also managed to get a horn. What more did he need to make him happy? What more could any boy want? He was ready to organize an army of any size. So he formed Company A, First Regt. Auburn Kid Militia. Then he drilled them. They armed themselves. Their guns were lath and similar inspiriting and deadly weapons. Soon, they became quite proficient in some of the simpler movements, especially the "charge" and "retreat," which are always so attractive to boys of that age. The military spirit took root and grew, and soon another lad, Purl Click, organized a company, and on Thursday of last week both bodies encamped on the low grounds in that part of town, cooked their own grub, threw out their picket lines, had a sham fight, hurt a number of the privates, and got themselves dirty, mussed up and tired long before supper time. They insist they had a good time, although one private had his head badly banged with a wooden musket, and Jay Nusbaum, who was surgeon by virtue of his father's being one, had to take charge of the wounded hero, and proceeded to dope him up in the most approved military field hospital manner. And still the cruel war goes on, and we wait a little for a second chapter.

That Picnic at Grove Bethel

Was a big success in every way. There were 11 schools present besides the home school. The first school on the ground was Union Chapel, with 60 in line. Then came Rehoboth with 55; Auburn Presbyterian, number unknown; Auburn Church of God, 40; Auburn Baptist, 66; Concord, 45; Hopewell, 75; Lockwood's, 52; Fairview, 30; Norris Chapel, 77; Spencerville M. E. School, 56. The Sheets Band had been engaged for the occasion, but for some reason they were late, and when the schools began to come in there was no music to escort them to the grounds. Things began to look discouraging, and many a face wore a frown, when the welcome sound of the fife and drum announced the approach of the Hopewell school. They had brought the drum corps from No. 9, and it is needless to say, they were made to feel that their assistance was indispensable, and they went at it in the same spirited and business like way that has always characterized them. Norris Chapel also brought the Union Cornet Band. About 11 o'clock the exercises at the stage began. There were some singing and speaking, after which we all proceeded to enjoy one of the leading features of any picnic—the dinner. And wasn't that a scrumptious dinner? No end of chicken, pie and cake and everything good. After the dinner and a short rest the assembly was again called to order. There were songs by the several schools, addresses by the different ministers, recitations and music. At about 3:30 the meeting was dismissed, and the crowd began to disperse, and within an hour the grove was well nigh empty. The rain that day caused some uneasiness but did not spoil a good time. There was a festival in the evening which was largely attended. And all in all we think Grove Bethel did herself much credit.

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children." DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves." DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it." UNITED HOSPITAL AND DISPENSARY, Boston, Mass. ALLEN C. SMITH, Pres.,

The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

AROUND THE WORLD.

INTELLIGENCE FROM ALL PARTS OF THE GLOBE.

The Senate Tariff Bill Passed by the House—Two Engines Came Together at Buffalo with Fatal Result—End of the Relay Bicycle Race — Twenty People Drowned.

Big Race Meeting at Fort Wayne.

Entries to the Fort Wayne races are closed, with the biggest list of entries ever received. Among the prominent stables entered are C. J. Hamlin, Bud Doble, M. E. McHenry, Monroe Saulsbury, George Starr, Henry C. Jewett, Cecil Bros., and others equally famous. Alix, 2:07¾; Robert J., 2:05¼; and Ryland T., 2:07¾, will be among the starters.

RELAY RACE.

The Great Bicycle Race from Washington to Denver Ended.

Denver (Col.) special: The most remarkable performance in the Washington-Denver relay bicycle race, which ended at 10:37 Sunday night, thirty-seven hours and twenty-three minutes ahead of schedule time, was the ride of George L. McCarthy, the relay from Sand Creek to Denver. He rode five and three-fourth miles, crossing numerous railroad tracks, in the dark, in fourteen minutes. Thirty thousand people watched the finish, and on Sixteenth street only a narrow lane was left for McCarthy to pass through to the Court House, where Governor Waite and Gen. McCook were waiting. When withing ten feet of his goal, McCarty ran plump into two women who got in his path and was thrown from his wheel, but he tossed the mail pouch to Lieut. Hilton, of the cycle corps, by whom it was handed to A. D. Black, manager of the race. Governor Waite and Gen. McCook congratulated Manager Black, Mr. McCarthy, and the other wheelmen on their wonderful feat.

The time of the relay race would have been reduced at least five hours more had not the Omaha riders, who carried the message from Ogallala to Julesburg, been delayed by a wind and sand storm. The Denver wheelmen made the run from Greely to Denver, 58 miles, in 3 hours and 21 minutes.

Collision in a Fog.

At Buffalo, N. Y., two engines backing in a fog came together, with the result that one man was fatally hurt and three others were seriously injured. The accident took place near the city limits. A Lehigh freight and a Buffalo Creek switch engine were wrecked. Tony Crankoski, whose injuries are probably fatal, and Anthony Serroski, whose leg is crushed below the knee, were tramps stealing a ride on the freight tank. Nick Faist, fireman, had an arm and four ribs broken, and Engineer George Pitts suffered an injury of the back.

Corbett and Jackson.

After two years of long distance fighting through the public prints, James J. Corbett and Peter Jackson came together in New York City and nearly settled their respective claims to superiority on the spot. While an actual encounter was averted the champion and the negro had a wordy battle of the fiercest kind, and when the smoke of the battle cleared away the principals had settled one thing—that there is extreme improbability of a match being pulled off in the future.

Horses Killed by Eating Wheat.

George Gingery, living south of Pana, Ill., thrashed his wheat, and leaving the new grain in a large bin in his stable, ten of his finest horses, valued at $1,500, reached the bin by jumping over a high fence. They ate a large quantity of the new wheat not yet out of the sweat and drank water, causing their death within twenty-four hours.

A Dismissed Jailor's Revenge.

At Leavenworth, Kansas, actuated by spite, Jailor Jerry Murphy, who was dismissed because of drunkenness, but who still retained skeleton keys to the prison, returned to the jail, and while Guard Sullivan was asleep, opened the doors and liberated all the prisoners. Only five fugitives were recaptured. Murphy was arrested.

Death of a Wealthy Widow.

Mrs. Mary J. Shirk, widow of I. J. Shirk, the millionaire banker of Indiana, died of a complication of diseases in Peru, aged 58 years. She was one of the wealthiest women in the Western States, her fortune being estimated at from four to six millions in bank stock, Chicago realty and land.

Steam Purifier Explodes.

A steam purifier at the Louisville, Ky., Electric Light Company's power house at Fourteenth and Magazine streets, exploded, killing Edward Land and dangerously injuring Adolph Schwartz. Charles Wilson, colored, was blown through a hole in the roof and slightly injured.

Boys Drowned While Bathing.

Three boys, Frank Burns, William Slattery, and Matthew Slattery, aged 10 to 13 years, were drowned while swimming in Bloody run, near Norwood, Ohio.

The Tariff Bill Passed.

The House, Monday, passed the Senate Tariff bill, and immediately passed separate bills placing coal, iron ore, barbed wire, and sugar on the free list.

Put Gasoline on the Stove.

Mrs. Frank Sandahl, of Rockford, Ill., placed a bowl of gasoline on the stove and a frightful explosion followed. Her clothes took fire and burned from her body. She lingered a few hours in terrible agony and died.

Twenty People Drowned.

During the progress of the regatta at Teney, Wales, a small excursion steamer capsized in the Caldy Roads, drowning twenty people.

Becoming Friendly.

Washington special: The official advice from London to the effect that Great Britain is co-operating with the United States in Bluefields, Nicaragua, is in line with the statements heretofore made by Associated Press dispatches from Washington, and is fully confirmed by the State Department. At the time of the first outbreak at Bluefields, when British marines landed on the bluff, the British government assured Mr. Bayard, our Ambassador at London, that their only purpose was to protect the lives and property of British and other foreign citizens, and not to occupy the country by advantage of the protectorate clause of the treaty of Madaga. Since then the two nations have been working harmoniously, animated by a desire to see some kind of stable and sufficient government established over the reservation and even in this, Great Britain allowed the United States to take the initiative.

THE TIDE TURNS.

The Ebb Is Passed, Steady Improvement Has Begun in the Commercial World.

Bradstreet's State of Trade says: Evidence continues to accumulate that the earlier portion of July witnessed the lowest point in the ebb of the commercial tide. The cessation of industrial disturbances emphasized the tendency to the improvement reported by telegraph from leading manufacturing and commercial centers this week. Further indication of a tendency to the improvement is seen in the week's advance of 50 cents per ton for steel billets, and in the fact that domestic wool markets to-day are more in favor of the seller than they have been for a year, and that wool is firm at the 2 cent advance scored in the last few weeks. A panic of unreasoning speculative interest in Indian corn put up the price nearly 8 cents a bushel this week, about 25 cents above the low water mark for the year. Bradstreet's telegrams from the great corn growing States are at variance with the more sensational dispatches of damage to crops and indicate that most of the extreme bull views are exaggerated, an increased corn acreage south and west pointing to a probable crop as large as in either of the two preceding years in each of which out turn was not more than 6 per cent. below the average for nine years past.

CROP REPORTS.

Great Decline in Corn Prospects.

The average report of statistics in the departments of agriculture shows a decline in corn of nearly twenty-six points since July 1, the average for entire breadth being 69.1 against 95 July last year. The condition August, 1893, was 87. This great decline is due almost wholly to drouth, and hot, dry winds over Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, and parts of other Western States. In some localities the crop is injured beyond recovery, and in others a good rain would go far toward assuring fair yields. Average in the principal States: Ohio, 70; Indiana, 88; Illinois, 75; Iowa, 55; Missouri, 82; Kansas, 45; Nebraska, 33; South Dakota, 29. The condition of spring wheat has fallen since last report 4 points. Condition by States: Wisconsin, 79; Minnesota, 76; Iowa, 82; Kansas, 30; Nebraska, 41; South Dakota, 28; North Dakota 75, Washington 83, Oregon 95. Advices as to winter wheat indicate a good yield of excellent quality. The condition of oats declined 4 points being 76.5 against 77.7 in July. Condition for August 1893 was 78.3. Barley is 79.8, against 76.8. Potatoes 74.0, against 92.3. Tobacco 79, against 81.

SMALLPOX RIOT.

Police Attempt to Prevent a Mass Meeting.

Milwaukee special: One hundred police officers under command of Chief of Police Janssen, who had been sent to the public square on the corner of Eighth avenue and Milwaukee street to prevent a mass meeting of citizens protesting against the placing of smallpox patients in the isolation hospital, located in that vicinity, were attacked by a mob of 4,000 men with stones, bricks, and clubs, and the result is a list of twenty-five wounded officers and citizens and eleven arrests. The wounded police officers are: Albert Niedner, Herman Jones, Gerhard Green, H. O. Andrews, and J. A. Wagner.

It was impossible to ascertain the names of most of the injured citizens because they fear arrest. None of them would speak a word, not even their neighbors would divulge names. About thirty others were injured during the fight, but were either immediately carried off by their friends or went home fearing arrest in case it should be known that they were in the mob. Eleven men who were arrested are almost all wounded, but not seriously.

THE GOLD FEVER.

Intense Excitement Over the Discovery of Rich Deposits.

Mosca (Col.) special: Late developements at the new gold camp, fifteen miles east of here, tend rather to increase the intense excitement of the past few days. Over 200 claims have been staked out. A townsite has been chosen nearby, and enterprising merchants are rushing up store buildings and preparing for a booming business. Town lots are claiming attention second only to mining claims. The towns of Mosca and Garrison are nearly depopulated of their able-bodied men, and many coming from towns further away. Old prospectors declared that the gold ore bodies are simply immense, and that there is more gold in Blanca than silver in Creede. A daily stage will be run from Mosca to take the people to and from the new camp.

Pullman Has a Hard Fight on Hand.

The Pullman Palace Car Company's charter is apparently in peril. The Attorney-General of Illinois has filed a petition asking that the charter be declared void on the ground that its provisions had been violated. The petition sets forth that the charter as granted allowed the company to purchase, control, and convey such property as was necessary to the successful prosecution of its business. The corporation has far exceeded its privileges, the document declares, owning a vast amount of real estate in the town of Pullman and vicinity, which is in no wise necessary to the business. The petition declares that the conpany has practically usurped the powers of a municipality, owning numerous business blocks, residences and factory sites, controlling stock in other corporations and furnished power to other manufacturers.

Infamous Scheme to Dispose of Children.

Denver (Col.) special: A paper recently asked: "Why ought not some one investigate the home for children of W. J. Cornell, of Cajon Valley, Sandiego County, Col.?" Acting upon this suggestion, W. H. Thompson, Secretary of the Colerado Humane Society, writing under the name of Harper Thompson, began correspondence with Cornell. After a number of letters had been exchanged, Cornell wrote: "For $10,000 we will take care of your boy and see that he never returns to you again; in short, so hid away that he will be as one who is dead." El Cajon Valley is a small hamlet having only a few stores. There is no institution of any kind located there. "It is a most infamous scheme to get hold of money and in some manner make way with innocent children," said Mr. Thompson.

Jumped the Bridge.

The Oklahoma, Texas and Rock Island east bound express jumped the bridge near Lincoln, Neb. Ten passengers were killed and all the trainmen but the engineer. All the cars are burning. The killed are: Conductor C. D. Standard. Engineer Ike Depew, fireman, unknown; three traveling men, two farmers, unknown. The engineer and fireman are buried under the engine. The others are supposed to be burned in the wreck. The injured are: E. F. Scott, express man; C. D. Sherrer, mail clerk; L. S. Hall of Lincoln, traveling man. About twelve others are injured, but their names are not yet known.

Just for Fun.

Gallipolis (Ohio) special: Several weeks ago white caps made their appearance over the river in Mason County, and strung three negroes up to a tree just to frighten them and thus prevent some of the stealing and shooting that had been going on over there. The other day two little white boys named Hysell, living over there, and a colored boy named Johnson were playing together, and they agreed to play White Caps, the Johnson boy consenting to be hanged. The Hysell boys strung him up with a rope, and couldn't let the little chap down again until the rope was unfastened and their victim was dead.

One Thousand Dollars Reward.

General Superintendent Canniff has arrived at Kendallville, to investigate the particulars of the attempted hold up of No. 12 on the Lake Shore the other night. He was accompanied by prominent railway officials, detectives, etc. After visiting the scene and getting what information he could, he issued notices offering $1,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties who were concerned in the recent attempt. He is determined that the villains shall be apprehended and punished.

Entombed in a Fiery Prison.

Warsaw special: The great coal mines near Dombrowa, Government of Gradno, have been burning for some days. The fire started by an explosion of gas while the full force of men were underground. The main shaft was wrecked, and comparatively few miners have been rescued. The latest report is that several hundred men are entombed in the mines, and that all hope of saving them has been abandoned. The mines are owned by the Franco-Italian Bank.

Frightful Act of a Jealous Man.

In a fit of jealousy "Wid" Jenkins, Burlington baggagemaster at Chariton, Iowa, shot Mrs. Eliza Murphy, his landlady and her two daughters, and then suicided. He was enamored of Julia, the younger daughter, and jealous of the attentions of another man. In words with her mother he became enraged, shot her, hunted up his sweetheart, killed her instantly, fatally shot her sister, Johanna, who was with her, then shot himself. All will die.

Mine Caves In.

Scranton, (Pa.) special: The greatest mine cave-in that Scranton has known in years occurred at the Diamond Vein of the Hampton mine. Eight acres and twenty eight dwelling houses were affected, some of the dwellings being irreparably damaged. It is said the loss will reach over a quarter of a million dollars. There is a report that two Poles who were at work in the mines beneath were killed, but it cannot be verined.

Her Sons Saved Her.

At Mansfield, Ohio, a tramp entered the home of Mrs. Hecht, a widow, and took possession of the house. He assaulted Mrs. Hecht, who called for help. Her sons appeared and a desperate struggle ensued. Several shots were fired at the intruder and he was finally secured. He gave his name as Joseph Brightwich of Knox County.

A Father's Revenge.

William Nershbred, a negro charged with criminal assault upon an 8-year-old girl near Rossville, Tenn., was taken from the Deputy Sheriff by S. C. Crook, father of the child, and shot to death.

His Flesh Cooked.

William Eppard, lineman for the Heat, Light and Power Company, at Muncie, Ind., in making a connection came in contact with two charged wires, and is dangerously and awfully hurt.

Fire at Bellaire, Ohio.

The Bellaire, Zanesville, and Cincinnatti depot in Bellaire, Ohio, together with a number of Baltimore and Ohio freight cars, were destroyed by fire. Loss, $8,000.

Murder at Monroe.

Oliver Winget, a young man of Decatur, Ind., was shot and killed at Monroe by Tom Bumbye. The trouble occurred over a girl.

Drank Carbolic Acid.

At Galion, Ohio, Ella, the 16-year-old daughter of Erie Conductor George Farber, drank an ounce of carbolic acid and died.

Two Lives Lost.

Wm. Huffman and his stepson, Isaac Butler, were killed by a switch engine on the Lake Erie and Western Road at Lima, Ohio.

Both Were Killed.

Father and son, David and William Hartman, were both killed at a Panhandle crossing, Cambridge City, Ind.

THE GUNNERS ALERT.

JAP WARSHIPS TRY TO SURPRISE WEI-HAI-WEI.

Chinese Were Prepared for Them, However, and Successfully Resisted the Advance of the Mikado's Fleet—Unsuccessful Attack on Chinese Forts.

Warships Driven Off.

A special dispatch from Choo Foo confirms the report that the Japanese fleet attacked the Chinese fleet at Wei-Hai-Wei, and that the former were repulsed at one entrance of the harbor, and subsequently attacked the other entrance. The dispatch says that the Japanese made a daring attempt to capture the forts and arsenal at Wei-Hai-Wei. The Japanese attacked in force, four cruisers and several small vessels heading the advance. The first shots were exchanged at daylight, but the Chinese were on the alert and their gunners returned a vigorous fire from the forts. The Japanese, apparently, expected to take the Chinese by surprise while the latter's warships were away, the Chinese squadron, with the exception of some small gunboats and a torpedo vessel, having sailed day before for another port. But the gunboats and the forts kept up such a well-directed fire that the Japanese were unable to enter the harbor. The Chinese torpedo boat was then ordered to advance, and when it did so the Japanese fleet retired.

T. ARISUGAWA.
Head of Japan's army.

The same fleet of Japanese vessels attacked the other entrance of the harbor later in the day, but was defeated.

Found the Fortifications Too Strong.

The London Times publishes a dispatch from Tien-Tsin confirming the Associated Press dispatches of an attack by the Japanese fleet upon the Chinese port of Wei-Hai-Wei and its repulse. The Times dispatch says that twenty-one Japanese warships made an attempt to capture Wei-Hai-Wei but found the fortifications guarding the port were too strong to allow of an entrance being forced. The warships attempted to run the forts, but were driven back by a heavy fire from the large Armstrong guns that are there mounted on disappearing carriages. Finding itself compelled to draw off out of range of the guns the fleet went about and headed for Port Arthur, on the other side of the bay, with the evident intention of making an attack. When the fleet arrived at Port Arthur the place was found prepared to resist an attack. The warships fired a few shots at the forts and were promptly answered, and then all the fleet departed.

T. SAIGO.
Head of Japanese Navy.

MINISTER OF WAR OF COREA.

Officials of the Japanese legation in Washington are without any information respecting the reported fighting at Wei-Hai-Wei and Port Arthur on the Chinese coast. They are inclined to the belief that the home Government is awaiting full and complete reports of the battles, as it had regarding the fight at Casen, before advising its representatives abroad. Much interest in the movements against the above named place is felt by officials of the Government. At or near Port Arthur Li Hung Chang has his great military stores, arsenals and other resources for a continuation of warlike operations. Both Port Arthur and Wei-Hai-Wei are in the line of direct route by water to the mouth of the Pei-Ho river, by which the city of Pekin can be reached, and any movement against the former places is likely to be a factor in the attempt which many persons believe Japan will make to overthrow the dynasty at Pekin.

THE MODERNIZED CHINESE ARMY.
It numbers some fifty thousand men, who have been drilled by European officers.

CONFIRMS CROP RUIN.

Half a Billion Bushels of Corn Lost by Thirty Days of Drought.

The Government crop report issued by the Washington Agricultural Department is the most sensational August report on corn ever issued by the department. The corn condition, 69.1, is lower than the 1890 by four points and lower than the 1881 by ten points.

LI HUNG CHANG, THE BISMARCK OF CHINA.

It indicates a deterioration in the prospect in thirty days of 500,000,000 bushels and suggests a yield this year of not over 1,523,000,000 bushels. The present estimate is for a yield which compares unfavorably with the crops of the last fourteen years. Smaller crops were made in 1881, 1887, and 1890. In the fourteen years beginning 1880 but two crops have been harvested equaling the estimate from the July standpoint. The crops of 1889 and 1891 overran the two-billion mark and that of 1888 was close to it. Yields by years are given as follows:

1893	1,619,000,000	1883	1,667,000,000
1892	1,628,000,000	1885	1,936,000,000
1891	2,060,000,000	1884	1,795,000,000
1890	1,489,000,000	1883	1,551,000,000
1889	2,112,000,000	1882	1,617,000,000
1888	1,987,000,000	1881	1,194,000,000
1887	1,456,000,000

The condition at harvest in 1881, the year when corn sold over 70 cents, was 66. That season there was a very severe loss from August to September. The Government figures show that talk of the crop being cut down by a half in Iowa was literally true, the corn condition being only 45 in Iowa, and that the claim of there being only a third of a crop left in Nebraska was also no exaggeration, the condition in Nebraska being only 33. These conditional averages are the more remarkable because they represent the status of corn Aug. 1, and since then there has been uninterrupted drought and some days of the extremest heat.

The suddenness of this appalling crop loss has made the speculative situation the more sensational. The corn crop prospect July 1, compared with the prospect thirty days later was as follows:

	Condition.	Acreage.	Yield.
July 1	93.0	76,036,000	2,091,000,000
Aug. 1	69.1	76,036,000	1,523,000,000
Decline	25.9	.....	568,000,000

The figures on spring wheat are only a little less astonishing than the ones on corn. The spring wheat condition is announced as 67.1, as low as the figure last August. A summary of the August crop situation would be as follows:

	Condition.	Area.	Yield.
Spring wheat	67.1	10,108,000	98,350,000
Winter wheat	83.9	23,116,000	281,500,000
Total		33,224,000	379,850,000
Corn	69.1	76,036,000	1,523,000,000
Oats	76.5	27,027,000	609,000,000

The spring wheat condition is taken as representing a crop of 98,350,000 bushels. The advices as to winter wheat from correspondents and threshers indicate a good yield of excellent quality. The condition of oats has declined 1.2 points since last report, being 76.5 against 77.7 in July. The condition in August, 1893, was 78.3. Barley is 69.8, against 76.8 last month; rye, 91, substantially same as last month; potatoes, 74, against 92.3 last month; and tobacco, 79, against 81 last month. Cotton is 91.8, an increase of 2.2 points over July and 3.5 over June.

ATTORNEY J. H. RANDALL was run over by a road engine and instantly killed at Grand Island, Neb. He leaves a wife and one child. Mr. Randall was the attorney for the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company.

THE Cincinnati Southern Railroad Company has issued an order requiring all employes to either resign from the American Railway Union or be discharged. Practically all the members of the union in Chattanooga complied with the order.

IN the United States Court at St. Paul, Minn., Dr. James Phillips, of Preston, indicted with several others, charged with making false pension returns, was acquitted. This is the fourth acquittal in the so-called Van Leuven pension fraud cases.

IN a runaway accident at New Martinsville, W. Va., John Kable and Mrs. Drusilla Hook were killed and Mrs. Hook's babe was fatally injured.

ROCK ISLAND TRAIN CRASHES THROUGH A TRESTLE.

Flames Break Out in the Wrecked Cars and Cremate Passengers and Trainmen—Rescuers Labor Under Great Difficulty, but Succeed in Saving Many Lives.

Ten Are Dead.

The most disastrous wreck in the history of Nebraska occurred at 10:30 o'clock Thursday night, when the eastbound Oklahoma and Texas express on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific plunged through an overhead bridge fifty feet high into a creek below, killing ten of the passengers, all of the train crew but a brakeman, and wounding many others. The killed are:

Isaac Depew, engineer.
C. D. Standard, conductor.
Fireman, name unknown.
Three commercial travelers, names unknown.
Two farmers, names unknown.
Two women, names unknown; supposed to be burned in the wreck.

Twelve others were badly injured, some perhaps fatally.

The disaster occurred five miles south of Lincoln. To add horror to the awful affair the entire train was consumed by fire, which followed the plunge, and many bodies were lost in the wreck. The train was composed of an express, baggage, day car, chair coach, and through sleeper for Chicago. An obstruction was on the track at the point where it crosses a ravine high over the tracks of the Union Pacific Railroad. The train was running at a high rate of speed, and crashed through the trestle to the ground below in an instant, carrying every wheel from the track.

Flames Complete the Awful Work.

The flames began to envelop the wreck within a few moments after the train went down, starting from the lamps in the baggage car and igniting the debris. It was some time before the confusion, intensified by the absence of the trainmen, who had been fatally mangled at their posts of duty, was sufficiently lessened to enable the surviving passengers to work with anything like efficiency. The passengers imprisoned in the day coach and chair car, which were under the heavy sleeper and on top of the battered engine, which was sending up clouds of scalding steam, added to the horrible confusion by the cries of alarm and screams to be released.

Those passengers in the rear of the train who were not injured in the wreck at once went to work to save their less fortunate companions. The alarm was carried to the surrounding farmhouses, and shortly the entire community was present aiding in the work of rescue. This was attended with the greatest difficulty as a result of the terrible manner in which the cars were thrown together and twisted into a tangled mass that was not only difficult to penetrate, but was approached at the greatest risk of the rescuers' lives.

Many of those lifted from the windows and gaping holes in the burning cars chopped by the rescuers were suffering from the effects of the flames as well as injuries from the tumbling of the train into the ditch. In a short time medical assistance was on the ground from Lincoln, and the work of caring for those most seriously injured was begun in a systematic manner.

A hospital was established in a neighboring field and by the light of the burning coaches the groaning victims of the terrible affair were brought and laid in rows on the ground, some of them breathing their last while in the hands of their rescuers.

Relief expeditions were immediately organized for a distance of several miles along the tracks by the farmers and people in the smaller towns. For several hours there was no chance to reduce the work to a system because of the great excitement, the passengers who escaped being killed outright screaming over the agony of their wounds and dragging themselves around pleading for something to allay their sufferings, others seeking for their companions and obstructing the work of rescuers by their crazy efforts to enter the burning debris.

HEAD OF THE ELKS.

Edwin B. Hay Recently Elected Grand Exalted Ruler of the Order.

The ruction in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, as time goes on, appears to get further and further from a settlement. The meeting at Atlantic City was called by the trustees, and apparently that faction has the most of the order with it. At that meeting the Grand Exalted Ruler was elected in the person of Edwin Barrett Hay, of Washington, D. C., and it is his name that will now be most frequently seen in connection with news of the order. Hay has twice served in the same capacity. He is a well-known attorney at Washington and a man in the prime of life. He is Past Eminent Commander of Washington Commandary, Knights Templars, and a thirty-second degree Mason.

Condensed State News.

THE supposed gold mine near Richmond has been abandoned.

FRANK CLARKE, aged 22, fell asleep on the I. & V. road near Martinsville, and was cut in two by a freight train.

FREDERICK ECKERT, old and honored citizen of Fort Wayne, who began life as a penniless butcher boy, is dead. Leaves an immense fortune.

THE United States Fish Commissioner has served notice that he will ship from the Government pond at Washington, within sixty days, 1,400 full-grown fish, 700 black bass, and 700 yellow perch, to go into Whitewater at Richmond.

PORTER COUNTY farmers are through with threshing of wheat and oats. It was the largest crop ever threshed. Oats averaged sixty bushels to an acre, and wheat forty. They are feeding their corn to their cattle, the crop being entirely a failure.

GEORGE PULLINGER, aged 17, met almost instant death at the Carpenter flouring mills, Richmond. While at work there one of his arms was caught in the cogwheels, crushed, and pulled from the socket at the shoulder. One side was also crushed.

INFORMATION to the State Board of Health from Starke County is to the effect that eight persons were recently exposed to the disease of smallpox, Health Officer Wright, in his report to Secretary Metcalf, states that he is maintaining a quarantine with difficulty. Starke County, he says, is infested with an aggravating number of "smart Alecks."

PATENTS have been issued to the following Indiana people: Calvin F. Darnell and L. Koss, Indianapolis; lath machine; George A. Dentelbeck, Myhert, fence machine; Daniel M. Forsythe, Franklin, harness; Olaf N. Guldin, Fort Wayne, steam supply and circulating system for water and gas apparatus; Erastus B. Kunkle, Fort Wayne, safety valve and muffler; Conrad Lumm, Garrett, eave-trough hanger.

THE Twelfth Indiana Infantry Regiment will hold a reunion at Warsaw, Aug. 30 and 31. The reunion will be under the management of the first company to enter the services during the late war, which was made up of citizens from that immediate vicinity. The citizens of Warsaw held a public meeting at the Commissioners' rooms and appointed various committees. Every resident of the place will give the veterans a cordial reception.

CHARLES RIPLEY, a carpenter belonging to the car repairers' force at the shop of the Michigan division of the Big Four railroad at Wabash, was sent down to Alexadria to make some repairs on a broken-down freight car. An hour after his arrival, in attempting to lift a car with the aid of a jack, he was struck under the chin by the lever of the "jack" and his neck broken, causing almost immediate death. He was nearly sixty years old, and leaves a family.

WHILE assisting in putting a pitch roof on the Indiana glass factory at Pendleton, William Marshal of Muncie, slipped and fell to the ground, breaking his right leg in three places. He was carrying a bucket of boiling hot pitch at the time, and when he fell both his arms were plunged into it and it was spilled on the other parts of his body, literally cooking the flesh. His fall was first a slide from the ventilator to the eave, a distance of fifty feet, and thence to the ground, fully forty feet. He was removed to his home and may not live.

THE late fire at Marion proves to have been the most destructive that ever visited that city. Fully three acres of business houses and other establishments were swept away. The fire is believed to have originated at Sweetser's lumber yard, from which it spread to the planing mill, thence to the hardware stores of that firm, and thence to the flouring mill of Mark, Burge, & Lake. It was but a few minutes after the beginning of the fire that apparently it was beyond control. The capacity of the water works was tested beyond its limit, and the fact that there was not even greater destruction is due to the assistance rendered by the private fire protection of the Marion Pulp Company, which turned the water from its pumps into the city mains and contributed a large amount of hose. Over twenty buildings were destroyed. The fire occurred in a part of town covered with frame structures. Everything burned like tinder.

REPORTS to the Weather Bureau in Indiana for the past week concerning the crops show that corn has been severely hurt by the long-continued drought, and that unless rains soon set in the yield will not be more than half the average crop. The rains of the past week were badly distributed, and did good only in a few localities, advancing corn but little in its growth. In the low, heavy, black soil it looks green and promising, but that on the high, light gravel or clay grounds is burned, and is getting more helpless daily, being in the critical period of the silk and tassel. Wheat, rye, and oats threshing continues with excellent results. Clover is yielding well in the seed. The hay crop is better than last year, but there is less of it. Pasturage is brown and dry, and in many localities farmers are feeding their stock and water is scarce. Potatoes are seriously threatened, and the tomato yield is back a month, causing packing houses to be that much behind in beginning work.

A GAS company at Kokomo undertook to remove the casing from a supposed "dead" gas well. The old well, thus disturbed, shot a tremendous stream of gas and water high in the air. It took fire and the place is now a burning lake.

THE other day Jacob Sunderland, a Muncie native, went fishing with dynamite. He tossed a lighted cartridge in the water. His dog plunged in and brought it back to dry land. It exploded just as Jacob scrambled through a rail fence 100 yards away and the dog was scattered all over the neighborhood.

A LOST deed found at Peru, recently, gives $60,000 to David Hood, of that city. The deed relates to land on which a Catholic seminary is located at Chicago. The real estate has been in dispute many years. The deed was originally given by an Indian chief to Hood's father and was lost.

ALBERT DREWETT, age 11, son of William Drewett of Fort Wayne, while attempting to walk on the hand rail of the Gay-street bridge, thirty feet above the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks, fell to the road below. He died thirty minutes after the fall. His mother, who was lying very ill, hearing of the accident, got out of bed and ran to the scene and fainted.

UNITED AT LAST

BY

MISS M E BRADDON

CHAPTER XXI.

A RAPID THAW.

Sir Cyprian Davenant had ridden to Totteridge several times after his discovery of Mrs. Walsingham's connection with the village as tenant of that small and unpretending house with the green shutters, glass door and square plot of garden. It was his habit to put up his horse at the inn, and go for a stroll while the animal rested after his midday feed, and in these rambles he had made the acquaintance of the nurse and baby at the green-shuttered house.

The nurse was a German girl, fat-faced, good-natured and unintelligent. Sir Cyprian won her heart at the outset by addressing her in her native language, which she had not heard since she came to England, and in the confidence inspired by his kind manners and excellent German she freely imparted her affairs to the stranger. Mrs. Walsingham had hired her in Brussels, and brought her home as nurse to the little girl, whose previous nurse had been dismissed for bad conduct in that city.

"Mrs. Walsingham's little girl?" inquired Sir Cyprian.

"No. The darling was an orphan, the daughter of a poor cousin of Mrs. Walsingham who had died in Vienna, and the kind lady had brought the little one home, and was going to bring her up as her own child."

Sir Cyprian heard and was doubtful. He had his own theory about this baby, but a theory which he would not for worlds have imparted to any one. He got on quite familiar terms with the little one by and by. She was a chubby, rosy infant of about fifteen months old, with brown eyes and fair complexion, and hair that made golden-brown rings upon her ivory forehead. She made frantic efforts to talk, but at present only succeeded in being loquacious in a language of her own.

She was quite ready to attach herself to the wandering stranger, fascinated by his watch-chains and seals.

"What is her name?" asked Sir Cyprian.

"Clara, but we always call her 'Baby.'"

"Clara? That's only her Christian name. She has a surname, I suppose?"

The nurse-maid supposed as much also, but had never heard any surname, nor the profession of the little dear's father, nor any details of the father and mother. Mrs. Walsingham was a lady who talked very little, but she seemed extremely fond of Baby. She came to see her twice a week, and sometimes stayed all day, playing with her, and superintending her dinner, and carrying her about the garden.

On the morning after that interview with James Wyatt Sir Cyprian rode over to Totteridge and put up his horse, as usual, at the inn. The nurse had told him—that Mrs. Walsingham was to be at the cottage to-day, and he had special reasons for wishing to see that lady. He might have called upon her in Half-Moon street, of course, but he preferred to see her in Baby's establishment, if possible.

It was noon when he walked up and down the pathway before the cottage, waiting for Mrs. Walsingham's arrival, a bright winter day, with a blue sky and a west wind. He had exchanged greeting with Baby already, that young lady saluting him from the nursery window with vivacious flourishes of her pink arms.

The church clock had not long struck twelve when Mrs. Walsingham's neat brougham drove up. She opened the door and let herself out, and had scarcely stepped into the pathway when she recognized Sir Cyprian.

She turned very pale, and made a little movement, as if she would have gone back to her carriage, but Sir Cyprian advanced, hat in hand, to greet her.

"You have not forgotten me, I hope, Mrs. Walsingham?"

"Sir Cyprian Davenant, I think?"

"Yes; I had the pleasure of meeting you more than three years ago at the Star and Garter."

"I remember perfectly. You have been in Africa since then. I have read some notices of your adventures there. I am glad to see you so little the worse for them. And now I must bid you good-morning. I have to see some people here. You can wait at the inn, Holmes," to the coachman.

"Will you give me half an hour—a quarter of an hour's conversation, Mrs. Walsingham?" asked Sir Cyprian.

She looked at him uneasily, evidently puzzled.

"Upon what subject?"

"Upon a matter of life and death."

"You alarm me. Have you come here on purpose to waylay me? I thought our meeting was accidental."

"Waylay is a disagreeable word; but I certainly came here this morning on purpose to see you. I am going to make an appeal to your heart, Mrs. Walsingham. I want you to do a noble action."

"I am afraid you have come to the wrong quarter for that commodity," she answered, with a bitter smile, but she seemed somewhat reassured by this mode of address.

"Shall we walk?" she asked, moving away from the garden gate.

The wide high-road lay before them, destitute of any sign of human life, the leafless limes and chestnuts standing up against the winter sky, the far-off hills purple in the clear, bright air. They would be as much alone here as within any four walls, and Mrs. Walsingham was evidently disinclined to admit Sir Cyprian into Ivy Cottage, as the house with the green shutters was called.

"Have you friends here? Do you come often?" asked Mrs. Walsingham, carelessly.

"I take my morning ride here occasionally, and the other day, while resting my horse, I made the acquaintance of your German nurse and her charge. Baby is a most fascinating little thing, and I take the warmest interest in her."

"What a pity my small niece is not old enough to appreciate the honor," sneered Mrs. Walsingham.

Sir Cyprian ignored the sneer.

"My interest in that sweet little thing has given rise to a strange idea—a wild one, you will say, perhaps—when I have explained myself. I told you that I was coming to make an appeal to your heart. I come here to ask you to lend your aid in saving the life and reason of one whom you may have deemed in some wise your rival. Mrs. Sinclair is dying."

Mrs. Walsingham was silent.

"You have heard as much from some one else, perhaps?"

"I heard that she was seriously ill."

"And mentally afflicted?"

"Yes. You do not expect me to be greatly shocked or grieved, I hope. I never saw the lady, except in her box at the opera."

"And, being a stranger, you cannot pity her. That is not following the example of the good Samaritan."

"If I found her on the roadside I should try to succor her, I dare say," answered Mrs. Walsingham; "but as her distresses do not come in my pathway, and as I have plenty of nearer demands upon my pity I can hardly be expected to make myself miserable on Mrs. Sinclair's account. No doubt she has plenty of sympathy—a husband who adores her—and the chivalrous devotion of old admirers like yourself."

"Spare her your sneers, Mrs. Walsingham. At no moment of her married life has she been a woman to be envied. In her present condition to refuse her pity would be less than human. Constance Sinclair is dying of a broken heart."

"Very sad," sighed Mrs. Walsingham.

"That is what you would say if one of your friends related the untimely death of a favorite lap-dog. Have you ever thought what that phrase means, Mrs. Walsingham? People use it lightly enough. A broken heart, the slow agony of a grief that kills—a broken heart, not broken by some sudden blow, that shatters joy and life together—happy those whom sorrow slays with such merciful violence—but the slow wearing away, the dull, hopeless days, the sleepless nights, the despair that eats into the soul, yet is slow to kill—these are the agonies which we sum up lightly, in our conventional phraseology, when we talk about broken hearts."

"Is it the loss of her baby which Mrs. Sinclair feels so deeply?" asked Mrs. Walsingham, who had listened thoughtfully to Sir Cyprian's appeal. She no longer affected a callous indifference to her rival's grief.

"Yes. That is the grief that is killing her. She has never been really happy with her husband, though she had been a good and dutiful wife. The child brought her happiness. She gave it all her love. She may have erred perhaps, in concentrating her affection upon this baby, but the baby represented her world of love. When that was taken from her—suddenly—without a moment's warning, she gave herself up to despair. I have talked to a faithful servant who was with her at that bitter time, who knew her measureless love for the child. I have seen her in her grief, seen her the wreck of the joyous girl I knew three years ago."

Mrs. Walsingham was moved. No softening tear veiled the hard brightness of her dark eyes, but her lower lip worked nervously, and her increasing pallor told of a mind deeply troubled.

"If her husband had by any act of his brought her to this condition, I should call him something worse than a murderer," said Sir Cyprian; "but badly as I think of Gilbert Sinclair, I can not blame him here. It is destiny that has been cruel—an inscrutable Providence which has chosen to inflict this hopeless misery on the gentlest and most innocent of victims. It is very hard to understand why this should be."

"Mrs. Sinclair is not the first," said Mrs. Walsingham, struggling against some strong feeling. "Other women have lost children they loved—only children—the idols of their hearts."

"Other women have had kinder husbands, perhaps, to sympathize with and comfort them. Other women have had sources of consolation which Mrs. Sinclair had not."

"She has her piety, her church, her prayer-book. I should have thought so pure and perfect a woman would find consolation from those. I do not profess to be religious, or to have treasures laid up in heaven, and the loss of what I love most on earth might bring me to madness. But Mrs. Sinclair's placid perfection should be above such human passions."

"She is human enough and weak enough to break her heart for the loss of her child," answered Sir Cyrian, growing angry. "But you seem to be incapable of pity, and I fear I have been mistaken in appealing to you. Yet I thought that your love for that child yonder might inspire some feeling of sympathy with an afflicted mother."

"My affection for my poor little orphan cousin—a waif thrown on my hands by misfortune—is not a very absorbing sentiment," answered Mrs. Walsingham, with languid scorn.

"So much the better," cried Sir Cyprian, eagerly, "for in that case you will the easier fall in with my plan for saving Mrs. Sinclair's life and reason."

"You have a plan for saving her?"

"Yes, a plan recommended by her physicians, and to which her husband and her father have given their consent. In a crisis in which nothing but hope could save her she has been told to hope. It has even been hinted to her that her child is still living."

Mrs. Walsingham started and looked at him wonderingly.

"A cruel deception you think, but the case was desperate, remember. The false hope has already done something. I have heard this morning that there has been a faint rally—a flicker of returning intelligence. She remembers that she has been told to hope—remembers and looks forward to the realization of the promise that has been made. If we fail her now, despair will again take possession of her—more bitter because of this ray of light. The plan formed by those who love her best is to give her a child to love—a child whom she will believe at first to be her own, saved from the German river, but about which, in time to come, when reason and strength have returned, she may be told the truth. She will have given the little one her love by that time, and the adopted child will fill the place of the lost one."

"A most romantic scheme, assuredly, Sir Cyprian. And pray what part do you expect me to play in this domestic drama? Why choose me for your confidante?"

"The little girl you have adopted is about the age of Mrs. Sinclair's baby. You admit that she is not very dear to you—a charge which you have taken upon yourself out of charity. Let Gilbert Sinclair adopt that child. He shall provide handsomely for her future; or, if you prefer trusting me, I will settle a sum of money which you shall approve in trust for your little cousin, you yourself choosing the trustees. Give me that dear child, Mrs. Walsingham, and you will be the means of saving Constance Sinclair's life."

"That child?" cried Mrs. Walsingham, looking at him with wide-open eyes. "I give you that child to be Constance Sinclair's solace and consolation—to win Gilbert's wife back to life and happiness! I surrender that child! You must be mad to ask it."

"Did you not tell me just now that the child was not especially dear to you?"

"She is dear to me," answered Mrs. Walsingham, vehemently. "I have grown to love her. She is all I have in the world to love. She reminds me of one who once loved me. Why do you prate to me of Mrs. Sinclair's loneliness? She cannot be lonelier than I am. What is there but emptiness in my heart—yet I do not complain of a broken heart. I do not abandon myself to madness or imbecility. I bear my burden. Let her bear hers. Give you that child, indeed! That is asking too much."

"Pardon me, Mrs. Walsingham. I thought I was talking to a woman with a noble nature, whose higher instincts only needed to be appealed to."

"It is so long since people have left off appealing to my higher instincts that they have somewhat lost their use. Do you think, Sir Cyprian Davenant, that I have cause to love or pity or sacrifice myself for Constance Sinclair? You should know better than that, unless you have lived all these years in this world without knowing what kind of clay your fellow men and women are made of. I have the very strongest reason to detest Mrs. Sinclair, and I do detest her frankly. She has done me no wrong, you will say. She has done the greatest wrong—robbed me of the man I love, of wealth, status, name, and place in the world. Do you think it matters to me that she was unconscious of that wrong? She has done it, and I hate her for it, and shall so hate her till my dying day."

"Your hatred will not reach her in the grave or follow her beyond it," answered Sir Cyprian. "Your pity might save her life."

"Find some hospital brat to palm upon this distracted mother—some baby-farmer's protegee."

"I will find some respectably born child, be sure, Mrs. Walsingham. It was only a fancy, perhaps, which led me to propose taking your little kinswoman. I counted too much upon the generosity of a disappointed rival."

And with this home thrust, Sir Cyprian bowed and walked away, leaving the lady to her own reflections.

A woman of this kind, a being swayed by passion, is often a mass of inconsistency and contradiction—now hot, now cold. At a late hour that evening Sir Cyprian received a letter, delivered by a man-servant. It was from Mrs. Walsingham.

"I am the most wretched of women"—she wrote—"utterly weary of life. Mrs Sinclair may have the child. She would grow up a wretch if she grew up under my influence, for every day makes me more miserable and more bitter. What shall I be as an old woman? Send some trustworthy person to fetch the little girl to-morrow. I give her up to you entirely, but upon condition that Mrs. Sinclair shall never know to whom she owes her adopted child. May the adoption prosper. But as I hear that Mr. Sinclair is in a fair way to ruin, I do not think that you are giving my young kinswoman a very brilliant start in life. Be this as it may, I wash my hands off her. She has not brought me happiness; and perhaps if I were to let her wind herself around my heart, it might prove by and by that I had taught a serpent to coil there. I have not too good an opinion of her blood. Yours truly,

CLARA WALSINGHAM.

A CITY OF EXTREMES.

The Very Rich and the Very Poor Make Up

A Cat That Killed Snakes.

"Did you ever see a snake-killing cat?" asked a Southern gentleman the other day. "I had one once that had a regular passion for killing snakes. I was running a lumber camp in Florida. It was in a very sparsely settled county, plenty of marsh and rotten trees, and altogether an ideal retreat for snakes of all kinds. We never did know where that cat came from. It strolled into camp one day, although there was not a house within ten miles of it. The next day we found it engaged in mortal combat with a rattlesnake. The snake did not last very long. After that the cat would kill every snake it found. It would begin by patting them softly with its paws, perhaps scratching the skin just a trifle. Its purpose seemed to be to irtate the snake to the striking point. When it rose to strike the cat would jump around it, and nip it in the back before the snake could turn its head. It would yank the snake by the tail, and keep on nipping it until its back was broken in several places. Then the cat would drag the dead snake to camp with great pride, and would purr and sing in great shape. That cat kept the camp itself clear of snakes. Before that time we were almost afraid to go to sleep for them."

Where Widows Are Not Loved.

Among the many sad things connected with the lives of women in India nothing is more pitiable than the state of the poor widows. A widow is regarded by all her husband's family as the cause, more or less direct, of his death, and is treated with dislike and often with great harshness and severity. Therefore the death of a young wife before her husband is a cause of great rejoicing among his friends that she has thus escaped the trials of widowhood. The prayer of every girl before marriage and of every girl and woman after marriage is that she may never become a widow. The preservation of a husband's health is a matter of the greatest importance, and on a certain day of the year a special religious ceremony is performed with this end in view. Offerings are made at the temples, money is given to the priests, fastings undergone and vows performed for the preservation of a husband's health and life. When he is ill the wife removes her jewels, puts on coarse clothing and devotes herself to prayer. If he dies her woe at once begins.

A Science of Old Shoes.

A French savant has invented a new science which he terms scarpology, whereby he proposes to diagnosticate mental qualities from the appearance of the shoes worn by the subject. He claims that shoes that have been worn are full of faithful indications as to lack of energy, fickleness, bad temper, or the opposite qualities, as the case may be. If the sole and heel of a shoe, after months' wear, are equally worn, the owner is an energetic business man, an employe that can be relied on, a good wife or excellent mother. If the outside edge is most worn, the owner is adventurous to rashness and of a bold and persistent turn of mind. Wear of the inside edge indicates irresolution and weakness in man and modesty in woman.

CURSE OF CHEAPNESS.

AN ABSURD AND INCONSISTENT ARTICLE ON WOOL.

The Hide-Bound American Economist Says Cheapness Is a Curse and Foreign Trade a Mistake—An Absurd Protest—Cause of Hard Times.

Lying Statements Dissected.

A good example of protectionist logic and belief is supplied by the American Economist of July 27, in a two and a half page article entitled, "Cheap Sheep Raising." The object of the writer is to explain why it is that wool is produced more cheaply in Australia than in this country. He takes it for granted that if, because of natural and artificial advantages, wool can be produced cheaper there than here it becomes the duty of all sensible Americans to shut themselves off by a high tariff from the cheap wool in order to force themselves to clothe themselves in the dear wool grown in this country. The axioms on which the argument rests are: (1) Cheapness is a curse. (2) Nothing should be purchased from abroad, no matter at what little cost, which we can possibly produce at home, no matter at how great a cost. From these axioms it follows that all commerce and trade across the boundary lines between countries is a mistake. Because we never purchase foreign articles except when they are cheaper than those produced at home, and because we can, by hot-houses or other artificial means, produce any article at home. But few protectionists are consistent enough to follow their logic to this conclusion, although some of their apostles condemn all international trade, and one has gone so far as to wish that oceans were walls of fire.

There can be no doubt about the conclusion. If cheapness in itself is a curse and protective duties as ordinarily conceived are blessings, then it must follow that foreign trade is harmful. If it be bad policy for us to purchase wool in Australia, where it can be grown at, say, 10 per cent. less cost than here, then it is also bad policy to purchase tea in China or coffee in Java, where they can be produced for, say, 10 per cent. less than here. In either case the theory and the argument are the same; they differ only in degree. The free-traders say all trade is beneficial to both parties and both countries participating in it. The protectionist, if he be consistent, laments the fact that there are ocean freight steamers.

The article, however, is not entirely consistent with itself. A close examination of the statements reveals the fact that Australian is cheaper than American wool, not so much because wages are lower there (which is doubtful), nor because the climate is more favorable (which is also doubtful as compared with that of Texas and California), but because the wool growers there are more enterprising and have adopted more scientific means and methods. The writer tells us that "the great curse of the country is drought, which has caused the loss of tens of thousands of sheep and cattle in a single season." To overcome this artesian wells have been drilled at great cost. "On one sheep station alone, Thuralgoona, as much as $150,000 was spent in sinking three wells. One of these wells yields 3,000,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours; another one yields 3,500,000 gallons." This station "covers an area of 2,100 miles. Then he explains how cheap it is to haul wool to market without railroads. An illustration shows two men and fourteen bullocks taking a two-wheeled cart or wagon filled with the bales of wool from Gordon Downs to the seaport of Rockhampton, a distance of 200 miles. The writer designates this illustration as "cheap hauling of wool to market." Our wool growers are at liberty to return to this antiquated way of marketing wools if they think it is cheap.

Another large illustration is entitled "Cheap shearing by machinery." The writer says: "It is not necessary to go into details descriptive of the different machines: they are merely shown to illustrate the cheap methods with which the American sheep owners, who have very small flocks and cannot afford to erect expensive machines, are unable to compete." As often happens, protection is here used to excuse the slouchy methods and natural disadvantages of our own producers. If we are unable to compete because we have not the latest improvements, we need protection from those who are more enterprising and scientific in their methods.

It is also probable that we can find sheep in the United States grazing on land that has cost less than $20—yes, less than $5 per acre. Perhaps we might find shepherds receiving less than $5 per week and rations, with a "present of a pound of tobacco for every wild dog or 'dingo' that he may kill." Certainly some of our wool producers would not speak of a "cheap water supply" from wells costing $50,000 each. The readers of the Economist are used to such "rot" and will probably see no inconsistencies in this article. Credulity is their strong point.

Cause of Hard Times.

The American Wool and Cotton Reporter is an independent trade organ with pronounced protectionist proclivities. The issue of Aug. 2 contains some sensible remarks under the title, "Getting Down to Hardpan." Unfortunately, for Republican politicians, the Reporter does not credit the present hard times to the shadow of the Wilson bill. Fortunately, for Democrats, it sees better times coming. Here is a part of the editorial:

Three years ago the remark was prevalent enough that it required four times as much capital to do the same amount of business as was needed ten years before. It may be said to-day that about one-third of the capital will suffice for the transaction of a given volume of actual business, as was demanded for the same three years ago.

Three years ago the strands of credit had about reached the limit of tension: they would have snapped in 1891 but for the slackening caused by the famine in Russia which made a market abroad for our enormous grain crop, which in turn postponed for a year or more the breaking of the chords.

The catastrophe was only delayed; it culminated in 1893. The result was the bursting of bubbles; the wringing of water from saturated securities, the scaling down of speculative prices and the turning down of fraudulent concerns.

The recovery is so gradual that the average trade review does not always note the unmistakable symptoms of convalescence; temporary relapses, readily explicable, divert the attention from important facts like the following: The bank clearings in the great commercial centers of the country in a week of July, 1894, were 95 per cent. greater than in the same period of the previous year: there are fewer unsettled ledger accounts than usual at this time of year; collections are more promptly made than for many a year before, money was never plentier or easier; factories of all kinds which have been in a greater or less degree idle are starting up all over the country; goods are being shipped from mill storehouses; small stocks of many kinds of raw material are in sight; small stocks of many kinds of goods are in the market. There is a fair general demand, and, first and last, the vital fact of a new and healthier, because sollder, business basis.

Sticks to His Colors.

In his address to the Iowa State convention, Gov. Boies spoke his mind freely upon the issues of the day and the situation and the dangers which confront the Democratic party.

After reviewing clearly and succinctly the history and progress of the tariff struggle inaugurated by President Cleveland in 1887, "in a message that will ever remain memorable in the history of the executive office of the nation," Gov. Boies plants himself fairly and squarely upon the Chicago platform of 1892, and the pledges which the party then made.

"To manufacturers," he reminds his hearers, "they pledged free raw materials; to the masses a tariff for revenue alone," and, he adds—and it is to this plain, honest statement of Democratic doctrine and of the Democratic position that we desire especially to call attention—"if Democracy would live; if it would not now in the first flush of victory so gallantly won (in 1892) lay down its arms, surrender all for which it fought, and prepare its winding-sheet for the tomb, it must not lower the standard of the promise made. There is no middle ground on which to cast anchor."

Recognizing the spirit of "compromise" that has manifested itself in certain quarters, and the danger involved of an abandonment of principle, under the pretext of making necessary concessions, Gov. Boies, without calling names, makes sufficiently plain his own opinion of those who advocate such "compromises" and "concessions." "He who is willing," he says, "that his party as such shall retrace a single step from the position it assumed in 1892, who would surrender an iota of the principle for which it then fought and won, is not a Democrat. If any such there are, let them go to the camp of the enemy. They are less dangerous there than in our own."

All business men will agree that in order that there may be a revival of trade and industry, and a return of confidence which is an essential condition of such revival, there must be a cessation of agitation. There must be something definite and settled, whereby producers and importers and consumers may gauge their operations and make their calculations. You cannot keep on perpetually tinkering at the tariff or fighting over the tariff, and expect business to improve. Stagnation will inevitably accompany uncertainty. This all that class of persons who profess to believe that any bill, even the Senate bill, is better than no bill at all, utterly forget. Governor Boies does not forget it, and he serves timely and useful warning, that the spirit and the cause of tariff reform will not be quieted and put to sleep by the passage of a bill which offers only the semblance, not the substance, of reform. There is no use in crying "Peace"—when there is no peace.

If the bill passed by Congress, says Gov. Boies, "does not come up to the requirement of the (party) pledge, as I read it, I will not lay down my arms; I will not consider the matter settled; I will say frankly that my party has not been able to keep in all its parts, and to its full extent, one of the pledges it made upon which it was intrusted with power. And in my own way, to the extent of the influence I am able to exert, I will help to keep the wheels of reform in motion, until all that has been promised is faithfully performed. This is my view of the duty of Democrats in this crisis, both in and out of Congress."

This is spoken in the true spirit of a Democrat and a tariff reformer. No man, in fact, can be a Democrat who is not a tariff reformer, and in the sense in which tariff reform is defined and promised in the Chicago platform. The contest is not one which admits of a temporary truce or suspension of hostilities. If there are any members of Congress who feel the hot weather and would like to get away from Washington, and who think that a compromise of some sort can be patched up which will tide over matters for awhile and allow agitation to subside, they are mistaken alike in the nature of the situation and in the temper of the people. Business men would see through the hollowness of the truce. The people would reject with scorn the proffered compromise.

An Absurd Protest.

The Chicago Inter Ocean remarks that "in Illinois the great raw material is coal, which Mr. Cleveland insists must be put on the free list," and then asserts that the duty on bituminous coal "would carry poverty and misery into the cottage of every miner in this State." This is mere partisan rant. Will the Inter Ocean explain how it is now possible to export more than 1,000,000 tons of bituminous coal per annum into Canada from the mines of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, if the removal of the duty on Canadian coal would affect the coal industry in those States so injuriously?

In the fiscal year 1893 there were exported into the central Canadian Provinces from lake ports 988,605 tons of American bituminous coal. The quantity exported to the same Canadian Provinces in the fiscal year 1874 was much larger. The increase is indicated by the official statement that the total exports of bituminous coal were greater in eleven months of this year by nearly 40 per cent. than in the corresponding eleven months of 1893.

Manufacturers and other consumers of soft coal in the central Canadian Provinces buy American coal and pay a duty on it of 60 cents a ton. Even with this tariff charge, American coal is cheaper to them than the coal of Nova Scotia.

The removal of our duty on soft coal would not make a market for Nova Scotia coal in the Province of Ontario and the southwestern part of the Province of Quebec, where American coal is now sold in spite of the Canadian duty. The coal of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio would still be exported to those provinces. The manufacturers of iron and steel and other products on the Pacific coast would not, however, be required to pay a tariff tax on the bituminous coal which they are compelled to import from British Columbia and even from Australia, and the manufacturers in New England would procure a part of their supply from the Nova Scotia mines at a price considerably lower than that which they now pay for coal from the Maryland and West Virginia mines, in which Mr. Gorman is interested as a shareholder and director.

The central Provinces of Canada would still buy the coal of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, and it is absurd for the followers of McKinley in those States to say that the mining companies which export coal to Canada—beating the Canadian coal in Canada itself, in spite of the disadvantage of a tariff handicap of 60 cents per ton—would be hurt by the removal of the duty now imposed by the United States on coal coming from Canada.—New York Times.

Dr. Fruth Coming.

A man of national reputation as a physician, surgeon and specialist, is the kind that all chronic sufferers should employ; one, who by personal contact with hundreds of afflicted, with all sorts of ailments, that other physicians have either neglected or by their incompetent treatment have left them wrecks to await their doom, can find not only relief but often permanent cure by placing their case in the hands of a man like Dr. Fruth, of Chicago, who makes a specialty of curing disease—not trifling with it, as life is too sweet for expensive experiments with men who don't understand the rudiments of medicine.

Caucus Notice.

I would advise that all township caucuses be held during the last week of August, on such day of that week and at such hour as the township chairman may designate. These nominations of township officers are important and the caucuses should be attended by every democratic voter.

JOHN F. SHUMAN,
Co. Chairman.

TARIFF BILL PASSED.

The long struggle is substantially over. Monday forenoon the House had a caucus of democratic members, who decided to support the Senate bill rather than fail to pass any bill on the tariff. They saw the Senate had the advantage, as four or five senators would not vote for any bill such as the House demanded. So when the full House met after noon, a vote was taken and the House stood 176 to 97 in favor of the senate bill. If the president signs it, it becomes a law. Only a very few democrats voted against it, the opposition coming from republicans. As soon as the vote was announced, the House at once took up free coal, iron, barbed wire and sugar, as separate bills, and passed them by heavy majorities. But it is not likely the Senate will pass the sugar bill. In the general tariff bill already passed—the Senate bill—all these are already taxed. The new tariff bill, though not so desirable as the House bill, has many better points. Its chief defects are the tax on sugar and on coal. The tax on iron is not so important. But the average rate of taxation by tariff duty, in the Senate bill, is lower than in the House bill or the McKinley bill. In the three bills, the rate stands: McKinley Bill, 49; House Bill, 35; Senate Bill, 32.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT at Pittsburg Sept. 11.

ANARCHISTS must stay out. The bill has passed both houses.

CONGRESS still claims that it will get its work done in a few days, including the tariff bill. We hope so.

THE Coxeyites who got as far west as Indianapolis last week were taken in charge by the populists and cared for till they could be sent farther west.

FIFTY new militia companies are talked of in the state. The gallant record made by the state troops in the recent riot troubles has made the service popular.

LATEST wheat harvests, those in the northwest, are now finished. All over the country, the crop will be up to the average. Corn probably not half a crop.

PULLMAN has been called into court and his company may have to give up its charter, because it has been doing business outside of what the charter named.

EX-PRESIDENT HARRISON will not be in Indianapolis Sept. 5, to open the campaign with a "key note" speech. He is at Monmouth, N. J., and too busy to come back. So the campaign will be delayed awhile.

REPUBLICAN papers denounce Voorhees for being willing to vote for the senate tariff bill. What would they say, if he was willing to support the republican tariff ideas, which go twice as far in the same direction?

ISLAND PARK ASSEMBLY at Rome City, has had a bad season. It is said to be about $4,000 behind and that friends have subscribed about $3,000, and they think the remainder will soon be made. Hard times and mistakes in the management are said to be the cause.

THE Times, as a reliable newspaper, is a wild failure. Week before last, it made the assertion that Alabama would go populist. Last week it said it had gone populist although all the daily papers united on saying the democrats had beaten the combined populists and republican vote by more than 20,000.

SCRANTON, PA., had a queer accident last week. A coal mine is under one part of it and workmen have been taking the timber supports out of that part of the mine to use in another part. Suddenly the mine caved in, sinking four feet. Twenty-eight houses went down, but no lives lost. The damage in all is estimated at a quarter million.

WYOMING populists at their state convention passed a resolution denouncing President Cleveland for interfering to stop the strike riots in Chicago. As the rioters were destroying property by the million, terrorizing citizens and stopping all kinds of business, and no one else tried to stop them, it must be that these populists uphold crime and lawlessness and denounce law and order. What else can we make out of the course they are taking all over the country?

WORK of elevating the railway tracks in Chicago begins this week by the Lake Shore and the Rock Island roads. The Illinois Central elevated its tracks for several miles in the city over a year ago of its own accord. Now, the other roads are compelled by a city ordinance to do the same. It will cost a good deal of money, but the Illinois Central has shown that it pays. The elevation will be about ten feet, and be made mostly of sand brought from the sand hills near the Indiana line.

CONGRESS is not what it ought to be in either House. There are a few able men in each, but even these few able ones, are liable to be very selfish. We have the spectacle of three our four democratic senators voting substantially with the republicans, so as to block tariff legislation. And all the reason they have for this, is that a few of their own people, and possibly the senators themselves, have an interest in "protecting" some local industry. So the whole country suffers. And the few populist senators are acting the same way.

THE commonwealers, three "armies" of them encamped in the outskirts of Washington, were deserted by their leaders, or "generals," and then asked congress for aid. Congress not having the right to vote money for such purposes, refused, and referred them to the city authorities. In this way, they got some help, but not much. Three car loads were sent west, and reached Indianapolis last week. They know now, what they should have known at first, that nothing could be gained by going to Washington. Their "generals" have gained some "fame," but the poor dupes who followed them, got left, just as they should have known they would from the start.

POPULIST political meeting in West Indianapolis was broken up Sunday evening by the town marshal and his deputies. It was an illegal and outrageous proceeding. Among the speakers arrested was Leroy Templeton. They had held meetings and had political speeches during the day, and much as we regret to see such desecration of the Sabbath, we cannot see where the law required their arrest. We have not sympathy with populist doctrines or populist practices. We believe their tendencies are dangerous to the welfare of society and of the nation. We believe their tendency to trample on the laws, to uphold law breaking like those in the recent riots or Sabbath desecration like holding political meetings on Sunday are all wrong and tend to break down all social, religious and political restraint. But the arrest of these men, under such circumstances, was also a wrong, and tended in the same dangerous direction. We are glad of one thing though. The officers who made the arrests were not democrats. They were all republicans and acting under the orders of a republican town government. If the facts have been correctly telegraphed over the country, they should be punished for this high handed course.

Township Trustees.

The caucuses for the selection of trustees and other township officers are now being held or about to be and we cannot urge upon our democratic friends too strongly the need of making good selections. The trustee has, in his township, enormous powers, and if the proper man is chosen, the exercise of these powers will result in great good to the township. If the wrong man gets the office, he may do his township much harm, even with the best intentions. We think our people all understand this, but just now is the time to attend to it. The candidate should be honest, intelligent, popular, and one who, when elected, can be depended on to do his duty in the interest of his people. For assessors, we should have men who have a good idea of the value of property, and a spirit of impartiality sufficiently strong to enable them to deal justly by all. Now is the time to get control of this matter, the time when the nominations are made. By looking over the law again, it has been decided that the trustees elected this fall will not take office till August of next year.

SOME POSSIBLE CANDIDATES.

In this Union township, there has been but little said as to candidates for township officers. For trustee we hear the names of George Lanning and Will Madden, both excellent men. For justices we can do no better than continue in office our present able officers, Jacob Walborn and Edward Ross, as well as our popular constable, L. S. Stoner. As yet we here no names for assessor.

GRANT TOWNSHIP.

As yet we hear but one name for trustee of Grant township. J. W. Jackman seems to be the coming man. He would be a good officer. He is a comparatively young man, and well posted on the work he would have to do, being a former teacher. It would be an excellent choice.

Smithfield Caucus.

The democratic voters of Smithfield Township will meet in caucus Saturday, Aug. 25.

J. O. BLAKE,
Township Chairman

Republican Caucus.

The republican township caucus on Saturday nominated A. B. Walsworth for trustee, T. J. Saxton for assessor, M. B. Willis and C. S. Clark for justices, and Mort Wilson and Charles Crew for constables.

Steuben County Convention.

The democrats of Steuben county held their convention last Thursday, and nominated the following ticket:

Representative, Prof. Lozenzo D. Creel; auditor, Dr. Frank B. Humphreys; clerk, Charles Well; sheriff, Porter Benedict; treasurer, Oliver P. Learned; recorder, J. W. Thomas; surveyor, Enos B. Parsell; coroner, Dr. J. J. Wilkinson; commissioners, M. E. McElhenie and Simon Delar.

Miss Lottie Zwilling spent Sunday in Ashley with relatives.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hoffman, on Thursday, Aug. 9, a girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Crew, of Auburn, spent Sunday with Mrs. Crew's mother, Mrs. Hall.

Misses Minnie and Ella Voss returned this week from a visit to St. Joe with their sister, Mrs. J. C. Day.

Rev. Pierce and E. A. Zerkle returned Tuesday from Warsaw, where they had been attending the Evangelical Association.

Miss Flora Ettinger has returned from Springfield, Ill., where she has been visiting her brother for the past eight months.

The little boy of E. P. Dickinson and the little son of Mrs. Harriet Ettinger were both quite ill this week with bowel trouble.

John Lutz Jr. died of hemmorrhage Thursday morning. He was buried Friday. It is thought he injured himself by overwork in loading oats.

Dadie Miller and Blanche Howenstine returned to their home at Bellefontaine, O., after a two weeks' visit with the families of Henry Willis and J. C. Boyer.

Clyde and Raymond Willis entertained a number of young people very charmingly on Thursday evening in honor of Miss Miller and Miss Howenstine, of Bellefontaine, Ohio.

The threshing machine of Mr. Lower broke through a bridge southeast of town last Friday, falling about six feet. No one was seriously hurt, while all were more or less bruised.

Tuesday afternoon the rapid ringing of the fire bell aroused our citizens to the fact that another fire was in progress. It proved to be the house of J. N. McBride, which was quite badly burned before it was put out. It is a mystery how it got on fire, as Mrs. McBride was not at home, being in the country with her daughter, and we believe there had been no fire in the house. It is believed by some that mice may have carried matches among some loose papers. Many willing hands helped to carry the contents of the house away from danger.

Wednesday evening, Aug. 8, Attorney John Shuman gave a very pleasant entertainment to his Sunday school class of young ladies, including Miss Howenstine and Miss Miller, of Bellefontaine, who have been in his class during their visit here. A few other guests were also invited. The literary part of the entertainment was rather unique in some of its features, but each one was so ready and well prepared to take part as to make it a brilliant success. The feast offered the guests was dainty and inviting, as well as well served, doing credit to Mrs. Shuman and daughter. Music and conversation beguiled the hours and when the time for parting came, all felt Mr. Shuman was a host in two senses, so far as entertaining is concerned.

BUTLER.

A little son of Job Warford was buried last Friday.

A number of children in different parts of town are sick.

Mrs. Helwig remains nearly the same, not improving very rapidly.

William Prosser lies dangerously sick at his residence on North Pearl street.

J. A. Campbell and wife took an overland trip to Van Wert, O., last Saturday, remaining over Sunday with his sister at that place.

Eli Healey, living three miles north of town, sustained what is expected to prove fatal injuries one day last week, by the running away of his team.

Our town was thrown into a furore of excitement last Thursday evening about six o'clock over the suicide of Mrs. Sarah Mason, wife of Byron C. Mason. Herself, husband, Mr. Mason's brother, W. A. Mason, and family and several other families were camping at Cold Springs, Hamilton. Mrs. Mason left the company about 4 p. m., and came home with her adopted son, a small boy. She put her horse in the barn, told the boy to go and play with a neighbor boy, went in the house, cut her throat with a razor and severed the arteries in her wrists with the same instrument, then went out of the porch door, leaving a trail of blood, opened the cistern, which was full of water, and plunged in headforemost. The opening being too small for her body to pass, she was found a few minutes later hanging suspended in the cistern. An inquest was held, but no new facts were elicited. No positive cause is known. Her funeral took place from the Disciple church last Sunday.

ASHLEY.

The Methodist people are making arrangements to complete their church.

A number of our citizens drove to Hamilton Sunday to attend the picnic.

Frank Clark, the grocer, supplies his customers with milk since G. W. Park sold out.

The Christain church is fast being completed and will in a short time be ready for dedication.

The Ashley Milling Company is having a rush. They do splendid work and pay the highest market price for all grains.

The commencement exercises were well attended last week, the audience being the largest that had ever assembled in the hall.

John W. Doty has the contract for building the walks on the school grounds. John is a good workman and no one need fear but that a good job will be done.

Card of Thanks.

Rev. D. B. Keller and family desire by this means to express their appreciation of sympathy and kindness of friends during their recent affliction and bereavement. The choir will please accept thanks for music rendered.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING.

ERECTED IN 1894.

AUBURN'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Her Unequaled Advantages in Point of Facilities, Instructors and Location.

As the time approaches for the opening of our public schools, a short article on its many advantages will be appreciated. Many who are not familiar with the unusual advantages offered here will be interested in reading something of them, and in seeing, as well So, we give here correct photographic views of both the Main Building, the one that has been in use for some time, and the new "High School Building," the one just completed and which will be occupied now for the first time. They are buildings to be proud of, and reflect great credit on our school board and our people. Anyone who looks on these will feel assured that the school sentiment in Auburn is just what it should be, to put our schools at the highest point of efficiency. The excellent work done here already by Mr. Harrison is well known and needs no comment. It speaks for itself in a way no words can. And the able assistance of Mr. Coe's department will be amply secured in the choice of Mr. Teeters as his successor In point of location, being centrally situated and reached by rail from six directions, we offer many advantages.

Auburn Public Schools open September 3d, under the following organization:

SCHOOL BOARD.

Edward Baker, President; H. C. Shull, Secretary; M. Boland, Treasurer.

Superintendent, B. B. Harrison Office in High School Building.

TEACHERS.

High School Building: J. C. Teeters, Principal of High School; Helen M. Servoss, A. Grammar Department.

Main Building: Lydia Teeters, B. Grammar Department; Della Weaver, Fifth Year, South Section; Mary Teeters, Fifth Year, North Section; Nellie Buckley, Fourth Year; Laura Sawvel, Third Year; Lila Baker, Second Year; Jennie B. Clifton, First Year.

Ward Building: Lida Ettinger, Third and Fourth Years; Maggie Buckley, First and Second Years.

The High School and Grammar Departments will occupy rooms on the first floor of our new High School Building. These rooms, together with the recitation room, Laboratory and Library, have been furnished in a manner to correspond with the building. There are few schools in the state that will enjoy superior accommodations. The culture and inspiration coming from such delightful surroundings will exert silently, but no less certainly their wholesome influence. The coming classes are to be congratulated that these blessings are theirs to enjoy and we trust to appreciate and improve. Our young men, especially, ought to realize that the longer they remain in the schools, improving its advantages, and keep out of the already overcrowded ranks of laborers, the better it will be for themselves and all concerned. The signs of the times all say, Remain in the schools as long as you can. As our High Schools cover the ground between the common schools and our colleges we wish especially to invite the attention of advanced students and graduates of our country schools to the unsurpassed advantages of Auburn's High School for preparing for college or taking advanced studies.

Mr. J. C. Teeters, our new High School principal, has traversed the entire course himself, and is therefore eminently qualified to guide others. Mr. Teeters graduated from the Auburn High School class of 1885. In 1891 he graduated from Purdue in the course of civil engineering. He is a practical civil engineer, having been engaged extensively in surveying, bridge construction and in drafting for several eminent geologists. In 1893, he also graduated from the classical course of Oberlin College. He taught two years in Purdue and two years in Oberlin College. Mr. Teeters is a splendid type of modern college training. Having been captain of Indiana's champion football team and having figured conspicuously in athletics at Oberlin, he is enthusiastic for physical culture and will give due attention to this feature of school work here. He has been in practical contact with all phases of public and college school work and understands fully the demands of higher education.

Helen M. Servoss, who has charge of the A. Grammar Department, comes to us highly recommended from Peru. She has been a successful teacher in the Peru schools and has recently made special preparation by taking the Teachers' Training Course in our State Normal.

Miss Mary Teeters has charge of a Fifth Year grade. Miss Teeters is well known as the efficient cashier and bookkeeper af Harter's store for several years and recently as a successful teacher in the Garrett schools.

The others are old teachers in the Auburn schools and their past success gives assurance of their future.

We can commend our schools to non-resident students and assure them that not only the school officials, but all our citizens will welcome them to our midst.

MAIN BUILDING.

Erected in 1882 to take the place of one on same site erected in 1876 and burned in 1880.

Street Fair at Butler.

The Butler street fair takes place Sept. 4, 5 and 6. There will be trotting and other races and bicycle races in the streets. There will be a baby show on Tuesday, at which a prize will be given. The first evening there will be an illuminated bicycle parade, second evening a grand concert of 100 voices, and the third evening there will be fireworks. Each evening a balloon ascension. All free. All are invited to wait for the Butler street fair and then come and enjoy it. 33

The St. Joe Gravel Road.

The board of commissioners met here Monday to consider the St. Joe and Spencerville gravel road. In the forenoon, however, they were called out to inspect one of the new bridges, about which there had been some misunderstanding. So the gravel road matter was put off till afternoon. When they did meet, they found a large number of farmers present who opposed the road, as it did not benefit them or was too expensive. In the afternoon, the board met and heard argument. As their room was too small, they moved up into the court room. Judge McClellan represented the petitioners and W. L. Penfield and C. E. Emanuel, the remonstrants. The arguments, for and against, were presented, and after some time taken in presentation, the board decided against the petitioners, on the ground that due notice had not been given, and that a majority of the men who would have to pay had not signed the petition. Judge McClellan gave notice of an appeal to the circuit court.

Mrs. L. V. Rush, now in Chicago, sends us a paper containing an obituary notice of Mr. Forward, which we publish in full, as they had many acquaintances in this county.

The Fayette Normal University is a school with a purpose. Those who are most familiar with its work speak in the highest terms of its excellent methods and equipments.

"There is a Salve for every wound." We refer to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, cures burns, bruises, cuts, indolent scores, as a local application in the nostrils it cures catarrh, and always cures piles.

The two new cement crossings on South Main are raised up too high at the middle point. Don't you think so? The one next to Kruger's looks as if it had been riding a bicycle in the fashionable way.

G. H. Yeebera and wife brought home a fine lot of fish on their return last Thursday, from Lake George. They made a handsome "divide" with the editor's family, so that we know what we are talking about.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Robbins, Miss Maud Thorley, of Findlay, Ohio, Miss Nellie Barns, Ed. Robbins and Walter Hartman went Friday to Clear Lake, returning Tuesday afternoon. They report a very pleasant time.

"I always objected to Harry's smoking in the house, but since he began using Kessler Bros.' Receipt, I let him smoke in any room. They are so fragrant."

The musical, banquet and social to be given one week from next Monday evening in connection with the County Teachers' Institute will furnish an evening's enjoyment that every citizen of the town and vicinity should take advantage of.

To make fine photos and neatly frame pictures, it takes a man with an artistic taste and practical experience. To get the best satisfaction, patronize one who makes a specialty of his own line of business. J. G. Clapp's specialties are fine photos and frames.

Bishop Vincent said, "Col. Geo. W. Bain is a man of superior ability. You need not fear to put him on any platform in America." And Henri Watterson, of the Louisville Courier Journal says, "he is every inch a true man and his views are tempered with kindness."

The fall term of the Elkhart Institute will begin Aug. 21, and continue until Oct. 26th, '94. Instruction thorough and eminently practical. Both sexes and all grades admitted. Address the Secretary, Dr. H. A. Mumaw, Elkhart, Ind., for announcement giving full information. 30-33

Frank Leighty, a Noble county young man, was killed by lightning in the rain that came up last Friday forenoon. He was standing under a tree to keep from getting wet. Leighty was one of a party of Regulators who were hunting through the woods for burglars who had broken into and robbed a store at Lisbon.

The Press editor in commenting on what we said about his false statement that "no one knows what the debt of Dekalb county is," admitted that he got the COURIER that contained the sworn statement of the auditor, showing to a cent what the debt is. In other words, that he made a false statement knowingly. Comment is unnecessary.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.—The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Robbins & McCord. tf

A. Lewis and Joe Robbins tried their horses' speed on Main street last Friday evening, "which was against the rule." Mr. Lewis, realizing that both were liable to a fine, came back up town and told Marshal Baker to proceed, as he knew it subjected him to a fine. We believe it cost each, all told about $7,000, one being fined by 'Squire Walborn and the other by 'Squire Ross.

A queer thing is reported by Mr. Yingling, as having happened in Butler township. We give the name of the man who brought the news, as it is so much out of the common, that we do not feel justified in publishing it without. But he gives it for a fact that being down at the Tumberlin homestead in Butler township the other day, Mr. T. called his attention to several forest trees in the creek bottom near there, that were torn up and shivered in a queer way. They seem to be torn by some force, coming from the earth, and the only way to account for it seems to be, that electricity did it, the current seeming to have come from the ground and passing upwards. Seven trees they say have been splintered in this way.

Hon. E. D. Hartman has made his residence over into one of the most convenient and comfortable in town, with all the modern improvements. It is made one story higher and so changed outside and in that it is in every way as good as a new one.

Do you want to spend a half hour in solid enjoyment and feel at peace with all mankind? Spend 5 cents for a Young America, sit down in a shady corner and take a quiet smoke.

DIED.—Elizabeth Laura, youngest child of S. B. and Minnie Hanna, on Tuesday afternoon. Funeral services at the residence on South Jackson street, Thursday p. m. at 4 o'clock. Interment in Woodlawn. The little one was 3 months and 7 days old, and was a patient sufferer for about 10 days.

Hugh K. Davis was last week nominated for state treasurer by the republicans of Texas. Of course, he will not be elected, but it shows that the DeKalb man is still pushing to the front. He is a son of Joseph Davis, a brother of John L. Davis, and who died many years ago. His mother, Mrs Abby, lives in Auburn at present.

Sam P. Jones, the noted Evangelist, said in one of his sermons at the great Canadian Chautauqua, "Having heard the prominent orators of our day, I am free to declare that I reckon Robert McIntyre, of Chicago, the finest popular speaker on this continent." Gen. R. A. Alger, ex-governor of Michigan.—"I heard McIntyre's lecture. It is a thrilling picture and will stir everyone fortunate enough to hear it."

Dr. J. W. Younge, the Ft. Wayne sensational doctor has been whipped again. This time it was by Gart Shober, editor of the slangy and sensational sheet, the Monday Times, published in that city. The Times, with the exception of its superior literary ability, is of the same sort as the Garrett Clipper, and patronized by a similar crowd for a similar reason. It has been lampooning the Doctor for some time. Then the Doctor retaliated by sending out bogus clippings of newspapers, with rotten stuff about Shober. The result is the licking last Friday. We take it that both men deserved a licking.

John Robbins tells a good one on our republican "reform" board of city fathers. They wanted more hose for the use of the fire department. Mr. Robbins deals in that line, and went before the board, at one of their recent meetings, to give them his prices, etc. He explained to them the prices and quality of his goods and as they decided to get the best, he gave them a price of 65 cents. They then said they would get the prices of other dealers and so appointed Ober, the member from the first ward, to attend to this part of the work. In a few days after this, Mr. Robbins, meeting Ober, asked how the matter stood, Ober said he had bought the hose, and paid 60 cents for it. It turned out that he had bought a quality that Robbins would have sold to the board for 50 cents, and so the town was cheated 10 cents a foot, by this board of "able business men" that were lauded to the skies before election. Besides, it appears that Ober really had no authority to purchase the hose, but was instructed to get prices, and submit to the board. Query; If a set of "good business" city dads do such things, what would we expect of ordinary men?

Mrs. Polly Hosler went to Cedarville Wednesday, to spend a week or so with friends and relatives.

Miss Bertha Shaffer has been lying very low for the past week at her home on South Main street. Her condition remains the same as we go to press.

One of the COURIER'S latest subscribers, is also the tallest. F. A. Krueger, stands six feet two inches in his stocking feet and for all we know is liable to grow taller. We think it is Fred's disposition to work, that made him grow. He puts in most of his time ditching, and by steady work, makes it pay. If he can't get a soft job, he gets the best he can, and keeps at it, and don't grumble. This is the kind of "laboring men" that build up a country.

Two employes of the Philadelphia View Co. arrived in town last Friday and at once proceeded to take snap shots at all the leading business houses and buildings, beginning at Hoff's grocery on West Seventh street. Their way of of doing business is, to take the picture, and finish up one of them, then show it to the one who owns the building etc, and then, if he likes it, and cares to invest, he can get an engraved plate of it to use. Or he can get the photograph instead, if he prefers. Of course he is under no obligations to accept either. The artists have cameras, etc, on purpose for work of this kind, and having great experience in such work, no doubt get good views.

The Times foolishly published the letter of James Weeks, who stopped his paper, as any man has a right to do. It is well known that large numbers of the Times are sent out free to anyone who will take it from the office. But even at this rate, Mr. Weeks did not want it and gave his reasons. In the letter were several mis-spelled words, and the Times took its revenge by printing these as they stood and then calling attention to them. This was very small business, especially for one whose education is equally defective. In the very same issue the Times spells "Malitia" three times, and has "niggar" and many others like it. Then he tells his readers that "Willie Wiles and her drove home." If Weeks owned a paper, he could retaliate by publishing almost any of Bliss' articles.

We are afraid Editor Willis is not well enough posted on history to represent such an intelligent county as DeKalb, in the legislature. Last week, in speaking of the Defiance centennial celebration, he said, "Gen. Mad Anthony Wayne's victory was one worthy of the occasion." Course. But this wasn't the occasion. The celebration at Defiance was to commemorate the location of a fort there. Gen. Wayne reached the confluence of the Maumee and Auglaize rivers, Aug. 8, 1794, and concluded to build a fort at that point. So he at once set about the work, and soon had it in shape to occupy. The 15th of the same month he started down the Maumee and on the 20th, near where Perrysburg, Wood county, Ohio, now stands, he scored that "victory" over the Indians.

The Schubert Symphony Club and Lady Quartette are coming this way and we may have a chance to hear this excellent company here about Sept. 8. There is probably no musical company travelling that gives a program of such wide range as the Schuberts, and their special strong point is the great variety of entertaining features contained in their performance. The Schubert Lady Quartette is well known to be one of the best; the Symphony Club of banjos, mandolins and guitars is bewitchingly pleasing, besides they have A. 1. readers, cornet and violin solos, string quintette, and the most wonderful of all five-year-old child artists, Master Tommy Purcell, who sings, recites and plays the violin by note like an old veteran. Our readers need look no further than the Schuberts for a chance to spend a pleasant and beneficial evening.

Their Fiftieth Annual Meeting.

The church of the Disciples of Christ hold their fiftieth annual meeting for DeKalb county, August 24 to 28 at Hamilton's Grove 2½ miles north of St. Joe. Hon. Z. T. Sweeney, ex-consul-general to Turkey, will do the preaching. The basket dinner will be a necessary feature.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Miss Flora Hoffman's class will give a musical recital at the Presbyterian church August 24, in the evening.

The nickel social of the presbyterian church will meet with Mrs. W. H. Rakestraw, on West Seventh street, on Friday afternoon of this week. A good attendance is desired, as there is important business that needs immediate attention.

There will be preaching at the Lutheran church next Sunday at the usual hour, both morning and evening.

The Junior Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church will give a missionary entertainment at the church next Sunday evening, to which all are cordially invited. They will be assisted by the Y. P. S. C. E.

The "Kansas City Sunday Sun" is the present name of the old Chicago Sunday Sun that was not long ago suppressed by the U. S. postoffice authorities and forbidden from the mails. Why its present location in Kansas City should wash it white as snow, we do not understand. On Saturday evenings one may see a dozen boys and young men who have just been paid their week's wages, standing along the streets reading this vicious and immoral sheet. It is filled with the latest personal scandals and crimes against morality and decency from all points in the country. That is what these young men buy it for, just as the older ones read the Garrett Clipper. In fact the two papers are very much alike, except that the spelling, the grammatical construction and the general literary character of the matter in the Sunday Sun is vastly superior to that in the Clipper. But they are wonderfully alike in the amount and character of their "rape and seduction articles." Neither has any legal right in the mails.

Reichelderfer-Meese.

Thursday evening Aug. 9, 1894, at the rooms of the bride's father, Rev. W. L. Meese, occured the happy union of Mr. Julius Orville Reichelderfer and Miss Lettie Meese, The marriage ceremony was performed by the bride's father in the presence of a few of their most intimate friends. Mr. Reichelder is a machinist in the shops at Garrett and is a young man of high character and brilliant prospects. Miss Meese is one of Auburn's most estimable young ladies. For several years she held the position of pipe organist at the First M. E. church here, and was an esteemed worker in the various societies of that church. They will make their home in Garrett. The COURIER joins their host of other friends in wishing them a long and happy life.

WHEAT has been selling at a figure so much below the cost per pound of oats that it is a wonder anyone is feeding oats. FIRE insurance statistics show that the last seventeen years there have been sixty flour and grist mill fires in Massachusetts, with a property loss of $242,551. In 1893 six flour and grist mill fires are reported, with an insurance loss of $12,800, of which $4,882 was paid. The flour mills of Massachusetts are so few in number and generally so small that the experience of underwriters in that State cannot be taken as a criterion.

IT is not very long ago that the hog was hardly known as a farm product out of the great corn regions, but while the porker is becoming less of a roving rooter and more civilized than in the earlier time, he is taking possession of all parts of the land. In mountain regions West, including New Mexico, the idea is to convert alfalfa into pork, and in California use is made of Egyptian corn, which is said to make a finer grade of pork than Indian corn.

ST. LOUIS GROCER: One of the howling, demagogic organs is having its annual conniption fit anent the "disproportion between the price of wheat and the price of flour." There are a lot of vascular chumps who imagine that the farmers' wheat, bran, straw, sticks, dirt and all, is ground into the best patent flour without cost to the miller, and that he undoubtedly steals his barrels and bags. It gives us a tired feeling.

THE English Government report of an investigation into the influenza epidemic of the last four years regards the proof of the contagiousness of the disease from person to person as overwhelming, and denies that it is transported through the atmosphere—another warning of the folly of unnecessary contact with the sick, or contact without precautions. An eminent laryngologist attributes the contagiousness to the breath.

THE use of corn meal in Europe is increasing, partly owing to the efforts our Agricultural Department has made to increase the foreign demand for this great American staple. The Italians are the latest converts to the new food. They now use corn meal in making polenta, instead of using ground chestnuts, which was the material formerly employed. The corn meal is cheaper, and better, because not so hard to digest as meal from any kind of nuts.

THE Czar's method of determining whether or not the path of the royal train is beset by bombs is excellent in its way. A trusty subject is sent ahead on a heavy tricycle to exploit. If the Czar's engineer observes a rain of faithful subject, accompanied by an occasional spoke and fragments of pneumatic tire, he knows that something is the matter and shuts off steam. It is a great scheme, and while apt to thin out the populace, is promotive of the longevity that is a fad with the Czar.

A MISSOURI entomologist informs the public that quail, lady bugs, and frogs destroy hosts of chinch bugs. He says that the chinch bug does not become a grandmother in twenty-four hours. As to so-called locusts, he says they are harvest flies, and that only the females do the eating, the males having no digestive apparatus. If female mosquitoes are the only ones that bite, and female locusts are the only ones that destroy crops, is it not well to beware a little of femininity in general?

THERE are some responsibilities assumed by the French newspaper from which his American brothers are exempt. A reporter of the Socialist journal, La Libre Parole, for instance, has just been designated by lot to challenge M. Denoix, of the French Chamber of Deputies, for an insulting remark about the press during the debate on the new anti-anarchist law. If a French duel meant anything we would commiserate our confrere; but it involves nothing more serious nowadays than getting up an hour or two earlier than usual.

WE incline to the belief that it pays for retail grocers to advertise. We believe that there is as large a field for judicious advertising in the retail grocery as in any other line of business. It pays to let people know what you have to offer, to acquaint them with new attractions, to advise them of some bargain or other which you are able to offer them—and, above all, to let them know that you are enterprising and looking out for an opportunity to please them. But judgment should be used. It is folly to advertise goods out of season. Good judgment and printers' ink go well together.—New England Grocer.

A GOOD deal more, in the way of exceedingly interesting information as to how railroads are managed, would be discovered if reputable men were appointed by the courts to act as receivers. The usual method is to appoint the man who brought the road to bankruptcy its receiver. He will not lay bare the frauds and blunders. But what an honest and impartial receiver might reveal is shown in the case of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe. To be sure the receiver, who had been its president, never unearthed a thing or breathed a word. It was an independant accountant working in the interest of bond and stockholders who discovered crooked accounts, illegal rebates, and other evidences of clever financiering in the Santa Fe's books.

CONGREGATIONAL singing is a proper and laudable feature of divine worship. There is something paganish in the spectacle of several hundred people remaining silent and professing to praise God through the medium of a high-priced quartet choir. At the same time there should be an effort to make congregational singing tuneful rather than discordant, and with this end in view the recent advice of a Portland, Me., preacher is applicable to all churches. "It will add to the harmony of the occasion," said he, "if those of you who know how to sing will sing loudly, and those who don't know how to sing will sing low." This seems to fit the case exactly. The volume of sound does not by any means indicate the devotion of the singer. It is merely a rather superfluous guaranty of good faith.

Care of Small Things.

An old Philadelphian tells a story illustrating the manner in which the sons of the house of Drexel, the well-known bankers, were brought up. Upon one occasion, returning from the Barbadoes, he brought back a considerable quantity of gold and silver tied up in small bags, as was the custom, and had them carried to the banking office of the Drexels for sale. The bags were emptied out on the counter, and the coins carefully counted and set aside in separate piles, in order to calculate the correct sum for which the bank check should be drawn. After this was done old Drexel took from inside his desk one of the feather quill pens then generally used, and with a sheet of white paper he slowly swept off that portion of the counter upon which the coin had been handled, and as carefully shook the paper into a tin box. The depositor could not see any dust on the paper, so he smilingly asked Mr. Drexel what was gained by the sweepings, and was greatly astonished at the old gentleman's kindly reply: "Why, young man, it brings me in a clean profit of one thousand or fifteen hundred dollars a year."

COREA AND COREANS.

COUNTRY FOR WHICH JAPAN AND CHINA CONTEND.

Peculiarities of a People Who for Ages Lived to Themselves—Their Manners and Religion—Dignity of Corean Officials—All Labor Done by Hand.

Has Been a Battle Ground.

The tangle into which China and Japan have managed to get has brought into prominence the queer country which, for ages, was known only by name, and, even in our own time, is so little visited by foreigners that the information concerning it is scarce and not altogether reliable. Only a few years have elapsed since commercial intercourse was opened with the Coreans, and even after it was established, so poor were the people, so imperfect was the development of the natural resources of their country, that for a considerable time there was grave doubt in the minds of the merchants whether the business would pay. As, however, the Coreans, little by little, ascertained what foreigners wanted to buy and the prices they were willing to pay, the native cupidity of the Oriental mind was excited, and overcame the repugnance to foreigners, and now the peninsula has more than once been crossed by Europeans in search of business or pleasure.

A COREAN GENTLEMAN.

From all accounts the Coreans are a curious people, having many of the peculiarities of both Chinese and Japanese. Evidently of Mongolian origin, they nevertheless differ from the Chinese in so many respects that they can hardly be called Chinese, while the Japanese utterly disclaim all family relationship to them, regarding them as too barbarous even to be considered in the light of cousins. Nevertheless they look like Chinese, and, in spite of their long segregation from the society of other nations, they possess much of the shrewdness that causes the Japanese to be considered the "Yankees of the East." That is, the educated part of the Corean nation, for among the populace little distinction can be observed between them and the people who surround them on the Asiatic side, or who are their next-door neighbors across the narrow body of water that separates them from the Island Empire.

There is one remarkable point of similarity which almost instantly impresses every visitor—the populousness of the country. Corea has about 80,000 square miles of area, a little larger than Missouri, but in that territory over 12,000,000 of almond-eyed semi-Celestials manage to squeeze themselves and after a fashion seem to enjoy life in their own peculiar way, without either appearing to know or to care what goes on outside of their little peninsula, which projects from the Chinese Empire like a wart. Wherever one goes in Corea there are Coreans big and little in immense numbers, so that to travelers who witness the poverty of the country it is a constant source of wonder how the people live. The answer to this conundrum is easy; they do not live—they exist. A handful of rice and a mouthful of tea or water constitute the day's rations for the average Corean, and if to this be added a few persimmons or an egg, he is in clover, and for days will remember the auspicious occasion on which his inside was comfortably filled.

A COREAN JOSS-HOUSE.

Corea is full of cities, if the expression is allowed to be used with regard to an aggregation of huts on the banks of a stream, and the cities are full of people who make a living, though nobody knows how. In dress they are very similar to the Chinese, save in the matter of hat. They have the same baggy breeches, the same plenitude of shirts worn outside, and on state occasions they are arrayed in robes that would put Solomon in all his glory to the blush; but nowhere outside of Corea can such hats be seen as are sported by the Coreans on every-day occasions. They are like a combination of a Mexican sombrero and a Welsh stove-pipe, with appurtenances and belongings peculiarly their own. The foundation consists of a truncated cone and a base piece about as wide and as graceful as the rim of the straw hat that decorates the fashionable young man during the present season, but, in addition, there are flaps and ear pieces, and things like the wings of a Roman helmet; there are bands and straps and other matters, the complication of which strikes the beholder dumb with amazement. These are the every-day hats, for on Corean Sundays an affair even more imposing is mounted, in size and shape closely resembling an umbrella. Of wicker or bamboo it is equally adapted to keep off the rain and keep out the sun, and with this portentous head-piece the Corean trots about greatly impressed with an idea of his own good looks and importance.

FUSAUKAI, A COREAN VILLAGE.

But this is not the only use he makes of bamboo in the matter of dress, for during the summer season he has a bamboo frame fitted rather closely to the body, and over this he puts his clothes. Thus he is inside of a cage, which prevents his clothes from sticking to him, and in the hottest weather he remains cool and comfortable, for, in spite of his odd headgear, he has a long head and knows how to use it.

His clothes do not cost him much money, for the simple reason that he has not much to spend, so he makes that little go a great way, and has learned to utilize materials that in other countries are almost unknown.

There is paper, for instance. The Coreans possess some secrets with regard to paper making that are unknown even to their ingenious neighbors, the Chinese. They can make paper of such toughness that it will resist many months of wear, and by a process of oiling it they render it impervious to water, and so make overcoats that will stand any amount of rain. True, they cannot be mended, for when they begin to go they go all over and all at once, but as they only cost about a quarter they are easily replaced—if the Corean happens to have the quarter.

A GINSENG PLANTATION.

His other clothes are mostly cotton, and the chief peculiarity about them is the fact that they are always being washed. The Coreans have no soap, and yet they expect the women to keep the clothing in good condition, and the toiling creatures manage to accomplish this herculean task by washing the clothes four or five times and then pounding them with a mallet made especially for the purpose. This takes time as well as labor, and the monotonous tapping that goes on forever in a city comes to be regarded by the Corean visitor as one of the indispensabilities, without which a Corean community would seem unnatural. When the women are not engaged in beating the clothes they are busy at some other household employment, but save when purchasing necessary articles or food, are seldom seen abroad. They do not always stay in the house, however, for in Corean cities certain hours after dark are set apart for the women to take their exercise, and during that time all men are forbidden to appear on the street under penalty of arrest. This police regulation is very strictly obeyed, too, for in Corea there is no such thing as a jury system, the rights of the individual are very lightly regarded, and justice is meted out in the most summary fashion. An offender in the manner just indicated, for instance, is taken at once to the station house, and the officer in command decides that a man out of doors when the women are taking their walks deserves a thrashing, no matter whether he was doing anything or not, so the thrashing is promptly administered, the offender is detained until the women's hour is past, then ordered about his business, and thus are the demands of the law fulfilled.

PORT HAMILTON IN COREA.

Farming in Corea is of the most primitive description. The multitude of people forbids the employment of labor-saving machinery, and all operations, of whatever nature, are carried on by hand. Even the irrigation of crops, a process so purely mechanical that it might be supposed some sort of simple device would be constructed to obviate the necessity of hand labor, is done by lifting the water from one pool to another by means of a large scoop, a succession of able-bodied Coreans shoveling the water as elsewhere sand is shoveled. After the crops are planted they are watched, a small tower being constructed to overlook the fields of a whole neighborhood, and the farmers take turns in guarding their property from the depredations of thieves and hungry animals. In the case of fruit farms, this precaution is very necessary, as fruit is one of the great staples of Corea, and almost any kind generally finds ready sale at good prices. The list of fruits is long. On the southern side of the peninsula there is a wonderful abundance of grapes, apples and pears, and everywhere in Corea the persimmon flourishes and forms one of the staple articles of diet. Large, luscious and of several varities, not all need the advent of frost to render them eatable, some kinds being ripened by the sun, like apples or peaches. The crops of nuts also form an article of export; walnuts, chestnuts, pine nuts and many kinds of small seeds being carefully picked and preserved in various ways to be sent across the line to the Chinese. Of the field crops, beans and rice are the most important, the former being used not only as food for man, but also for the small, hardy ponies which are employed by the rich and official classes as a means of transportation. Not always, however. A Corean official has a large stock of dignity, and among the various devices by which this is upheld is the idea that it is degrading to walk anywhere. So every official is provided with a litter and a number of bearers in proportion to the weight of his dignity. He may walk about his house without sacrifice of personal self-respect, or even, on certain occasions, when he is, so to speak off duty, he may walk through the court yard, but every public appearance must be in his litter. The appointments of this apparatus for the conservation of dignity are very carefully fixed, as also the length of the poles and the number of carriers, and an official of the highest rank, a minister of the kingdom, has the right to have, under his litter, a single wheel, which does not rest on the ground, which takes no part of the weight from the bearers, but is simply a mark of rank. Whatever the number of bearers and attendants, however, it is always liberal, even the petty governors of towns being often attended by 200 or 300 men, who, with banners, flags and other devices, march in procession whenever the governor goes abroad, while runners speed before, repeating his titles and dignities and ordering all persons to clear the road.

WATCHING A MELON PATCH.

THE COREAN EMBASSADOR AT WASHINGTON.

The leading features of every Corean city are the palace of the governor and the temple of the presiding deity, and it is often a matter of difficulty to decide which is of the more importance, for, in order that the dignity of the government may be properly maintained, the former is frequently more pretentious than the latter. As the Corean religion is modeled after that of the Chinese, so is the architecture of Corea based on that of China. It is not a whit less pretentious, either, for the Coreans are a proud people, and as they are politically subject to China, they take great pride in doing what they can to prove that the inferiority is only political. So in every place of consequence there is a temple or joss house, where incense is daily burned before the holy images and where the manes of deceased ancestors are satisfied with rice and such dainties as they are supposed to enjoy. But the Corean does not allow what little religion he has to interfere with business. With him religion is one thing and business is quite another, and his religion does not either forbid or prevent his stealing anything he can lay his hands on. At the times of the great annual festivals his piety takes the form of prayers, offerings of food to the dead, eating, drinking, and listening to music and dramatic entertainments. Like his religion and his art, both music and drama are borrowed from China; the former is as ear-splitting and the latter is as lengthy and non-intelligible as anything in the same line the Flowery Kingdom is able to offer.

But for his geographical position and the fact that he has several good harbors, that are coveted by Russia, England and Japan, the Corean would be permitted to vegetate in seclusion to the end of time, but circumstances have forced him to the front, and he must now take part in the march of human events whether he will or no.

A COREAN SOLDIER.

THE MASON SPIDER.

The Wonderful Nest This Intelligent Creature Constructs.

The mason spider, a native of the tropics and found in large numbers in the West Indies, uses a wonderful intelligence in building its nest. This nest is formed of very hard clay, colored deeply with brown oxide of iron. It is constructed in the form of a tube, about one inch in diameter and six or seven long. Their first labor is to line it, which they do with a uniform tapestry of orange-colored web, of a texture rather thicker than fine paper. This lining is useful for two important purposes: it prevents the walls of the house from falling down, and also, by being connected with the door, it enables the spider to know what is going on above, for the entire web vibrates when one part is touched. The nest is supplied with an ingeniously contrived door. It is composed of twelve or more layers of web, similar to that with which the inner part of the nest is lined; these are laid very closely one over the other, and managed so that the inner layers are the broadest, the others gradually diminishing in size, except near the hinge, which is about an inch longer; and as all the layers are united there, and prolonged into the tube, it is necessarily the firmest and strongest portion of the entire structure. The materials are so elastic, that the hinge shuts as if it had a spring, and of its own accord. Should the door be entirely taken away, another will soon be put in its place. These spiders hunt their prey at night, and devour them in their nests, which are generally found scattered all over with the fragments of their repasts. A pair of spiders, with thirty or forty young ones, often live together in one nest such as we have described.

MASON SPIDER AND NEST.

Music Composed While You Wait

It would certainly appear that when a man may run in and have a song set to music while he waits, for fifty cents or one dollar, the end of the century is getting pretty close at hand. There are places in New York where this is done daily. By the side of and in competition with this modern composer the late Beethoven, Chopin, et al. would not be "in it." Musical composition at these places is a mere matter of time—you rush upstairs with your verses or idea, the composer looks at the clock, seizes a pencil and blank score, mounts the piano stool, and goes at it. When he gets through, which in a measure depends upon the difficulty or ease with which he can satisfy you, the time is taken, you pay your money and depart with the composition. The time charge is about that of a bricklayer, printer, and other notable arts.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Acid Test.

The simplest way to tell iron from steel is to pour on the metal a drop of nitric acid, and allow it to act for one minute. On rinsing with water a grayish-white stain will be seen if the metal is iron; a black one if it is steel.

Minnesota is not a very old State, but she has already more than $5,000,000 invested in public buildings, and $10,000,000 in her school fund, with 1,000,000 acres of university land yet unsold.

"WHAT's that noise?" asked Willie, as the owls began to hoot. "It's a howl," said his English nurse. "Poh!" cried Willie. "I know that, but what is it that's howling?"—Harper's Bazar.

FOGG—Oh, you are too hard on Filmsey. He has his faults, but there is one good thing about him. Dobbs—And pray what is that? Fogg—He—er—I can't recall it just at this moment.—Tid-Bits.

YOUNG HOUSEKEEPER—Have you a small hand-bellows for blowing the fire? Dealer—Something like that, madam? Young housekeeper—Yes; that will do. If you will fill it with wind and put a cork in the end I'll take it with me.—Life.

GUEST—Will you not give me a kiss, beauteous creature? Waiter girl—Not much do I give you any kiss. Guest (resignedly)—Well, then, you might as well bring me a portion of Schweitzer cheese and a glass of bock beer.—German Joke.

FIRST DETECTIVE—Have you succeeded in locating your suspected anarchist? Second detective—Yes; I have him dead to rights so far as the house is concerned. But, you see, he is a Mormon, and I don't know exactly which bed he is under.—Merchant Traveler.

CUSTOMER—What do you charge for arsenic? Drug clerk (suspiciously) What do you want it for? Customer—I am a French candy manufacturer. Drug clerk (suspicions allayed)—Oh, I beg pardon, sir; I thought perhaps you wanted it for yourself.—New York Sun.

"CHARLEY will soon be home again, fresh from his studies, won't he?" said a fond mother to her spouse. "I don't think, my dear, that Charley's studies can have the effect of making him any fresher than he was when he left," was the old gentleman's unfeeling reply.—Cincinnati Sun.

REPORTER—Are you going to work to-day, Pat? Pat—Sure, I dunno. My ould woman says she'll break me head if I don't, and the union men will break me head if I do. Sure, these are hard times for dacint men. I think I'll just take me chances with the ould woman.—New York Tribune.

OLD GENTLEMAN—Do you think, sir, that you are able to support my daughter without continually hovering on the verge of bankruptcy? Suitor—Oh, yes, sir; I am sure I can. Old Gentleman—Well, that's more than I can do. Take her and be happy.—New York Weekly.

"HERE'S a story about a coin that a man marked with his initials coming back to him after an absence of twenty-three years. Queer, wasn't it?" "Oh, I don't know. I passed a coin in a bazar in Constantinople thirty years ago, and——" "It came back to you?" "The same afternoon; it was counterfeit."—Philadelphia Call.

A GENTLEMAN enters a telegraph office: "I beg pardon, but as I was coming along this afternoon I saw myriads of flies settled on your wires. Can you suggest any explanation?" "About what time was it, sir?" "About four o'clock." "Ah, that accounts for it; that's the time I send quotations for sugar and honey."—French Joke.

Only Snow.

Not a few well-authenticated anecdotes go to show that even the people who enjoy the advantages of travel are often sadly unenlightened.

A lady who had recently returned from a Mediterranean trip says that as the ship was leaving the harbor of Athens a well-dressed lady passenger approached the captain, who was pacing the deck, and pointing to the distant hills covered with snow, asked, "what is that white stuff on the hills, Captain?"

"That is snow, madam," answered the captain.

"Now is it really?" remarked the lady. "I thought so, but a gentleman told me it was Greece."

Women's Leap Year Privileges.

In the year 1288 a statute was published by the Scotch Parliament ordaining that during the reign of "Her Maist Blessit Majestie Margaret" every maiden of high or low estate should have liberty to speak to the man she liked. If he refused to take her to be his wife she should have the privilege of fining him £100 or less, according to his estate, unless he could make it appear that he was betrothed to another woman, in which case he would be free to refuse. After the death of Margaret the women of Scotland became clamorous for their privileges, and to appease them another act of Parliament allowing them to propose every fourth year was passed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Submarine Upheavals.

In the very middle of the Atlantic ocean, at about the place where the twenty-fifth meridian from London crosses the equator, there is a spot, far beneath the waves, which is almost continually agitated by submarine earthquake shocks. These are often of such violence as to hurl great columns of water high in air or to make waves that are a standing menace to vessels coming in that vicinity.—St. Louis Republic.

There is a Woman

in Philadelphia who lived for years in a daily circle of suffering because she thought there was no relief.

Her suffering was caused by female weakness in its worst forms. She had pain in her back and loins, great fatigue from walking, leucorrhœa, and a frequent desire to urinate. All this time relief was close at hand.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her of all weakness and disease, and she is now a different woman. This woman is Mrs. Walter Wilcox, of 736 West St., who advises all women who suffer so from female weaknesses to try it also and be cured. It expels tumors, removes backache, invigorates the system. NOTES MAY BE TAXED

UNITED STATES LEGAL TENDERS NO LONGER EXEMPT.

Greenbacks and National Bank Issues Subjected to Taxation by State Officials—Silver Certificates Included in the Bill.

State Tax on Money.

The only financial legislation accomplished by this Congress, except the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act and the passage of the seigniorage bill, which received the Presidential veto, is the bill to subject to State taxation national bank notes and United States treasury notes, which has passed the House with Senate amendments.

Attempts have been made in nearly every Congress since the war to subject these forms of money to taxation. The bill provides that circulating notes of national banking associations and United States legal-tender notes, and other notes and certificates of the United States payable on demand and circulating or intended to circulate as currency, shall not be exempt from taxation under the laws of any State or Territory, provided that taxation is exercised at the same rate and in the same manner as upon other property or money.

The three acts authorizing the issuance of greenbacks each put in circulation $150,000,000, but the total amount was afterward reduced to $346,000,000—a figure that has remained permanent, although much of the money has been lost or destroyed. Each issuing act declared the greenbacks exempt from taxation by State or municipal authorities, as well as all other obligations of the United States, and under this law are the Sherman notes for the purchase of bullion of $150,000,000, which were issued under the act of 1890. There are in round numbers $500,000,000 of United States notes exempt from taxation.

Against the bill it was argued that it was an infringement upon the sovereignty of the General Government to permit State and municipal authorities to tax its monetary issues, but, on the other hand, it was pointed out that the States were not permitted to discriminate against any forms of money, and that these greenbacks should be placed on the same basis as gold and silver.

CHARGE D'AFFAIRES IN CHINA.

Charles Denby, Jr., Who Now Looks After American Interests.

This country's interests in China just now are in the hands of Charles Denby, Jr., a comparatively young man for such responsibility. He is charge d'affaires in the absence of his father, the Minister to China who is home on furlough. The young diplomate is a graduate of Princeton College, where he was known in the early '80's as one of the brightest, best-natured students in college. In 1885 when the elder Denby received his appointment as Minister to China, the young man was just out of college and expected to follow his father's career and become a lawyer. The chance to go to China as Secretary of the Legation proved too great a temptation. Young Denby went into voluntary exile and has not been home once in the nine years of his service.

CHARLES DENBY JR.

Friends who have visited the legation at Pekin say that the sudden responsibility thrust upon the United States legation will be in good hands. They say that the present charge d'affaires has learned to speak the Chinese language fluently, is on particularly good terms with Li Hung Chang, and that his long experience at the post qualifies him for almost any diplomatic emergency that may arise.

A touch of romance has been added to the situation by the recent announcement of the secretary's engagement to Miss Martha Orr of Evansville, Ind., the former home of the Denbys. Although they had known each other for years, the young people had seen very little of each other until this summer, when Miss Orr visited Pekin as one of a party traveling with the Hon. John W. Foster, ex-Secretary of State. Miss Orr is beautiful, has traveled a great deal and is wealthy. The wedding was to have taken place this fall, but may be delayed if the China-Japan difficulty continues much longer.

RUDOLPH WEBER.

Will Have Charge of an Exploring Expedition to Sumatra.

An interesting scientific exploring expedition to the Island of Sumatra is being arranged by the American Museum of Natural History and the New York Herald. Mr. Rudolph Weber, of the American Museum of Natural History, is the learned gentleman who will be in charge of the expedition. Sumatra lies in the East Indian Archipelago, is almost as large as Texas, and some of its natives are very warlike. This will be the first scientific exploring expedition in its history. Mr. Weber is only 36 years of age, but has already distinguished himself in several departments of science. He has been in the Museum for three years, and was five years in Princeton. He was born near Zurich, Switzerland: studied at the Zurich University, and also at Munich. He believes he can prove that the East Indian Archipelago was at one time a vast continent connected with Asia, and that he can there find traces of the aboriginal man.

LIVES IN ILLINOIS.

The Only Surviving Brother of William Cullen Bryant.

John H. Bryant, of Princeton, Ill., is the only surviving brother of William Cullen Bryant. He was born at Cunningham in 1807, and removed to Illinois in 1831, where he became Justice of the Peace of Putnam County in 1834. He has been twice a member of the Illinois Legislature, and has held other modest offices. Until his sixtieth year Mr. Bryant was a farmer. He has published two volumes of verse which have won him modest fame as a poet. The centennial of the birth of William Cullen Bryant will be celebrated by a festival of poets in the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts on August 16, which his aged brother will attend, if his health permits.

JOHN H. BRYANT.

FOUNDER OF THE G. A. R.

He Is Soon to Be Honored by a Fitting Monument.

All patriotic Americans will be glad to hear that a moment will soon be unveiled at Petersburg, Ill., to Dr. B. F. Stephenson, the founder of the Grand Army of the Republic. It was in 1871 that Dr. Stephenson died, and about eleven years afterward funds began to be raised for the erection of a suitable monument. The work of collection progressed slowly, and only within the past year has it been possible to order the monument. The work is now completed, and in the fall will be unveiled with appropriate ceremonies. It is of extra dark Quincy (Mass.) granite, thirty feet in height. On the base is the name "Stephenson," in large letters in relief. On the front die, "B. F. Stephenson, Founder of the G. A. R. Born 1823. Died 1871." On the front top die is the G. A. R. badge; on the south side a mounted cannon and accessories; on the west side is a dove, with an olive branch in its mouth, encircled in a wreath of oak and laurel; while on the east side is the representation of a soldier's tent. It is the intention to make the unveiling of the monument a national event, and no doubt Grand Army men will be present from all parts of the United States.

THE STEPHENSON MONUMENT.

The career of Col. Stephenson and the story of the organization by him of the order of the G. A. R. at Decatur, Ill., April 6, 1866, are well known. His wife and two daughters are now residents of Petersburg.

A GOSPEL BOAT.

Fitted Out for Evangelistic Work Among the Southern Negroes.

The Seventh-Day Adventists have fitted up a gospel boat to be used in evangelistic work along the Mississippi and its Southern tributaries. The object of the expedition is to carry the gospel to the colored people below Mason and Dixon's line, and this missionary work will be confined principally to this race, though any opportunity to point out the way of salvation to the white people will not be lost. The company will also look after the moral, mental, and physical welfare of these people, and they hope to accomplish a vast amount of good.

The boat is managed by the gentlemen who originated the scheme. They are J. E. White and W. O. Palmer of Battle Creek, Mich., and B. F. Richards of Atlanta, Ga. The boat's company is composed, besides those mentioned, of Mrs. J. E. White, Mrs. W. O. Palmer and daughter, Mrs. B. F. Richards and son, and a colored cook. The boat is seventy-two feet in length and seventeen in width, with upper and lower decks. It is modeled after the old-style Mississippi River sternwheelers, but much more elegantly fitted inside. It is complete in all its appointments, having kitchen, dining, bath, and state rooms, parlor, etc., besides a main cabin, 6x12 feet, a pilot house and general office 12x12 feet, and boiler and engine room. The boat is supplied with hot and cold water throughout, and contains an ice-chest that holds one ton of ice. There are forty-eight windows and fifty-three doors. The upper deck is arranged to seat 250 persons, and there religious services are held.

THE GOSPEL BOAT.

The total cost of the boat was not far from $5,000, and the available cash, when Messrs. Palmer and White began to collect material, was less than $5 apiece. It was built almost entirely by voluntary contributions.

EXPERT ON THE BIKE.

Julian P. Bliss, of Chicago, Has a Notable Record as a Bicyclist.

Bicyclist Julian P. Bliss, of Chicago, who has been doing some notable record breaking at Waltham, Mass., is 21 years old and rides at 122 pounds. He is so small and yet so powerful he has been called the "Pocket Hercules." His strength, endurance and puck are astonishing. Until last season he was unknown outside of Chicago. Now his name and achievements are familiar to bicyclists all over the country. He has defeated such marvels as Zimmerman, Windle and Tyler. At Waltham he lowered the world's one-mile record to 1m. 54 4-5s.

OF "MULLIGAN LETTERS" FAME.

The Man Who Obtained Notoriety in Connection with Blaine.

A man whose life had a strong influence on the career of James G. Blaine died recently in Maynard, Mass., aged 75. It was James Mulligan, whose name in connection with the famous "Mulligan letters" was known all over the country a few years ago.

JAMES MULLIGAN.

Mr. Mulligan was a native of Ireland, and came to this country when 15. For many years he was connected with the Adams Sugar Refinery as cashier and confidential clerk. Warren Fisher, Jr., and Evan C. Stanwood, the latter James G. Blaine's brother-in-law, were at the head of this company, and Mr. Mulligan was thrown into most intimate relations with them. He became possessed of certain valuable letters which were believed to involve Blaine in questionable proceedings concerning the sale of railroad bonds to a certain syndicate. These letters created considerable comment unfavorable to the man from Maine, in the Congressional investigation of 1876, and were made an issue in the Presidential campaign of 1884, when Blaine was defeated by Cleveland. They undoubtedly had a strong influence in bringing about that result.

Mr. Mulligan was a typical old bachelor in appearance and manner. He was very eccentric. A fortune of $200,000 was amassed and left by him.

HOUSE BACKS DOWN.

CAUCUS RECEDES FROM ALL AMENDMENTS.

Separate Measures for Free Sugar, Iron, Coal and Barbed Wire Ordered—Crisp Offers the Resolution on Which the Decision Was Finally Reached.

Victory for the Senate.

WASHINGTON special: It's to be the Senate bill. The House caucus so decided. The vote was 130 to 21. This conclusion was reached Monday at a caucus held in Speaker Crisp's room. Holman, of Indiana, presided. The caucus passed a resolution, proposed by Speaker Crisp, advising the recession from the disagreement to the Senate's amendments to the Wilson bill, the passing of the amended bill, and the introduction of separate bills making coal, iron, sugar and barbed wire free of all duties.

The caucus met promptly. There was no wait for a quorum. When Chairman Holman banged the desk with his gavel there were 153 members present. Ten minutes later every Democratic member in the city was inside the chamber. There was feverish expectancy on every face. All felt that the eyes of the country were upon them. The Senators themselves—cold and far removed from public touch—betrayed their interest in the outcome of the caucus. Even Senator Gorman, calm and ever in perfect control of himself, cut his greetings shorter than usual. And Senator Brice twirled his glasses around his forefinger with great rapidity.

In administration circles there was keen anxiety. There, more keenly than anywhere else perhaps, the importance of the caucus action was appreciated. Nothing but the Senate bill seemed probable. In the hotels, clubs, streetcars and streets "What will the caucus do?" was the sole topic. Some men like John DeWitt Warner spoke vehemently for continuing the fight. But the majority favored surrender and the prompt settlement of the controversy already much too prolonged.

Proceedings in Secret.

The doors of the House were tightly closed and extra guards placed to prevent outsiders hearing anything of the proceedings within. No one was permitted in the gallery corridors, and it was only after great effort that the Sergeant-at-arms was induced to open the working-room of the press gallery. As Congressmen came from the caucus chamber they were button-holed for information, and like good sensible men answered all questions fully and promptly.

The caucus was exciting, but not tumultuous. Wilson, McMillin, Crisp and Cockran spoke, the last in opposition to the surrender, and then the vote was taken on the all-important point of surrender or no surrender. The resolution offered by Speaker Crisp to accept the Senate bill went through with a whoop.

Immediately after the caucus adjourned the rules committee withdrew to the Speaker's room to prepare a rule providing for the immediate consideration of the tariff bill. The majority in caucus having decided to surrender, the best way to carry out its decision was to surrender.

DEATH IN A COLLISION.

Fatal Wreck on the Santa Fe—Two Killed and Eight Injured.

A disastrous head-end collision occurred on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, between Hurdland and Gibbs, Mo. Express train No. 5, west-bound, and express train No. 4, east-bound, collided, and two trainmen were killed and several passengers injured. The engines and combination express and baggage cars were completely demolished. According to orders, the trains were to have met at Gibbs and it is alleged No. 4 violated orders. The trains met on a slight curve and came together with terrific force. Both engineers applied air brakes and reversed their engines. As soon as the passengers and those of the train crew who were unhurt recovered from the shock they rescued the unfortunate victims. Engineer Humphreys of No. 4 was found at his post with one of his legs cut off and his head almost split in two. He died in a few minutes. Express Messenger Caplinger was instantly killed. E. E. Derrick, the express messenger and baggageman of No. 5, had a very narrow escape, and his injuries may yet prove fatal. None of the passengers of No. 4 were injured.

A Marvellous Showing.

The U. S. Government, through the Agricultural Department, has been investigating the baking powders for the purpose of informing the public which was the purest, most economical and wholesome.

The published report shows the Royal Baking Powder to be a pure, healthful preparation, absolutely free from alum or any adulterant, and that it is greatly stronger in leavening power than any other brand.

Solomon and the Butterfly.

It is a Jewish tradition that once upon a time two butterflies settled upon the roof of Solomon's Temple, and the male butterfly said to his wife: "If I stamp with my foot I could at once demolish this temple."

The butterfly trembled and shivered at her husband's revolutionary speech, and two of the king's sentinels overhearing it, took the butterfly into custody and brought him for judgment before Solomon, who said: "Audacious insect! What do you mean by your boast?" The butterfly bowed. "Sire, I only said it to impress the missus!" Upon hearing which Solomon smiled complete comprehension and gave orders that he should be set at liberty.

The butterfly sauntered home. His wife flew out to meet him and eagerly inquired as to the result of his trial. "Well," said her husband with a toss of his sensitive antennæ, "I have talked it all over with the king and he has begged me not to do it."

Early Use of Petroleum.

From a diary kept by one of the surveyors it appears that the first use of petroleum as a remedy in this country occurred in the neighborhood of the head waters of the Alleghany, in the Western part of New York, about the beginning of the present century. As the oil flowed from a spring it accumulated on the surface of shallow pools, and its medicinal properties were first recognized by the Indians in that section of the country. This oil, which was then known as "Seneca oil," was collected and dried in the sun, and in addition to its medicinal use it was also employed for mixing the warpaint for the tribe. As an evidence of the correctness of this historical fragment, it is said that there is still a section of the country known as Oil Spring reservation, this location, or plot of ground, having been given to the Indians.—Philadelphia Press.

Grain Exports From the Argentine.

No less than 919,000 tons of cereals were exported from the Argentine Republic during the first nine months of 1893. This is nearly double the exports in the year before, and it is expected that there will be another increase during this year in the exportation of Argentine wheat, since the crop looked very promising—notably in the provinces of Santa Fe, Cordova, and Entre Rios. It is to be noticed that an unusually large number of agricultural machines has been purchased in many parts of the Republic. The single colony of Marcos Jaurez, province of Cordova, bought seventy wheat threshing machines during the last year.—New York Tribune.

And Didn't Care.

Kate Field tells a story of a man and woman who were horribly seasick crossing the channel. The stewardess found them sitting together on the deck, the woman leaning back with closed eyes and the man's head resting on her shoulder.

"Your husband seems to feel even worse than you do," said the stewardess, sympathetically.

The sick woman opened her eyes and glanced at her fellow-sufferer with a sort of despairing indifference. Then she gasped, as she closed her eyes wearily again:

"He's not my husband; I'm sure I don't know who he is."

Don't Crowd the Auctioneer.

There is a diamond of rare value and fine water lying in the heart of the Bank of England vaults that has come to England from the Orange Free State, where it was found by a miner. The stone weighs nearly 500 karats and is the largest in the world. There is evidently to be some competition between would-be buyers, among whom is the German Emperor. The value of the diamond, when it was estimated by the Free State Government Mine Inspector, was £25,000, but the price now put upon it is £1,000,000.—London Court Journal.

In the Depths of Misery.

Though endowed with wealth "beyond the dreams of avarice," the wretched sufferer from chronic dyspepsia is plunged in the depths of misery, from which he or she seldom emerges even for a day at a stretch. There is a way to down the imp. Invoke the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and he departs. Keep using the medicine and the relief you promptly experience finally becomes permanent and a thorough cure is effected. Heartburn, flatulence, uneasiness and sinking at the pit of the stomach, nervousness, insomnia—these are symptoms first relieved and finally cured, with their cause, by this ineffably reliable specific. Liver complaint and constipation, brother tormentors of dyspepsia, are also sent to limbo by the Bitters. So are rheumatism, malaria and kidney complaint. Use this helpful medicine systematically, not by fits and starts.

Truly a Lovely Effect.

Fine Indian linen is now one of the fashionable fabrics of the day. Would you have a gown which has the effect of white moire and yet which will cost all told, not so much as the ruffles on your moire petticoat? Then invest in a frock of Indian linen. The moire effect is obtained by lining the linen with itself. Have as a trimming dainty ruffles of the linen, and here and there a few loops of narrow white ribbon. Such a gown is sure to attract attention.

Box—How is your uncle? Is he out of danger yet? Cox—No, indeed. Oh, haven't you heard the news? He died day before yesterday.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm

Justly celebrated as the Peerless Liver and Kidney Medicine of America

Storrs Was Witty.

The death of Lord Coleridge recalls the magnificent banquet given to his lordship by Emery A. Storrs, in Chicago, some years ago. Just before the supper was served, constables appeared and levied upon the table, floral decorations, etc., and the festivities did not proceed until several opulent friends present volunteered security for the debt for which these heroic measures were taken. Storrs was not at all perturbed by the proceeding. As soon as the constables had departed, he turned to his embarrassed guest and remarked: "Your lordship, pardon this interruption—this blasphemous interference with the lord's supper!"

TO CLEANSE THE SYSTEM

Effectually yet gently, when costive or bilious, or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, to dispel headaches, colds or fevers use Syrup of Figs.

The Pity of It!

The criminal arrests in the United States have increased more than five fold since 1860. This is in accordance with the facts disclosed by the census. But what is a crime to-day was not a crime in 1860. Laws make acts criminal that were before their enactment perfectly proper.

SPEND YOUR OUTING ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Visit picturesque Mackinac Island. It will only cost you about $12.50 from Detroit; $15 from Toledo; $18 from Cleveland, for the round trip, including meals and berths. Avoid the heat and dust by traveling on the D. & C. floating palaces. The attractions of a trip to the Mackinac region are unsurpassed. The island itself is a grand romantic spot, its climate most invigorating. Two new steel passenger steamers have just been built for the upper lake route, costing $300,000 each. They are equipped with every modern convenience, annunciators, bathrooms, etc., illuminated throughout by electricity, and are guaranteed to be the grandest, largest and safest steamers on fresh water. These steamers favorably compare with the great ocean liners in construction and speed. Four trips per week between Toledo, Detroit, Alpena, Mackinac, St. Ignace, Petoskey, Chicago, "Soo," Marquette and Duluth. Daily between Cleveland and Detroit. Daily between Cleveland and Put-in-Bay. The cabins, parlors and staterooms of these steamers are designed for the complete entertainment of humanity under home conditions; the palatial equipment, the luxury of the appointments, makes traveling on these steamers thoroughly enjoyable. R-I-P-A-N-S.

Soap, Salt, Vaseline and Gunpowder.

R I P A N S

Every farmer's wife who boils her tea-kettle over a fire of maple or hickory wood, knows that, by leeching the ashes and adding any refuse grease at command, she may make a serviceable soap. And yet, notwithstanding this, she finds it better to buy a soap made by improved methods. Some manufacturers produce soap of such peculiar excellence that people are led to specially desire it; and the makers advertise their product widely, and accumulate fortunes by its sale. The fact still remains that soap is a combination of alkaloid and grease. Its manufacture is a simple or artistic process, according to the quality produced. Soap has been made for thousands of years, but the best soaps are the product of nineteenth century methods.

Gunpowder is composed of charcoal, sulphur, and saltpeter. Yet not every wood produces the best charcoal for the purpose. Some sorts of sulphur are of more value than others to the manufacturer of gunpowder, and saltpeter must be properly prepared to admit of best results. Given all of best quality, skill in blending is still required, and although it is possible for almost any one to make an explosive mixture, those who have use for gunpowder find it advisable to buy of a manufacturer who has gained a reputation for making the best. The ingredients are no secret, but the resultant combination is of proved effectiveness, and, although some other may be as good, it is risky to experiment; consequently the trade-mark of a favorite brand of gunpowder is worth a great sum to its owner.

Medicines are of less universal use than soap, and more persons require them than have occasion to buy gunpowder.

Soap is a universal cleanser.

Gunpowder is the explosive in most common use.

There is a certain form of prescription in almost as common use among medical practitioners, in their attendance upon the sick, as soap is in the every-day affairs of the household. It seems to be needed on every occasion. This application by physicians of a single remedy for many apparently varying ills comes about from the well-known fact that every illness results from or is augmented by a disturbed condition of particular organs that come in play in the conversion of food into muscle or blood, or into power of action by limb or brain. Whatever aids or stimulates those organs gives life and energy to all others. It is not so very strange that, out of the experience of generations, a formula should be evolved that is as simple and definite as that used for making soap or gunpowder. The marked difference to be observed, however, in the case of the medical compound of Rhubarb and Soda, and the few other ingredients equally well known that go to make up this prescription, is, that the method by which it could be prepared in a manner to secure permanent excellence, and admit of transportation in a form fit for immediate use, is a recent discovery. It is for that reason the compound has only now arrived at the distinction of having a name assigned to it. That name is R-I-P-A-N-S, and each letter is the initial of one of the constituent ingredients.

The preparation of medicines in tablet form has only been rendered possible in a large way by machinery invented within a comparatively short time; but the result has already worked a material change in medical practice. The physician to-day is supplied with medicines in this form, and the maker who produces best results secures the trade. The apothecary is fast ceasing to compound the physician's prescription, but sells instead the same ingredients prepared with a skill and nicety that is beyond his own power to equal with the facilities at his command.

Physicians do not write prescriptions for petroleum jelly, but put down, instead, the word vaseline, and the enterprising merchant who applied his trade mark to a common product, the great excellence and wide application of which he had been among the first to discover, reaps a profit therefrom, and deserves it by the uniform excellence and purity of the article he supplies.

So, too, the manufacturers of R-I-P-A-N-S Tabules, being the first to set on foot careful inquiries concerning the myriad combinations of Rhubarb and Soda known to be in such universal use among doctors, and to search out the particular prescription that had acquired the greatest fame and widest acceptance, and then to undertake the manufacture in modern tablet form, using the choicest of selected drugs and combining them by methods that have been proved scientific and found to be fortunate, have secured a trade-mark that is valuable, and given to the public a medicine of more uniform excellence and wider application than any other that has ever been known.

It has been asserted that the principal ingredients of these tabules are in about as constant use by the best physicians in their daily practice as salt is by the housewife in the preparation of the family meals.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recomendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Historical Associations of Paris.

So rich is Paris in historical associations that often the same street, the same spot, recalls two widely different events. Thus the statue of Henri IV on the Pont-Neuf, commemorates the glory of the best and greatest of the French kings, and at the same time marks the very ground where, in the fourteenth century, Jacques de Molay, the Templar, was infamously burned. At fourteen in the Rue Bethisly, Admiral Coligny died and Sophie Arnould was born. At a house in the Rue des Marais, Racine wrote "Bajazet" and "Britannicus" in the room where, fifty years later, the Duchess de Boullion is said to have poisoned Adrienne Lecouvreur.

There was a time when, at the corner of the Rue de Marche des Innocents, a marble slab, insribed with letters of gold associated the important year of 1685 with three notable events; the arrival of embassy from Siam, a visit from the Doge of Genoa, and the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. This strange record has disappeared, together with many other interesting memorials of various shapes and kinds. As we go further back in the history of Paris, lawlessness on the part of the inhabitants and cruelty on that of the rulers seem constantly to increase. Until the reign of Louis XI Paris was without police, though laws were nominally in force, especially against stealing.

A Quarter Century Test.

For a quarter of a century Dr. King's New Discovery has been tested, and the millions who have received benefit from its use, testify to its wonderful curative powers in all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs. A remedy that has stood the test so long and that has given so universal satisfaction, is no experiment. Each bottle is positively guaranteed to give relief or the money will be refunded. It is admitted to be the most reliable for coughs and colds. Trail bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Large size 50 cents and $1. 6

Curious Land in the Adirondacks.

Much of the land classed as "meadow" in the Adirondack region is a curious swampy soil, covered with vegetation that rises so as to hide the underlying cold, dark water. One may walk for miles upon such a meadow, the feet sinking into it as into a water-soaked sponge, and deer frequently feed upon the grasses of the meadows and seemingly enjoy in midsummer the perpetual cool footbath of their pasture.

A Noted Minstrel.

M. T. Skiff, formerly business manager for W. J. Scanlan, the Irish Comedian, suffered with Rheumatism for years with relief until he bought a bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy. Two bottles made a well man of him. There are a thousand remedies for Rheumatism, but none have received the unsolicited testimonials from prominent people as shown by Drummond's Lightning Remedy. When a cure is wanted send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bott'es of the rem dy—enough for one month's treatment. Agents wanted. 34

Prejudice Kills Them.

There are a few people everywhere who allow prejudice to kill them, and are not satisfied with confining that prejudice to themselves, but are often instrumental in keeping others from getting well. If you are seeking relief you should not listen to skeptical friends and jealous physicians, as you owe your health to your family, not to those who would not give you financial assistance. If you have tried everybody, it won't hurt you to go and see Dr. Fruth, Thursday, Sept. 6, at the Swineford House. 32-33

Best for Flux.

Mr. Thomas Bate, editor of the Graphic, Texarkana, Arkansas, has found what he believes to be the best remedy in existence for the flux. His experience is well worth remembering. He says: "Last summer I had a very severe attack of flux. I tried almost every known remedy, none giving relief. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was recommended to me. I purchased a bottle and received almost immediate relief. I continued to use the medicine and was entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending this remedy to any person suffering with such a disease, as in my opinion it is the best medicine in existence." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for September.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for September is the first of the illustrated magazines to appear with a comprehensive paper upon "The Presidency of the French Republic," illustrated with admirable portraits of the new Chief Executive, M. Casimir-Perier, the martyred President Carnot and Mme. Carnot, scenes at the Elysee palace, etc; together with an anecdotal history of the Elysee, built during the reign of Louis XV., and occupied successively by Mme. de Pompadour, Beaujon, the Duchesse de Bourbon, Murat, Napoleon I, the Duke of Wellington, the Emperor of Austria, the Duc and Duchesse de Berri, Louis Napoleon and his various royal and imperial guests after the coup d'etat; and, since 1872, the official Paris residence of the President of the French Republic. Other seasonable and picturesque articles in this number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly are: "Where the Breakers Roar," a complete account of the United States Life-saving Service, by S. H. Ferrie; "Sports of the Season," by Edmond Picton; "A Mexican Visit," by Howard Paul; "Acadia and Bayou Teche," by Stoughton Cooley; "Coursing on the Prairies," by Charles Denby, Jr.; "On the Wing," an entomological fantasy, by Laura B. Lintner; and the conclusion of Joseph Becker's Reminiscences of a War Artist, dealing with the fall of Richmond, and including a pathetic historical picture of General Lee's return home after the surrender at Appomattox.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back, and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50 cents for large bottles at Robbins & McCord's drug store. 6

An Unimportant Error.

The St. Joe News says: "The Times is a target for all the county papers. The Times man seems to be able to hold his own." Now, the News may be all right as to the last sentence. On that we have nothing to say, for it is as yet to be tried. But Bro. Olds is hardly justified in the first assertion. The county papers have, in general, said but little as to the Times, though its editor paraded around with a large chip on his shoulder for several months after coming here. He even complained that the chip was not knocked off. In several instances he made rather coarse attacks on several papers, but as no attention or but little was paid to them, he soon partially subsided. The only paper that has tried to knock off that chip is the Clipper, and here the two forces were so evenly matched, neither appearing to understand the subjects in dispute, that other papers generally, either "sicked 'em on," or let them alone.

Cured the Children.

The success of Mrs. Annie M. Beam, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, in the treatment of Diarrhœa in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many mothers. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnstown, Pa., after the great flood, on account of my husband being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the diarrhœa very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarhœa Remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I knew of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be excelled and cheerfully recommend it." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

Hard on the Populists.

The Chicago Herald of last Wednesday has the following hard whack at the "new party" that claims so much more virtue than the "corrupt old parties." In a well-written editorial, it says:

The democrats have carried Alabama, electing state officers and a majority of the legislature. The majority of Governor Gates will be not less than 25,000, and may be twice that. The democrats certainly have a majority on joint ballot and will elect Senator Morgan for another term.

This is the beginning of the end with the "populists" of the south. They have gone to join the greenbackers, the "alliance" and the other ephemeral crank parties of the past. Apprehensions that the populists will hold the balance of power in the next congress, and of the presidential electors, may be dismissed. They never will carry another state.

This was inevitable. The "populist" party, like preceding crank parties, had no vital principles—had no beliefs, no convictions. It was animated merely by the spirit of discontent—by the false sentiment of hostility to property and property rights, by the error that cheap money would make better times, by evanescent enthusiasm for impracticable theories, by delusions and conceits.

The populist leaders are men with one idea, devotees of every new notion, cheap politicians living by their wits, humbugs distinguished for dishonest purposes and shameless effrontery. No party can live long with such leaders. No leaders can succeed long with such a party.

An intelligent press correspondent writing from the south some time ago predicted, substantially, that the populists would win no more victories in that part of the union. He said that the free silver craze was passing away. The staple products of the south possess gold values. The producers can see plainly enough that they do not want to sell cotton for any kind of depreciated money.

The people in the cities at the south, the business men, intelligent laboring men, the professional classes—all the classes that are well informed, that think, that have substantial interests in the country and that have influence over the voters have been in favor of sound financial policies all the time. The "populists," the "alliance" men and other sectaries forming the crank parties were the poorer and least intelligent farmers—far different from our northern farmers—the sand-hillers, the "poor white trash," who became easy dupes of the noisy, superficial, stentorian yawpers and howlers who made the backwoods echo with their awkward and empty oratory.

This material would not form a permanent party. The leaders could not hold it together. The cheap and ignorant voters were beguiled away. Smarter politicians than the backwoods leaders got among the backwoodsmen and formed them into new factions.

As a rule the negroes have drawn nearer to the reputable whites. They do not vote in large numbers. They are in no way excluded from the suffrage. But they do not respect the scalawag political tramps who are followed by the poor whites, and they vote generally with the democrats.

These causes have brought the "populist" collapse. That party had a better chance to win in Alabama than it had in any state at the south. Alabama has gone democratic, and it leads the column.

MART REINHART.

THE SILENT REAPER.

From the South Waukegan, Ill. News of July 26.

DIED:—At the home of his parents, at this place, Gaylord Thayer Forwad, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Forward, Tuesday afternoon, aged nineteen years.

Death is always sudden and startling, yet sure to come to all. There ever remains the one consolation that Divine Providence directs the calling of the angel of mourning; and young as well as old have no alternative but to heed the summons Tuesday afternoon when the death of Gaylord Forward was reported to the friends of the young man and family all were surprised. Their sympathy was at once expressed for Mr. and Mrs. Forward in their grevious loss. The son, intelligent, manly and ambitious, had won not alone their hearts but also the good will of all who had any knowledge of him. Although he had been seriously ill for some time, there was constant hope that his health was improving, and the time was looked forward to when the young man should again take his place in active life. Ever since his coming to South Waukegan with his parents, who by the way were the first people to move into the new town, he has been engaged in some business; first as a printer with The Patriot, of Waukegan; then as a job printer on his own account; then as assistant postmaster here. His bent had lately turned to electricity, and it was his hope this fall to have entered an electrical instution in Chicago to perfect himself in this favorite study. His mechanical ability and his thoughtfulness and studiousness are seen in many original contrivances. His habits were most exemplary and there was every promise of his taking a prominent part as a royal citizen. The people here think much of his manliness and integrity; at home he won love and affection by the thousand thoughts of kindness which constantly occupied his mind. Since April last, when he caught a severe cold, he has been ill. In May it was so advised and he went to Columbus, Kas., where he spent several weeks, but returned with the advent of summer. He had since seemed to improve. Tuesday he was taken with a fainting spell while walking across his room, and death occurred immediately after the prostration.

The deceased was born at Pleasant Lake, Ind. When he was five years old his parents moved to Omaha, where he was educated in the public schools. He came to South Waukegan with an ambitious young man's hopes, few of which Providence has allowed him to realize. Many relatives of the family still live in Indiana, a half-sister is in Omaha and a half-brother at Battle Creek, Mich., all of whom mourn his death. His grandparents on both sides were among the oldest settlers in Steuben county, Indiana. Messrs. J. P. and F. L. Murray, and Mrs. L. V. Rusb, all of Chicago, relatives of the family, are here to comfort the parents in their bereavement.

The funeral will be conducted this afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. P. D. Bergen. Simple services will be held at the house and the burial will be made in Oakwood cemetery.

THE WHEEL OF THE FUTURE.

THE WHEEL THAT IS AND IS TO BE.

The League Wheel "Chainless."

People who ride the Chainless and know it to be far superior to the Chain and Sprocket Wheel, LAUGH AT THE IDEA of a person buying anything short of a League Chainless. One can no longer expect to be strictly up to and ahead of date who does not ride this machine. This voices the sentiment of thousands of old chain wheel riders, who will have nothing but the best thing going.

Obituary.

Mrs. Rosanna Skilling departed this life at the home of her son, J. R. Skilling, in Garrett, August 16, 1894. She was one of the early pioneers of DeKalb county. Mrs. Skilling was born in Philadelphia, Pa., May 6, 1808, her maiden name being Rosanna Riley. During the war of 1812 her parents lived in Frankfort, at that time a suburb of Philadelphia. Here Rosanna attended her first school and learned to read in the New Testament at the age of 5 years, which made such an indelible impression on her memory that all through life it was the first choice of her leisure reading. She recalled and took pleasure in relating many incidents of the war of 1812, up to a short time before her death. In 1814 her parents moved to Lancaster, Pa, and in the fall of 1816 they moved to Harrisburg, making the journey by teams and leaving the oldest sister, Mary, aged 21, at Lancaster. On arriving at Harrisburg the father was stricken with hemorrhage of the lungs, died and was buried among strangers in Laurel Hill cemetery. The only son, John, aged 13, returned to his sister Mary at Lancaster, whither the widow returned in the spring of 1817 with her two youngest daughters, Catherine being 17 and Rosanna 9 years of age. Here the widow remained with her family till she was called away in death in 1825, her three daughters being with her, the son being absent at Lake Champlain. The three daughters then returned to Philadelphia, where they supported themselves by their earnings.

Rosanna was united in matrimony to Michael Skilling June 3, 1832, in St. Michaels Catholic church in Philadelphia. Michael Skilling was a hand loom weaver, this being before the age of machinery, factories, etc. He worked at his trade in Philadelphia till the fall of 1837, when they emigrated to Richland county Ohio, making the journey as follows: from Philadelphia to Columbia on the Susquehanna river by railroad, this being the western terminal of the railroad; from here they took the canal through Harrisburg to Hollidaysburg, at the foot of the eastern slope of the Allegheny mountains. They crossed the mountains to Johnstown on the inclined plane. From Johnstown to Pittsburgh by canal. From Pittsburgh down the Ohio river by steamboat to Wellsville. From Wellsvilleby teams to Ashland, O., which was at that time in Richland county. They resided five miles south of Ashland on a farm from 1837 till 1846, when they emigrated to this county, making the journey in 16 days with one yoke of oxen and a horse in lead, camping nights in their wagon. Here they settled on a piece of land which Michael Skilling had purchased from the government in 1843—three years previous—which is three-quarters of a mile west of Sedan. The L. S. & M. S. R. R. now crosses this land. Like all the early pioneers, many were the trials and privations which they endured in the early days of DeKalb county, many of which could be mentioned if time would permit.

About one block north of the court house in Auburn, on the west side of the street, there stand two black locust trees in front of the old Plumb residence. Those trees are the product of locust seed planted by Mrs. Skilling in the spring of 1848, which she planted and nourished on the land above described. The family moved to Noble county near Avilla in the spring of 1854, where they lived till the spring of 1864, when they returned to DeKalb county, Smithfield township. In the spring of 1866, Mrs. Skilling returned to Philadelphia, where she remained till the fall of 1881, when she again returned to Indiana, and has since made her home with her children in Smithfield township, Garrett and Ft. Wayne. She died here in Garrett on the 16th inst., after many months of prostration resulting from old age. She was the mother of ten children, four of whom died in infancy. She leaves to mourn after her, five children, twenty grand children, and three great-grand children. She attained the age of 86 years, 3 months and 10 days. She was buried Sunday, the 19th inst., in the Catholic cemetery north of Auburn.

SONS OF REST.

That is What Too Many of Our Congressmen are Getting to Be.

OUR Congressmen have a hard time each summer to keep at work, for in summer it is very hot at Washington. In winter, also, they have a hard time, for then it is too cold there. In either season they want to go home, the more so, as they know that their pay goes right on at the rate of $5,000 a year. So there is seldom a time, but we find about a quarter of them absent from their duties. Some are at pleasure resorts suitable for the season, summer or winter, as the case may be. But no matter what the season, about that number are earning their handsome salaries in about the way shown in the picture at the head of this article. It has been quite popular of late to rail out against our senators for not doing as we think they should. But take it all in all, our senators stay at their places of work much better than our members of the House of Representatives. And the character of their work, taken altogether, is just about as good. We leave this to any observant person, especially the careful reader, who keeps watch of the amount and kind of work done by both Houses. Take notice, that during the recent hard work on the tariff bill, there was a time last winter when the democrats in the House could not get together a quorum to do business, though this would have needed but one more than half of all the members. But the democrats had a majority of 60 or 70 over the republicans. But it became so difficult to get them together that new rules had to be made and put in force, one of which was to "dock" them for the time lost, the same as is done by business men when their hands lose time. It begins to look as though we ought to adopt a new way of electing representatives, as well as a new way of electing senators.

In this connection, we feel like adding some very sensible remarks taken from a recent issue of the Philadelphia Ledger. It says:

The New York World yesterday contained a list of leaves of absence granted congressmen during the past two months. According to its computation, the amount of salaries "docked" for four months past would scarcely reach $2,000; but if full returns were made there would be a saving to the treasury of not less than $200,000. For the month of July and part of August sixty-four members of congress were absent for longer or shorter periods. Fifty-two of these absentees were absent od account of "sickness," a rather remarkable degree of invalidism for a body of the size of the American congress. The World suggestively observes that, under the statute, the only excuse that exempts a member from being "docked" is sickness, and that as this is the season for holding congressional conventions the members, under the guise of illness, go home to give attention to their political fences. The World's rather formidable list of absentee congressmen shows that many of our representatives have the qualifications for high rank in the picturesque order of the "Sons of Rest."

Aqueous Precipitation.

The general law of aqueous precipitation may be briefly stated. Whatever lowers the temperature of the air at any place below the dew point is a cause of rain. Various causes may conspire to effect this object, but it is chiefly brought about by the ascent of the air into the higher regions of the atmosphere, by which, being subjected to less pressure, it expands, and in doing so lowers its temperature. These ascending currents are caused by the heating of the earth's surface by the sun's rays, or, in fact by anything which raises the temperature of the superincumbent air, and it is very obvious that the continual discharge of large pieces of ordnance will have a considerable effect in raising the temperature of the air lying on the earth's surface, which will ascend, expand, and discharge in aqueous particles in the form of rain for the foregoing reasons.

NEWSPAPERS AND THE CAMPAIGN

Some Valuable Hints that Should be of Benefit to All Concerned.

MILKING the cows for the doubtful voter, teaching his calves to drink, kissing his babies and flattering his wife—these have been among the popular means of securing the necessary votes to put a man into the place he seeks. Of course many other means have been used, some of which were far less honorable, though possibly as effective. But times change, and laws are different, and what is better, there is some improvement in public sentiment. So the candidates and the managers must look to better methods—methods more in keeping with the growing intelligence of the country and the voters. The intelligent newspaper is among these better and more effective methods. The greater amount of intelligence, ability and originality in the democratic press as compared with that of any other party was a powerful factor in the last general election, and is likely to continue so.

Speaking of this, reminds us of the following, which we find in the Elkhart Review:

It has dawned upon the party leaders of the old parties within the past two or three years that the papers which have year after year been pounding away in advocacy of the principles of the parties, have some influence in shaping the opinions held by readers on these questions. As a result there has been a general movement in both parties to extend the circulation of the party papers during the campaign.

This recognition of the value of newspapers in spreading information on questions of party import is a gratifying tribute to the intelligence of the public. No one contends that the newspaper's influence is immediate, nor of the same time as that of the orator, who by direct appeal moulds the will of the voter for a time. The immediate direct influence of the newspaper, by its use of appeal and opposition is small, but its general usefulness in spreading information on questions which the people are discussing is beyond doubt.

The honest newspaper, which defends its principles and opposes those which it believes to be antagonistic to the welfare of the people, should meet the wider recognition as a force in party politics.

The party should not expect to control the paper or its policy on certain lines, but should leave to the judgment of the editor the methods to be pursued. The party leaders should ascribe to the conductor of a newspaper the same honest desire to achieve the success of his party as each assumes for himself, and credit him with conscientious performance of duty. Party leaders should be careful not to demand of newspapers the espousal of personal causes, nor should they ascribe to the newspaper falsity to party principle because its columns are not opened to the passion of personal warfare. They should remember that often a newspaper may be more powerful by a discreet silence on personal differences than by the public discussion of them. Instances will readily suggest themselves to all where vituperative attacks upon candidates have reacted upon the attacking party to its detriment.

Party leaders should willingly recognize the intelligence of the conductor of a party journal, and should accord to him honesty of purpose, while they may criticise his methods.

On the other hand, newspapers should not forget that they have resting upon them the necessity of honest and fair dealing in politics. Truth should sit at the head of every column and honest purpose guide the utterances of every line. Editors should remember that the public looks to them to assuage party passion, not to inflame it. It is their mission to advocate principles, not candidates; to teach fact, not theory; to defend party policies, not merely to find fault with the opposing policies.

The press has made itself more independent of late, and as a result the present tendency of party managers is to recognize its value. A venal press is a rarity in the present generation. When it is venal it is valueless. When it is independent in the true sense, manly and self-respecting, it commands the respect of the reading public and becomes a valuable defender of party policies and principles.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Japanese Win a Signal Battle Over the Chinese—A Whaleboat Wrecked—Fatal Accident at a Balloon Ascension—Wreck on the Vandalia.

CAPTURED A FORT.

Japs Victorious After a Five Hours' Fight.

A special from Shichi Gen, Corea, via San Francisco says: A fierce battle has just been fought at Song Hwan. The Chinese have very strong fortifications, and 17,000 troops were said to be stationed there. The Japanese determined to capture the arms and provisions and deceived the enemy by a clever bit of strategy. They gave out that they were going to march back to Asan, and, in fact, did parade for a considerable distance in that direction; but no sooner were they convinced of the success of their scheme in making the Chinese believe they had left the settlement than they marched with a rush straight up to the fortifications and, attacking in a body, made a clean sweep of everything in the course of five hours' fighting.

The Chinese, with their usual cowardice, deserted many of the Fan Kwai (foreign devil officers,) and when given orders to resist the advance of the enemy turned and fell upon their swords, preferring to commit suicide rather than be murdered by the Japanese. The Japanese officers and men fought like tigers.

Some of the methods of warfare used were ridiculously grewsome and harrowing. For instance, the Chinese, it is told, used old-fashioned stinkpots (bowls slung on poles and filled with sulphuric and other bad smelling, deadly acids, which kill perhaps more quickly than a rifle-shot). One stinkpot cast in among a dozen soldiers kills every man inside of a few seconds. The Mongols also resorted to wooden axes and to long bamboo poles. Many of them threw their guns away deliberately when they caught a glimpse of the enemy surrounding them like a demon-cloud. These are merely instances of extraordinary things that happened. It is impossible to accurately describe the barbarities which these people practice in their methods of war and also in their penal punishment in times of peace.

About 1,000 Chinese were killed in the engagement and seventy Japanese. The latter showed their superiority over the former in every detail of the battle. They were more courageous of the art of war.

Sisters Can Teach.

Ebensburg (Pa.) special: Judge Barker has handed down a decision in the suit brought by W. T. Kerr, State Councillor of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, against the Board of Directors of the Gallitzen school to prevent the employment of Catholic sisters wearing their religious garb as teachers. The Judge decides that sisters may be employed as teachers and that they may be attired in the garb of their order and that they may be address by pupils by their religious names, but refused to allow the Catholic catechism to be taught. The costs were divided.

Five Were Drowned.

A special from Ocosta, Wash., says: While making a landing through the surf of Joe Creek, fifteen miles north of Gray's harbor, a whaleboat and crew of nine men, in command of Lieut. Freeman H. Crosby, U. S. N., of the United States coast survey steamer McArthur, was capsized and five men are missing, namely: Lieut. Crosby, John Freyer, John Gudmunir, Wm. Nehm, and Alexander Smith. At present full particulars cannot be ascertained, owing to the difficulty of getting news from that locality.

Irish Members Aroused.

London special: The Irish Nationalists in the House of Commons lost their patience recently, and showed plainly their disgust at the failure of all Irish legislation. Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was attacked and a revolt is not far off. Mr. Sexton excitedly exclaimed that he and his colleagues had had their patience so strained by repeated delays that they could not endure much more. While Parliament temporized or declined to act the sufferings of Ireland increased.

Wreck on the Vandalia.

Vandalia train No. 1 was wrecked near Pocahontas, Ill., while rounding a curve. Albert Dickerson, the fireman; Thomas Manifee, engineer, and Mail Clerk W. L. Boyd were seriously injured. Among those who received wounds of a less severe character were C. F. Adams, E. E. Jones, and Otto Schoen, mail clerks, of Indianapolis. The passengers escaped with a shaking up.

Want no More "Alabama" Cases.

London special: The Secretary of State for foreign affairs has ordered the customs authorities at Glasgow to seize the war-ship Islam, which is being fitted out there either for China or Japan. This order was issued under the foreign enlistment act, as was the order to seize, at New Castle, the torpedo catcher built at the Elswick works for China.

Death of a Western Journalist.

John Arkins, since 1810 one of the owners and manager of the Rocky Mountain News, and for many years its editor as well, died at his home at Denver, of gastritis, aged 52 years.

Fell One Hundred and Fifty Feet.

At Sherbourne, Minn., a large crowd of people assembled to witness a baloon ascension and parachute leap by Prof. T. Wark. As the baloon was about to ascend, Lee Palmer of Jackson, seized a rope and was carried up about 150 feet, when he fell and was killed.

Will Not Resign.

Senator McPherson, who contemplated resigning because of ill-health, was prevailed on by friends to change his mind.

Troops Pouring Into Corea.

A dispatch from Shanghai says that Japan is pouring fresh troops into Corea and that upward of 50,000 Japanese soldiers are now in Corean territory. The Chinese fleet, according to the same dispatch, is remaining passive. In Japan the war fever is intense and universal, the press and popular orators preaching to the excited people of vastly ambitious schemes, including the conquest of China, or at least the conquest of the Chinese province of Manchuria. The Japanese populace and press are under complete official control. Perfect order prevails among the town population. The Japanese Government enforces complete secrecy in respect to all military movements and a rigid censorship is observed.

OFF WENT HIS HEAD.

Execution of the Assassin of President Carnot.

Lyons special: The execution of Caesario Santo Geronimo, the assassin of Carnot, took place at 4:45 o'clock Thursday morning.

Escorted by a squad of gen d' armes the executioner and his men entered the prison at 4:30 o'clock. M. Raux, governor of the prison, awakened Santo, saying "courage, Santo, the hour has arrived." The condemned man, with a great effort raised himself, his face turned livid and his hands and limbs trembled convulsively, despite his efforts to appear careless to his fate. The trembling continued until the last moment. He could hardly stand, and his limbs were so stiff with cold and fright, his clothes were put on him with the utmost difficulty.

In reply to the Governor whether he would have breakfast, Santo declined either food or drink, and refused religious consolation from the priest. Asked whether he desired to speak to the Judge, he replied in the negative. He also declined to see his counsel.

"Have you any last wishes to communicate," he was asked.

"No," he answered, "only send my letters to my mother."

His shaking so increased while making his toilet that Diebler and his men had much trouble in pinioning him. When Governor Raux spoke to Santo of his mother the condemned man's eyes filled with tears and he nearly choked with emotion. He soon regained his habitual indifference although still pallid and trembling. From this moment he said nothing more.

Santo walked fifty yards from his cell to the scaffold, which had been erected in a square facing the prison. He was executed at 4:45 a. m.

BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Terrible Explosion, Resulting in the Loss of Three Lives.

Fort Smith (Ark.) special: Four powder houses of the Speer Hardware Company, located two miles from here on the Poteau River, exploded.

The flash was seen several minutes before the report of the concussion was felt. The powder houses are total wrecks. A small cabin nearby, the home of Mrs. Cook, was blown to splinters. Mrs. Cook, her daughter, and an infant were hurled into eternity. Mrs. Cook was cut nearly in two. The powderhouse contained 1,200 pounds of dynamite and 300 kegs of powder. The shock was felt at Van Buren, Alma, Greenwood, Jenny Lind, Hackett, Kavanaugh and many places nearly twenty miles away.

In Fort Smith thousands of dollars worth of property was destroyed. The tall buildings swayed to and fro, and the crash of falling and cracking glass was like a discharge of artillery. The opera house, Boston Store, Arcade, J. J. Little, Ayers & Co., Vaughn Hardware store, Fagan Bourland and Western Union buildings were severely damaged, while along Sixth street and Garrison avenue are a contined story of wrecks. No explanation has been found for the explosion. It could not have been an accident, and many rumors are flying about. One is to the effect that a remnant of the Dalton gang is about to rob the bank here.

BUSINESS.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Review for the Past Week.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of trade says:

"The new tariff bill, if signed by the President, as expected, provides a definite basis for business. No supplemental legislation is thought possible until next year at least. Large improvement has been expected from any settlement, the more because of a vast amount of business deferred from week to week in the hope of more definite conditions. The rush of such business, or even a part of it, might easily double transactions for a time. It is not to be overlooked that the effect of new duties upon many branches of industry and trade is problematical, and may be determined only after some months of experience, and meanwhile the serious injury to corn and some other conditions, exercise a restraining influence. While it is not wise to look for a great "boom" there is warrant for a reasonable and prudent hopefulness. It is too early to look for effects of the new situation in the great industries, but the gradual recovery which has appeared for some time is seen in a better demand for products."

Indiana Democrats.

The Indiana State Convention met at Indianapolis and nominated the following ticket:

Judge of the Supreme Court, First District—Geo. Reinhard of Spencer County.

Judge of the Supreme Court, Fourth District—Joseph S. Dailey of Wells County.

Secretary of State—William R. Myers: renominated.

Auditor of State—Joseph T. Fanning of Marion.

Treasurer of State—Morgan Chandler of Hancock County.

Attorney General—Francis M. Griffith of Switzerland County.

Clerk of Supreme Court—C. A. Wellman of Sullivan County.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—Charles Thomas.

State Statitician—Mason U. Johnson of Anderson.

State Geologist—J. S. Jordan of Shelby County.

Cholera in Indiana.

Indianapolis special: The State Health Board has received notice of a cholera scare in Dearborn County. The little daughter of Peter Mann of Werdsburg, was taken suddenly ill, with symptoms of cholera and died soon after. Another child, age 11, was taken ill August 11 and died the next day. The attending physician who reported the case to the Health Board, visited the family and found the mother also ill. The outcome in her case is not yet known. The deaths have created much alarm in the county, but Secretary Metcalf, of the Health Board, is not inclined to give credance to the cholera theory.

Kentucky Whitecaps Arrested.

There is much excitement in McEean County, Kentucky, over outrages of a gang of Whitecaps. Anderson Hinson, John Boyd, George Howell, who were suspected of having knowledge of several robberies which recently occurred, were taken from their homes the other night, tied to trees, and whipped on their bare backs. Friday Hudson Boyd swore out warrants against Bud Dobson, Frank Totten, James Tucker and two negroes, charging them with the deed. It is said fifteen were in the party. Those named are sons of prominent farmers.

Corea Sides with Japan.

London special: A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Seoul says that a remarkable fact was revealed upon the occasion of the engagement between the Chinese and Japanese troops at Yashan, when the former were defeated. A number of Corean soldiers, by special order of the King of Corea, accompanied the Japanese troops. Some of the Coreans fled when the fighting began, but it is added, the majority fought with the greatest bravery. According to the Seoul dispatch this fact has high political significance, as showing that the King of Corea sides with Japan.

Ohio Populists.

The fusion convention of the Populists and organized labor of Ohio met at Columbus, and nominated the following State ticket: Secretary of State, Charles R. Martin of Seneca County; Judge of the Supreme Court, E. D. Stark of Cuyahoga County; Commissioner of Common Schools, M. J. Flannery of Green County; member of the board of public works, Joel S. Stewart of Preble County. Martin has been a Greenbacker since 1879, and all three other candidates favor the financial principles of that defunct party. Jacob S. Coxey of commonweal fame, and John McBride, President of the United Mine Worker, were present and addressed the convention.

A Misplaced Switch.

Passenger train, No. 11, the Rock Island fast west bound express, crashed into a dining car before it reached the depot at Trenton, Mo., wrecking the dining car and seriously injuring five employes. The wreck was due to the yardmaster forgetting to set the switch and leaving clear the main track. Conductor W. T. Crawford was seriously injured internally; Freeman Cook, injured on the head; Benifield, injured on the head; John J. Anderson, cut on the wrists; Perry Coulson, cut on the side and head.

A Mysterious Death.

The body of an unknown man was found in a corn field in the river bottoms, west of Terre Haute, Ind. A bullet was found in his left cheek which had been fired through a handkerchief which covered his face. The body was lying on a plank and the supposition is the man was asleep when the shot was fired. A leather case, containing a razor, was lying on his breast. The clothing of the dead man indicates that he was a farm hand.

Doesn't Believe It.

Washington special: The report that the Japanese Government is trying to negotiate a $50,000,000 loan to carry on the war is not believed at the Japanese Legation here. It is said that the finances of the Government are in such condition that it is improbable outside aid will be sought at this stage of the hostilities, although a recourse to a loan later, if the war is prolonged, would not be unexpected.

Enveloped in Burning Oil.

By the burning of a train of oil and other freight at Cheektowaga, New York, the New York Central Railroad loses nearly $100,000, and Brakeman Thed J. Snyder nearly lost his life. He was blown from the top of a freight car and enveloped in burning oil. He will be disfigured for life. About forty cars were destroyed, besides three buildings near the scene of the explosion.

Willie's Boiler.

At Bowling Green, Ohio, William Carnicum, aged 12 years, and his younger brother, made a boiler out of a piece of oil well casing by plugging both ends up, filling it full of water and building a fire under it. The pressure of the steam blew the plug out upon Willie, scolding him so that the flesh fell off his legs.

The "Corpse" Moved.

At Spencerville, Ohio, Daniel Irick, an old soldier, after an illness of several months, to all appearances died. An undertaker prepared the body for the casket. The watchers, becoming weary, fell asleep, but were awakened by the supposed corpse. He told of strange sights he had witnessed while in the trance.

Four Girls Badly Hurt.

At Brighton, W. Va., while the Misses Lillian and Jennie Love of Brighton, and Misses Fannie Fugate and Ethel Dyke of Pomeroy, Ohio, were out driving they met with an accident that will cause the death of some, if not all, of them.

Many Silver Dollars Coined.

Reports to the Director of the Mint show that since July 1 the number of silver dollars coined amounted to 833,000, of which 410,000 were coined since August 1.

Murder and Suicide.

William Vogel, 32 years old, son of a wealthy clothier, of New York, shot his mistress, Louise Bartlett, and shot himself dead in their apartments in Harlem.

Burped Out Both Eyes.

A Crawfordsville, Ind., Israel Blair, 18-year-old grandson of Israel Patton, was slarking lime when it exploded in his face, burning out both eyes.

Hon. J. W. Baughman Dead.

Wooster (Ohio) special: Hon. John W. Baughman, Democratic member of the State Board of Pardons, died very suddenly of heart disease.

Indianapolis correspondence:

The largest convention in the history of the Democratic party in Indiana convened in Tomlinson Hall. There were 1,747 accredited delegates seated on the main floor. Although the weather was intensely warm the great hall was filled with spectators who fanned themselves into a state of comparative comfort. The hall was elaborately decorated with bunting and American flags.

Rev. Abbott, of Indianapolis, offered a prayer. A roll followed and the delegation was found to be complete. The committee on permanent organization reported and named Governor Matthews permanent Chairman of the convention. In his opening remarks Chairman Taggart expressed confidence in a Democratic victory in November. The rules on organization were adopted and the rules of the present Congress, as far as practicable, governed the convention. Chairman Taggart then introduced Governor

TOMLINSON HALL

Matthews, the permanent Chairman, who was received with loud cheers.

Gov. Matthews' Speech.

Gov. Matthews spoke as follows:

Once again a great party assembles in convention to deliberate upon those questions that concern the welfare of a people, the good of government, and make appeal to the public for a renewal of its support and confidence. Surely the gloomy forebodings and presages of defeat heralded in the opposition papers have had but little effect. A party for over thirty years carried on the policy which was enriching the few at the expense of the many, begetting extravagance that invaded the administration of government until it was impoverishing the millions to pay tribute to the privileged few. The people at last revolted and for the first time since 1857 placed all departments of the government in the hands of the Democratic party to free them from these evils and reform the injustice of the past. We came into possession of the government, but with a depleted treasury, made so by the recklessness and profligacy of Republican administration.

Not alone was this our inheritance, but crippled and embarrassed through the entailure of extravagant appropriations, reaching beyond the close of Republican control of public affairs, and forcing upon their successors then the passage of deficiency bills and issuance of bonds to maintain the credit and the honor of the government. These strained and unnatural conditions could not but sooner or later seriously affect the prosperity of the people. The results have been witnessed in the widespread financial and commercial depression that has swept over the country. And now we see a once great party seeking to escape public condemnation for their mischievous policy, and still deceiving a long suffering people by charging these results to the accession to power of the Democratic party.

In assuming control of the Government no party ever encountered such tremendous difficulties as met the Democratic party, and no greater struggle to fulfill the promises and redeem the pledges it had made in its declaration of principles of 1892.

One by one these pledges are being redeemed through the heroic efforts of our representatives in Congress. The iniquitous and unjust Federal election law has fallen beneath our sturdy blows; the promise to repeal the silver-purchasing clause of the Sherman act has been fulfilled, and the belief enacted into law that no special or privileged class of property shall escape its just share of the burden of tax, even that be the hitherto hoarded and sacred greenback or national currency. Siege has been laid to the stronghold of Republicanism—its protective tariff—and the day of a broad commercial freedom is surely dawning upon us. Step by step we fight our way, camping on every vantage ground until we stand amid the purpling heights of victory won and success achieved. Every point gained is an advance, not only for to-day but for the future of the country. There must be no backward step. The cry is, "Forward!" We may not in the present measure and through the present Congress secure all that may be desired, but it is just as sure as night shall follow the day, all legislation that may give relief in the direction of true tariff reform is to remain upon the statutes fixed and secure. It may be added to and advanced, but it will never more be taken from or moved backward, it matters not whether the Republican or the Democratic party may be in the ascendency. True tariff reform, a broad commercial freedom, a revenue taxation based upon economic expenditure, has come to set its seal upon all future legislation of the government.

But those who, marching under the banners of Democracy, abandoning Democratic principles and forgetting the sacred cause of the people, would place obstacles in the way by localizing great national truths of government, let them beware the indignation of an aroused and outraged party.

Where President Cleveland, trusted leader, will be true to lead, we shall be brave enough to follow. The Democratic party has at times suffered defeat in the past, and may meet temporary defeats in the future, but it never surrenders. Surrender will only come when the cause of the people, to which it has ever been true, when representative government, which it has faithfully defended, and the great principles it has advocated shall have been eternally lost.

Through storm and through sunshine the Democratic party has been the persistent friend, able advocate and brave defender of silver. I do not believe the day has come when we propose, or can afford in the interests of the people, to turn our backs upon this metal. It is an important product of the country, and from the days of our fathers down through all the wondrous and amazing growth of our country we have found it a useful, safe, valuable medium of circulation.

It was decreed by God and designed by our fathers that America should be the home of civil and religious liberty. This is the great underlying principle in the liberties of a people and of free representative government. It has not been the least of the missions of the Democratic party to zealously guard this sacred privilege in the past and it shall continue in the future to raise its voice against the unholy and un-American prejudice that would stir up a feeling of hatred, bitterness, and animosity toward one religious sect, a feeling that is wholly at war with fraternal charity, Christian sentiment and highest civilization. Such a sentiment can never find a resting place in the bosom of Democracy, nor in the hearts of true American citizens. The Democratic party was the uncompromising foe of knownothingism, and it shall breathe its vengeance on all similar organizations.

The Platform.

The platform as read and adopted began by indorsing the record of the Democratic party in Indiana. It then continues:

We affirm our opposition to the vicious system of class legislation miscalled protection, and pledge ourselves to continue the battle against it until every species of extortion and robbery fostered by the McKinley act shall be obliterated from our revenue system and people enjoy all the blessings of commercial liberty. We denounce tariff protection of every kind as a fraud and robbery of the great American people for the benefit of the few. We maintain that no tariff taxes should be levied except for purposes of revenue only, and that such taxes should be limited to the necessities of the government, honestly and economically administered.

We approve the efforts of President Cleveland and his administration, and of the Democratic House of Representatives, and of a large majority of the Democratic Senators, and particularly our distinguished Senators from Indiana, the Hon. D. W. Voorhees and the Hon. David Turpie, and our entire Democratic delegation in Congress to redeem the pledges made to the country by the last Democratic convention, and to execute the will of the American people as expressed at the ballot box in 1892.

It continues, condemning the course of the Republican party, and especially condemning—

A small coterie of Senators, who, masquerading as Democrats, by threats to defeat all tariff legislation, have temporarily prevented the Democratic party from carrying out all of its pledges to the people for tariff reform as announced in the Democratic platform of 1892.

J. T. FANNING. J. S. DAILEY.

It proceeds to congratulate Congress that a substantial measure of reform has been effected and approves the action of the House of Representatives in following the enactment of this law with the passage of separate acts placing sugar, iron ore and barbed wire on the free list. It especially indorses the income tax as a wise and equitable measure, designed to place a fair share of the burdens of the Government upon the property of the country; also the law passed authorizing the taxation of greenbacks. It "favors the prompt enactment of the law by our next Legislature for the taxation of that class of money," and "most heartily indorses the repeal of the odious election law." It declares in favor of a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people. It declares the policy and the principles of the American Protective Association illiberal, unwise, unpatriotic, undemocratic and un-American. The platform strongly declares in favor of every lawful effort to secure for those who earn their livelihood by their daily toil a better condition, and condemns the efforts that have been made to identify their cause with the infamous conspiracies of lawlessness and anarchy which threaten the very foundations of order and civilization.

It denounces every manifestation of violence and mob spirit; favors laws regulating emigration to exclude the pauper and vicious classes.

It reaffirms belief that both gold and silver should be used as a money standard, and both should be coined without discrimination and without charge for mintage. Hails with delight the signs of restoration of the bimetallic system. Indorses the administration of Cleveland, especially his course in maintaining law and order. Indorses the administration of Governor Matthews, and closes with a demand that Congress deal generously and even bountifully in the matter of pensions to soldiers.

THE NOMINEES.

Something of the Men Who Have Been Named for State Offices.

William R. Myers was born in Clinton County, Ohio, in 1836, educated in the common schools of Anderson, Ind.; served in the Federal army from 1861 to 1865 and was discharged with the rank of captain; studied law with Judge Davis and was admitted to practice in 1870. He was elected Grand Master of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Indiana in 1877; elected to the Forty-sixth Congress in 1878; defeated for Congress by Godlove S. Orth in 1880; elected Secretary of State in 1882; and re-elected in 1884; nominated and beaten for Lieutenant Governor in 1888. He owned and edited the Anderson Democrat from 1887 to 1889, and was elected Secretary of State for the third time in 1892.

C. W. WELMAN. E. T. JORDAN.

Joseph T. Fanning was born on a farm in Ohio thirty-six years ago, though the most of his life has been passed in Indiana. He has a large acquaintance, and is deservedly one of the brightest and most popular of the young Democrats in the State. In 1885 he was assistant clerk of the lower house of the Indiana General Assembly. Subsequently he served as deputy under County Auditor Taggart. From this position he took service under Auditor of State Henderson as chief deputy nearly four years ago, which position he still occupies. For many years he has been prominent as a worker and leader among the Marion County Democrats.

Judge Joseph S. Dailey has been a lifelong resident of Wells county, Indiana, where he was born May 31, 1844. He received his education in the Bluffton public schools, and graduated from the Indiana University law school in 1868. In that year he received the election of District Attorney for the counties of Allen, Adams, Huntington, and Wells, and in 1868 his party chose him as Prosecuting Attorney, to which office he succeeded himself three times. In 1878 he was elected to the Legislature for Adams and Wells counties, and in 1882, in a district which was 1,100 Republican at the preceding election, he was defeated for Congress by 333 plurality. In 1888 he was elected judge of the Twenty-eighth judicial circuit, composed of Huntington and Wells counties, which position he held until May, 1893, when he was appointed by Gov. Matthews to the Supreme bench.

Ex-Senator E. M. Griffiths is 44 years old, was born and raised in Switzerland County, educated at Franklin college, admitted to the bar in May, 1876, and has practiced continually since. He was elected to the State Senate in 1886, and re-elected in 1890. During the four sessions of service in the Lerislature he was always a member of the judiciary committee, and at the session of 1893 was chairman of that committee.

E. T. J. Jordan, candidate for State Geologist, was born fifty-three years ago. He came to Indiana in 1869, studied law while teaching, and was admitted to the bar in 1876, but has practiced but little. He was appointed State Supervisor of natural gas in 1891, has given a great deal of study to geology, and has one of the best private collections of fossils in the State.

C. W. Welman was born in Crawford County, Ind., Sept. 18, 1858; removed with his parents to Gibson County, where the latter still reside, in 1860. He attended the High School at Fort Branch and the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso and taught school in Gibson and Vanderburgh Counties from 1876 to 1885; engaged in the newspaper business, editing various local papers, and took charge of the Sullivan Times in 1888, which paper he continues to ably edit. He was elected county superintendent of schools in 1891 and re-elected in 1893. He is held in high esteem by school officers and other educators of the State, with whom he enjoys a large acquaintance. He is prominent locally in secret society work.

SPECTACLES were first made in Italy.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

The seat of the tariff war having been transferred to the House, the proceedings in the Senate Monday were comparatively tame. The report of the conferees on the sundry civil bill was agreed to with some modification and the bill was sent back to conference. A further disagreement was had with the House on the amendment providing for the extension of the Government printing office, and the Senate receded from its own amendment for the purchase of the Mahone lot for the erection of a new printing office, thus leaving that building entirely unprovided for. In executive session the Chinese treaty was confirmed. The vote was 47 to 26. The House did nothing of importance except to agree to the Senate tariff bill.

There was but a scattering of Senators present Tuesday when the Vice President called the Senate to order. At 12:15 o'clock the reading of the journal was concluded, when a messenger from the House of Representatives was announced, and informed the Senate that the House had passed the bills placing coal, iron ore, barbed wire, and sugar on the free list, in which it asked the concurrence of the Senate. Senator Manderson objected to the second reading, and Senator Hill gave notice of amendments repealing all income taxes. Bills were passed promoting Commodore Louis C. Sartori, retired, to rear admiral on the retired list, and authorizing soldiers' home managers to extend outdoor relief to veterans. Resolutions for the investigation of the Dominion Coal Company of Nova Scotia and for the investigation of the recent election in Alabama were called up, but went over. The House Committee on the Judiciary decided to report the bill introduced by Delegate Smith, of Arizona, to transfer criminal jurisdiction over reservation Indians in the Territories from the Territorial to the Federal courts. The House Committee on Pensions has agreed to the Senate bill to pension Mrs. Ada J. Schwatka, the widow of Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, the arctic explorer, at $30 a month.

For five hours Wednesday afternoon the Senate debated the question of proceeding immediately to the consideration of the House bill placing sugar, raw and refined, on the free list, but no action was taken. The debate was marked by some of the most sensational speeches of the session. In the House Mr. Breckinridge, of Arkansas, recently appointed Minister to Russia, announced the resignation of his commission as a Representative. Considerable interest was excited by the reading of a resolution by Mr. Black of Illinois reciting the depletion of gold in the treasury, and instructing the coinage committee to report a bill privileged for the proper "use and avail" of the silver in the treasury, and instructing the rules committee to report a rule for its prompt consideration. It went into the box in the regular order and was followed by a resolution from Mr. Talbert (Dem.), of South Carolina, for the free coinage of silver, which was referred to the same committee on motion of Representative Tracey (Dem.), of New York.

At the opening session of the Senate Thursday Mr. Hill received unanimous consent for the consideration of his bill to provide for the exclusion and deportation of alien anarchists. It was passed without division. The House bills admitting sugar, coal, iron, and barbed wire free were referred to committee. In the House, the deficiency appropriation bill was taken up for further consideration and Mr. Sayers' motion to insist on disagreement on the Southern Pacific claim amendment was adopted. Unanimous consent was asked that the Senate substitute bill for the exclusion and deportation of alien anarchists, which had just been received from the Senate, should be taken up for consideration. Objections were made by Messrs. Tracey and Warner, of New York. The bill was withdrawn and referred to the committee on the judiciary. The conference report on the general deficiency bill was reported to the House by Mr. Sayers announcing an agreement on the Southern Pacific amendment, the Senate conferees having receded. The bill to repeal the free alcohol clause in the tariff bill was passed. At 4:45 p. m. the House adjourned until Monday.

"Honest Abe" Behind the Bar.

Abraham Lincoln once took out a license to sell liquor. The records of Sangamon County, Ill., show that he and his partner, who kept a public house, took out such a license and maintained a bar for the use and convenience of their guests. A veteran Indiana editor says that he was present at one of the seven meetings which were held during the Lincoln and Douglas senatorial campaign in 1858, and that on that occasion Lincoln publicly acknowledged that he had been an inkeeper and all that that implied. Douglas having made playful allusion to Lincoln's practice at the bar, the latter retorted that it was true, but that it applied with equal force to his distinguished opponent, "for while I have practiced behind the bar Douglas has practiced before it."

Where Four Countries Meet.

Perhaps there is only one place in the world where the flags of four nations, each on its own soil, may be seen waving in friendly rivalry, or in defiance, according to the condition of European politics. Midway in the narrow channel at the southern entrance of the Red Sea is the dark gray island of Perim, above which floats the union jack of Britain. Surmounting the steep cliff on the neighboring shore of Arabia is the crimson banner of Turkey, and on the opposite coast is the border line between the Red Sea territories of France and Italy, whose flags are flung to the breeze within half a mile of one another.

Gross Superstition.

The grossest superstition exists even in Calcutta. Recently an Indian residing in Jaun Bazar street had a live goat flung down from his two-story house in accordance with the directions of a so-called magician, who was called in to cast out a devil with which a son was supposed to be possessed. The poor brute was first fed with a few bamboo leaves over which the wizard mumbled some mantras and it was then pushed over the terrace. The animal was killed and its flesh was distributed to the poor.

THE WEATHER.

THE average annual rainfall over the whole earth is thirty-six inches.

THE principles of rainfall were first correctly set forth by Dalton in 1787.

IN the year 310 hardly a drop of rain fell in England, and 40,000 people died of famine.

IN 1035 there was a frost in England July 1 that destroyed nearly all the vegetation.

THE annual snowfall averages five feet in the interior of Maine, Vermont and New York.

EVERY civilized nation of the world, even China and Japan, now has a weather bureau.

THE heaviest rainfall is near the equator, and diminishes steadily as the latitude rises.

IN 1684 nearly all the birds of Europe were killed by the cold. Wolves entered Vienna and other large cities, and, driven by hunger, attacked the people in the streets.

THE only knowledge we have of the air currents from ten to 100 miles above the earth's surface is what has been gained from watching the luminous trains left by the meteors.

CROP OUTLOOK.

Drought in the West Has Ruined Much Vegetation Beyond Hope.

The weather bureau, in its review of the weather and crop indications issued from Chicago for the week, says:

On the Pacific coast, in the plateau regions, west Gulf States and Atlantic coast from Virginia northward, except in extreme Southwestern New England, the week has been cooler than usual. From the Upper Missouri Valley and Middle Rocky Mountain slope eastward to the South Atlantic coast, including the central valleys and lake regions, the week was warmer than usual. While more than the usual amount of rain fell during the week over a considerable portion of the Southern States and over limited areas in the Ohio, upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys, there has been less than the usual amount over much the greater portion of the country. Exceptionally heavy rains fell in some portions of Arkansas, Alabama, Louisiana and Texas, and copious showers occurred over portions of Ohio, Indiana and on the middle Atlantic coast, but over an extensive area including Kansas, portions of Nebraska, Missouri and Western Tennessee, there was no appreciable rainfall during the week.

Drought has been relieved over the greater part of Iowa and in portions of South Dakota, Southern Wisconsin and Northern Illinois, but continues in Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Southern Illinois Northern Wisconsin, Michigan, West Virginia, New York, New Jersey and in portions of Kentucky, Tennesse and Arkansas. Besides the damaging effects of drought to crops in the States named plowing for fall seeding is being retarded. Recent rains have benefited corn in Minnesota and in portions of Ohio, but in Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota the greater part of the crop has been permanently injured. Unfavorable reports are also received from Kansas, where corn is being generally cut to save fodder. In the southern States, however, except in Kentucky, where the crop is threatened in some localities, the corn is reported to be in excellent condition, and an unusually heavy yield in sections is now practically assured.

AVAILABLE SUPPLIES OF GRAIN.

Bradstreet's Report on Stocks of Wheat, Corn and Oats.

Special cable and telegraphic advices to Bradstreet's, covering the principal points of accumulation in the United States, Canada and Europe, indicate the following changes in stocks of grain last Saturday, compared with the preceding Saturday:

	Bushels.
Wheat, east of Rocky Mountains, increase	2,875,000
Corn, east of Rocky Mountains, decrease	579,000
Oats, east of Rocky Mountains, increase	1,626,000
Wheat, west of Rocky Mountains, decrease	4,000
Wheat, afloat for and in Europe, decrease	1,264,000

CHAPTER XXII.

KILL OR CURE

Mr. Sinclair was told by Lord Clanyarde of the plan which had been devised by the German physician for his daughter's cure, and, after a lengthy discussion, gave his sullen consent to the imposture.

"I don't like your German doctor—a thorough-paced charlatan, I'll warrant," he said; "and I don't like palming off an impostor upon my poor wife. But if you see any chance of good from this experiment, let it be tried. God knows I would give my heart's blood to-morrow to bring Constance back to good health and reason."

This was said with unmistable earnestness, and Lord Clanyarde believed it. He did not know what bitter reason Gilbert Sinclair had for desiring his wife's recovery in the guilty consciousness that his brutality was the chief cause of her illness.

"You are not going to bring some low-born brat into my house, I hope?" said Gilbert, with the pride of a man whose grandfather had worked in the mines, and whose father had died worth a million.

"No; we shall find a gentleman's child—some orphan of about Christabel's age—to adopt."

Gilbert shrugged his shoulders and said no more.

That visit of the German physician had certainly wrought a change in Constance Sinclair's condition, and Dr. Webb declared that the change was for the better. She seemed to have awakened from that dull apathy, that utter bitterness of mind and body, which both the London physician and the faithful country watch-dog had taken to be the precursor of death. She was restless—fluttered by some expectation which kept her senses curiously on the alert—wistful, watchful, listening—starting at every opening of a door, at every coming footfall.

On the morning after Dr. Hollendorf's visit she asked for her Bible, and began to read David's psalms of thanksgiving and rejoicing aloud, like one who gave thanks for a great joy. Later in the same day she went to the piano and sang—sang as she had never done since the beginning of her illness—sang like one who pours forth the gladness of her heart in melody.

When Dr. Webb came that afternoon he found his patient sitting in an arm-chair by the window, propped up with pillows, much to the disgust of Melanie Duport, who was on duty at this time.

"I know she isn't strong enough to sit up," said Melanie to the Doctor; "but she would do it. She seems to be watching for something or some one."

The long window, opening on the balcony, commanded a distant curve of the drive leading up to the house, and it was on this point that Constance Sinclair's eyes were fixed.

"What are you waiting for, dear lady?" asked Doctor Webb, in his bland voice, that caressing tone in which medical men address feminine and infantine patients. In Doctor Webb's case the blandness meant more than it usually does, for he really loved his patient.

"I am watching for my child. They will bring her to-day, perhaps. The strange doctor told me she was not drowned. It was true, wasn't it? He won't deceive me. There was something in his voice that made me trust him—something that went to my heart. My darling was saved, and she is coming back to me. You won't deceive me, I know. She is coming—soon—soon—soon. Dear, dearest Doctor Webb, is it true?"

"Dear Mrs. Sinclair, you must not agitate yourself in this way," cried the Doctor, flattered by this address. "Yes, yes, Lord Clanyarde is going to bring you the little girl, and you'll be very fond of her, I hope, and feel quite happy again."

"Happy," cried Constance; "I shall be in heaven. Ask papa to bring her soon."

She was restless throughout that day—sleepless all night. Sometimes her mind wandered, but at other times she spoke clearly and reasonably of God's goodness to her in saving her child. On the following day the same idea was still paramount, but she was somewhat weakened by her excitement and restlessness, and was no longer able to sit up at her post of observation by the window. As the day wore on the old dull apathy seemed to be creeping over her again. She lay on her couch by the fire, silent, exhausted, noticing nothing that occurred around her; her pulse was alarmingly weak, her eyes vacant and heavy.

"If they don't bring the child soon, it will be too late for the experiment," thought Dr. Webb; "and if they do bring it, the excitement may be fatal. God guide us aright!"

It was dusk when Lord Clanyarde's brougham drove up to the porch, and his lordship alighted, carrying a child muffled up in soft woolen shawls, and fast asleep. Gilbert Sinclair had not yet returned from his daily ride. The house was dark and empty.

Lord Clanyarde went straight to his daughter's room, where Dr. Webb was sitting, too anxious to leave his patient till the crisis which the intended experiment might produce had passed safely. Dr. Webb was not particularly hopeful about the strange doctor's plan.

"Such good news, my darling," said Lord Clanyarde, with elaborate cheerfulness; "pray don't agitate yourself, my dear Constance."

She started up from her sofa already, and tottered toward him with outstretched arms.

"I have brought you your baby. The little pet was not drowned, after all, and some good people in Germany took care of her. You will find her changed, of course—three or four months makes such a difference in a baby."

Constance neither heeded nor heard. She was sitting on the floor with the newly awakened child in her lap, hugging it to her breast, weeping sweetest tears over the soft, curly head, breathing forth her rapture in low, inarticulate exclamations. The firelight shone on the picture of mother and child clinging together thus—the little one submitting uncomplainingly to those vehement caresses.

"Thank God!" ejaculated Lord Clanyarde within himself. "She doesn't ask a question, poor child. She hasn't the faintest suspicion that we're deceiving her."

He had chosen this hour for the introduction of the infant impostor so that Constance's first scrutiny of the baby features should take place in doubtful light. If first impressions were but favorable, doubts would hardly arise afterward in that enfeebled mind. Only when reason was fully restored would Constance begin to ask awkward questions.

This evening she did not even scrutinize the baby face; she only covered it with tears and kisses, and laid it against her bosom and was happy. She accepted this baby stranger at once as her lost Christabel.

Dr. Webb was delighted. Those tears, those caresses, those gushes of happy love—what medicine could work such cure for a mind astray?

"Upon my word, I believe you have done the right thing, and that your German doctor is not such a quack as I thought him," whispered the little man to Lord Clanyarde.

He had still better reason to say this three or four hours later, when Constance was sleeping tranquilly—a sound and healthy slumber such as she had not known for many weary weeks—with the baby nestled at her side.

Mr. Sinclair heard of the success that had attended the experiment, and seemed glad, or as glad as a man could be who had pressing cause for trouble.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"EXCELLENT BASILISK!—TURN UPON THE VULTURE."

If fortune in a general way is a capricious and uncertain divinity, assuredly that particular goddess who presides over the affairs of racing men is most given to tricks and starts, to sudden frowns and unexpected smiles.

Gilbert Sinclair's new stables, had up to the beginning of the present year, brought him nothing but ill luck. So unvarying had been his ill-luck that his trainer and grooms gave full scope to their superstition, and opined that the stables were unlucky, and that no good would ever come out of them. "There had been a murder committed, may be, somewhere about," suggested one man, "or the ground had been wrongfully come by; who could tell?"

With the Craven meeting, however, the tide turned, and the Sinclair stables scored three palpable hits. But this was not all. Mr. Sinclair had bought a colt at York two years before—with all his faults and all his engagements—the engagements being particularly heavy, and the faults including one which the veterinary authorities believed might be fatal to the animal's career as a racer. The colt was of renowned lineage one both sides, and had a genealogy that went back to his grandsire and bristled with famous names—a colt in whose future some magnate of the turf would doubtless have speculated two or three thousand, but for that unlucky splinter.

Gilbert Sinclair bought the colt for two hundred and fifty, under the advice of his trainer, a shrewd Yorkshire man, who loved a bargain better than the best purchase made in the regular way.

"He's got the Touchstone and the Specter blood in him," said Mr. Jackson, the trainer. "He's bound to come out a flyer, if we can cure that off foreleg."

"But suppose we don't, Jackson," said Gilbert, doubtfully. "Two hundred and fifty's a lot of money for a lame horse, and his engagements will come to a good bit more."

"You may as well lose your money on him as on anything else, mayn't you?" argued of his employer's judgment, and did not Mr. Jackson, who had no exalted opinion, trouble himself to pretend a greater respect than he felt. The best of men is but small in the eyes of his trainer. "You let me have that there colt to nuss, and say no more about it. It'll be a fad for me. I ought to have my fancy sometimes. You have yours, and a fat lot comes of it."

Thus urged, Gilbert bought the colt, and John Jackson took him under his wing, and made him his pet and darling, shutting him up in impenetrable loose boxes, and exercising him secretly in the morning gray in sequestered paddocks far from the eyes of touts. Mr. Jackson had children—children who climbed on his knees and called him father in childhood's lisping syllables, but there was a pride in John Jackson's eye and a tenderness in his voice when he spoke of Goblin, the bay colt, which his children had never been able to evoke.

"I want to win the Derby before I die," he said, with a touch of sentiment, like Moses sighing for the land of Canaan. "It isn't much to ask for, after having done my duty by a blessed lot of screws."

Nobody—not even Mr. Sinclair himself—could ever penetrate the veil of mystery with which Jackson surrounded his favorite. Whether Goblin was doing well or ill was a secret which Jackson kept locked within his own breast. When Jackson looked gloomy the underlings in the stable concluded that Goblin was "off his feed," or that Goblin was "up to nought."

When it came to the contest of a trial, Mr. Jackson shrank from the contest, and when compelled to run his protege against the best horse in the stable, secretly weighted Goblin in such a manner as to insure his being ignominiously beaten.

Goblin kept none of his two-year-old engagements, though Mr. Jackson went so far as to admit by this time that the colt was no more lame than he was. "But I ain't going to let him fritter away his strength in two-year-old races," said Mr. Jackson, decisively; "I ain't forgotten Bonnie Dundee."

Gilbert Sinclair submitted unwillingly, being at this time very low down in his luck as a racing man, and anxious for any success which might in some wise redeem his position.

Now came spring—violets and primroses; woodlands white and chestnut bloom, and hawthorn; nightingales warbling their vesper love songs, and—much more important to gentlemen of Mr. Sinclair's class—the Two Thousand Guineas. And now Goblin came forward to perform his first important engagement as a three-year-old, and Gilbert Sinclair was richly rewarded for his patience.

Goblin—a horse entirely unknown to the racing public—came in an easy winner, and Gilbert, who had taken his trainer's advice, and had backed his horse to the utmost capacity, won a small fortune, as well as feeling pretty sure about his expectations for the Derby.

It was the first great success Gilbert Sinclair had ever had upon the turf, and he left Newmarket that night almost lightheaded with excitement. Things had been going much better since January. The men had gone back to their work in the grimy north. Indian steamers were using Mr. Sinclair's coal as fast as he could produce it. The golden tide was flowing into his exchequer again, and his banker's book no longer presented a dismal blank upon its left-hand pages. The success at Newmarket was the crowning mercy. He felt himself a rich man once more, and laughed to scorn the notion of surrendering Davenant at midsummer. Wyatt had bought and paid for the estate, but of course would be glad to sell it again at a profit.

The scheme for Constance Sinclair's restoration had prospered wonderfully. Health and strength had returned, and with these the clear light of reason. She had never doubted the identity of the little girl Lord Clanyarde had brought her that winter evening with the child she had lost.

She had readily accepted the story—a somewhat lame one—of the child's rescue by some kind German peasants who had brought it over to England, where by a curious chain of circumstances, Lord Clanyarde had come to know of its existence. The little girl was known to the whole household as Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair's own child. There would be time enough by and by to reveal the imposture. Even Martha Briggs—little Christabel's devoted nurse—had never suspected the trick that had been played upon her mistress. The only member of the household that had shown any particular curiosity or desire to know the ins and outs of this business was Melanie Duport. That young woman had asked as many questions as she could venture to put, and had appeared somewhat mystified by the course of events.

So there had been peace at Davenant during the early spring. Constance had been quietly happy in the little girl's society, and in those joys which the convalescent feels when a world that has been darkened to the wandering mind reappears in all its light and beauty. Never had the woods and fields, the blue April sky and shining river, seemed so lovely in the eyes of Constance Sinclair as they appeared this year. Her love of music, of art, of all bright things, seemed intensified by that awful season of darkness, in which these delights had been blotted from her mind.

Her husband was tolerably kind to her, but spent much of his time away from Davenant, and did not trouble her repose by filling the house with his rackety companions.

Mr. Wyatt came now and then for a day or two, but he was the only guest during the tranquil springtime.

Thus stood matters early in May, when Goblin won the Two Thousand Guineas, and, in the trainer's phraseology, brought his owner a pot of money.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

THE FIGHTING POWER OF CHINA

About a Million Men in the Army Now and Many More Available.

The fighting power of Chinese militia when armed with modern weapons is evidenced by the frequent repulses and defeats which the French suffered during the campaign in Tonquin, the last being that of Gen. Negrier, near Lang-Son, nine days before the Franco-Chinese treaty of peace was signed, and when the French army of occupation in Tonquin had been raised to 40,000 men. These Chinese troops were merely levies from Yunnan, Kuang-tang, and Kuang-si, and not part of the 150,000, who had been trained by European officers in Northern China. The total army of China at that time, including 600,000 militia, known as the green rag army, scattered through the various provinces, was said to be about 1,000,000 men. In time of necessity this force could be largely increased. The following quotation from an author who had experience with Gen. Gordon's "ever victorious army" shows Chinamen are admirably suitable for soldiers:

"The old notion is pretty well got rid of that they are at all a cowardly people when properly paid and efficiently led: while the regularity and order of their habits, which dispose them to peace in ordinary times, give place to a daring bordering upon recklessness in time of war. Their intelligence and capacity for remembering facts makes them well-fitted for use in modern warfare, as does also the coolness and calmness of their disposition. Physically they are, on the average, not so strong as Europeans, but considerably more so than most of the other races of the East, and on a cheap diet of rice, vegetables, salt fish, and pork they can go through a vast amount of fatigue, whether in a temperate climate or a tropical one, where Europeans are ill-fitted for exertion. Their wants are few; they have no caste prejudices and hardly any appetite for intoxicating liquors."

Quakers, Puritans, and Turks.

The first Quakers who came to New England were two unprotected women, the one, Ann Austin, about 60 years of age, the mother of five children, and the other, Mary Fisher, her maiden friend, over 30. They came from Barbados. Immediately upon their arrival they were taken from ship to jail, and for fear that any one would talk with them, and thereby spread their heresies, the window of the cell was boarded up.

Four years afterward Mary Fisher went on a mission to the Orient, to bring her testimony to the Turks. The great Sultan Mohammed IV. was on the throne. He accorded her an audience, and received her with civility, and she was in nowise restrained while in his dominions. The circumstance of Mary Fisher's having been persecuted and imprisoned both in Old and New England, and left free and unmolested in the dominions of the Sultan, has been variously explained so as not to be so creditable to the "Grand Turk." The fact is, in Mohammedan lands the humane principle of toleration had been learned and practiced earlier than in Christian countries, as is evidenced by the Turkish concessions to Christians and other sects, which date back to the twelfth century. These were continued and renewed in the middle of the sixteenth century, when Constantinople was captured.—Roger Williams, by Oscar S. Straus.

Will Try Women Gardeners.

It is said that Lady Carlisle is training an entire staff of women to take charge of the extensive grounds of her fine York estate. She claims that women, by right of their superior taste and judgment in everything pertaining to floriculture, should be, and are, better adapted to the lighter work of garden making than are men, and with the tendency of the age, which is to give women the first chance at everything, she is trying her experiment on a wholesale scale.—New York Mail and Express.

One Thing Undone.

Brave old Gen. Jim Steedman, during the thickest of the battle of Chickamaugua, dashed up to a retreating brigade and shouted: "Face about, boys! We must hold this point!" "But, General," said a brave officer, "we have done everything that brave and patriotic men can do for their country——" "What! Everything?" cried Steedman; "you haven't died yet!"

A NATIVE of Hawaii, seeing a man riding a bicycle, said that it must be very nice to "walk sitting down."

IT'S A PALACE OF VICE

NEW YORK'S GAMBLING HOUSE FOR WOMEN.

Splendid and Luxurious Furniture and Costly Fittings Make It a Royal Resort—In the Monte Room—Leaders of Fashionable Society Go There.

Where Women Gamble.

Gambling is a vice which is generally associated with men rather than women and one which the fair sex rarely, it is supposed, indulges in. Of late years, however, women in New York have engaged in gambling so extensively that one of the most splendid resorts in that city is a gambling house fitted up exclusively for women's use. It is a four-story brown stone front and after ringing the bell the visitor is admitted to the vestibule. Here she is met by a colored woman known as "flat-nosed Sue," who carefully scrutinizes her. If the visitor is found all right she is then given entrance to the hall.

To the left is the parlor, which runs the entire length of the first floor. It is gorgeously fitted up. Heavy velvet carpets hide the floor. Mirrors running from the floor to the ceiling are on every side. Heavy curtains shield the windows. The great chandeliers which hang from the ceiling are of polished brass and cut glass. Rare marble statues deprive otherwise gloomy corners of their somberness. Expensive paintings dot the walls between the mirrors. A great clock stands between the two windows opening to the rear of the house. A picture of Mephistopheles is blazoned on the glass face of the clock. He holds in his right hand four aces. The joker of the deck of cards is dancing a jig on his forked tail. At his feet is a pile of gold. That is the only suggestion in the parlor of the true nature of the house.

BROKE!

The main room on the second floor is half as large as the parlor. It is called "the faro room." Three heavy sets of curtains bar the windows. The light is supplied by eleven incandescent lamps arranged in a circle, like a ring of diamonds, about a rod of gold. There are two faro layouts, one at either end of the room.

THE BOUNCER.

Immediately back of this room is a smaller room known as "the little poker-room." There are four tables in this room; each table has a colored female attendant.

The Monte Parlor.

The back stairs run on up to the second floor. In the corner of this landing is a marble figure of Venus, with a green band painted around the neck. The third floor is arranged differently from the second floor. The small room at the head of the front stairs is a toilet room. The room adjoining is known as "the monte parlor." There are no chairs in this room. In place of wall paper the walls are covered with cards. The word "monte" is spelled on the wall in aces. There are three monte layouts, one on each side of the room save that on which is the entrance. The juggler of the cards stands with her back to the wall. The players stand in front of the board beyond a chalk-line, which is drawn on the floor two feet from the board. There are only two attendants in this room.

A WOMAN FARO DEALER.

The largest room on this floor adjoins the monte-room. It is known as the "miscellaneous room." It has nine tables in it, which may be used for any games desired.

The remaining room on this floor is a very small room in the front of the house. Only the best known of the players are allowed to enter it. It is known as "the millionaire mansion." It is in it that the largest games in the house are played. If several players wish to play a game that practically has no limit, they get this room.

The house has a splendid restaurant in which the finest products of the market are served there free of charge to the players. There are two big tables and three small ones in that room. All liquors and wines, except champagne, are free. Champagne costs five dollars a bottle. Cigarettes are heaped about the tables on small silver platters. Back of the restaurant is the smoking room. It is a small room filled with cushions and divans. There is a large silver tray on a small table in the center of the room, which is filled with the various brands of cigarettes. Over the table are the words, "It has all gone up in smoke."

Back of the smoking-room is the most important room in the place. It is a little cubby hole not over ten feet square. In one corner is a big safe, on which are painted in red letters the words: "Monte Carlo—try to break it." The room is the office of the proprietor. Any guest having any complaint to make about alleged unfair play, discourteous treatment on the part of an attendant or discomfort due to the management of the house, goes to this office and states her grievance. The woman in the office is known as Madam Hart. She listens patiently to all complaints, and if the house is in the wrong the matter is speedily set right. If the guest is wrong Madam Hart never fails to promptly tell her so.

Appearance of the Dealers.

All the dealers in charge of the tables are dressed alike. Their gowns resemble in many respects the dresses of the colored servants. They wear nothing on their heads, however. Their gowns are of plain black without pockets. The sleeves are tight-fitting and extend only to the elbows. The forearms and hands are bare. The gowns button in the back and are severely plain in front. This does away with any opportunity to smuggle cards out of sight. These dealers range in age from twenty to thirty. None of the dealers ever speak to a player save in regard to the game. The class of women who frequent this house are far above the ordinary run of female residents of New York. Many of them are women of position as well as wealth. They are women whose husbands are familiar figures about town and who are themselves leaders of fashionable society.

Best Butter Producer.

A comparison of the yields of digestible matter produced by mangels, sugar beets and silage corn when grown under similar conditions, and also a comparison of the merits of roots and silage for the production of milk and butter, was recently made at the Pennsylvania experiment station, with the following result: In a feeding trial involving two lots of five cows each, and covering three periods of twelve days, 100 pounds of digestible matter in the silage ration produced 131.92 pounds of milk and 7.21 pounds of butter, while an equal amount of digestible dry matter in the form of roots produced 137.36 pounds of milk, and 6.53 pounds of butter—a difference in the butter of 10.4 per cent. But when the two lots of cows were fed alike on a combination ration of beets and silage, the silage lot produced, per 100 pounds of digestible matter consumed, 139 pounds of milk and 6.79 pounds of butter, and the roots lot 150 pounds of milk and 6.46 pounds of butter, thus showing an apparent superiority of the cows constituting the silage lot. When this is taken account of, it leaves a net gain in feeding value of the silage over the roots of 5 per cent. The cost of an acre of beets is $56.07, while that of an acre of corn is $21.12, which fairly proves that the latter is not only the cheapest but is fully as effective as beets for the production of milk or butter.—Connecticut Farmer.

Profits in Pecan-Raising.

A Texas man who has a pecan orchard in bearing has the following to say about it:

I am more than satisfied with my investment in pecans in this section, along the valley of the Pecan bayou, in Brown county, and were it possible for me to put in double the amount of land I now have (which is 400 acres, with 11,000 trees on same), I would certainly embark in a similar enterprise. As to the amount of the trade in Texas I am not prepared to give you any definite information, but I can say there was one year here at Brownwood alone that there was shipped out $55,000 worth of pecans in a season. I will present some figures to show the profits that can be obtained from an acre of trees when they come into full bearing.

Twenty-seven trees can be grown in one acre. When they come into full bearing these trees will each yield annually about eight bushels (some bear as much as twelve bushels). This makes 216 bushels to the acre. Extra large nuts bring from $4 to $6 per bushel, while small nuts bring from $1.50 to $3. Suppose we estimate the value at $4. This would give you for one year's crop $864. The cost of gathering would be nominal, say $64, as a patent sweep could be constructed to sweep them off the ground after the first frost, which opens the burrs. This leaves a net amount of $800 per acre. Suppose we take off $400 for contingencies, and we have $400 income from one acre. I would rather have a pecan farm than stock in any bank.—San Antonio Express.

The Causes of Fainting.

Fainting proceeds from different causes, the most common being a disturbance of the circulation of the blood in the brain. For an ordinary fainting fit lay the patient flat. Great harm has often resulted from the treatment by ignorant persons in trying to make the patient sit up, or propping up the head on pillows. To send the blood back from the heart to the brain, the flat posture is absolutely necessary. Let the patient lie so that the feet are higher than head, throw the clothes about the chest and throat open, sponge the face with cold water and give some cold water to drink.

W. S. COLLINS. W. S. Collins, of Saginaw, Speaks. W. S. COLLINS.

"I am 29. At 15 I learned a bad habit which I continued till 19. I then became "one of the boys" and led a gay life. Exposure produced Syphilis. I became nervous and despondent; no ambition; memory poor; eyes red, sunken and blur; pimples on face; hair loose; bone pains; weak back; varicocele; dreams and losses at night; weak parts; deposit in urine, etc. I spent hundreds of dollars without help, and was contemplating suicide when a friend recommended Drs. Kennedy & Kergan's New Method Treatment. Thank God I tried it. In two months I was cured. This was six years ago, and never had a return. Was married two years ago and all happy. Boys, try Drs. Kennedy & Kergan before giving up hope."

"I live on the farm. At school I learned an early habit, which weakened me physically, sexually and mentally. Family Doctors said I was going into "decline" (Consumption). Finally "The Golden Monitor," edited by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan fell into my hands. I learned the Truth and Cause. Self abuse had sapped my vitality. I took the New Method Treatment and was cured. My friends think I was cured of Consumption. I have sent them many patients, all of whom were cured. Their New Method Treatment supplies vigor, vitality and manhood."

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein Jessie Dancer is plaintiff and John Gall, and Caroline Gall his wife, Martin V. B. Cole, Louella Martine, George Martine, Bertha Knight, Chas. Knight, Elisabeth St Clair, George St. Clair, John Melville Wescott, and Lillie Wescott are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of one hundred seventy-three dollars and ten cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder on between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the court house, of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Saturday, August 25th, 1894,

The south half (½) of the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section eight (8) in township thirty-three (33) north of range thirteen (13) east, containing twenty (20) acres, be the same more or less, situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and cost, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Dr. Fruth Coming.

A man of national reputation as a physician, surgeon and specialist, is the kind that all chronic sufferers should employ; one, who by personal contact with hundreds of afflicted, with all sorts of ailments, that other physicians have either neglected or by their incompetent treatment have left them wrecks to await their doom, can find not only relief but often permanent cure by placing their case in the hands of a man like Dr. Fruth, of Chicago, who makes a specialty of curing disease—not trifling with it, as life is too sweet for expensive experiments with men who don't understand the rudiments of medicine.

Caucus Notice.

I would advise that all township caucuses be held during the last week of August, on such day of that week and at such hour as the township chairman may designate. These nominations of township officers are important and the caucuses should be attended by every democratic voter.

All democratic committeemen and candidates are called to meet at the court house in Auburn, at 1:30 p. m. of Sept. 1.

CHARLES ROBINSON, the first governor of Kansas after she was admitted, died last week.

JAPAN is trying to enlist Americans in California to go over there "to build railroads," but really for soldiers.

VALUABLE new gold mines have been found in New Mexico, and thousands of miners and others are flocking there.

DEMOCRATS of the 35th Illinois senatorial district succeeded in making a nomination last week after taking 3039 ballots.

THE KRIEGERBUND, the German G. A. R. which includes soldiers who were in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 met in Pittsburg Monday.

Official returns from the late election in Tennessee show a democratic majority over all of 13,869, a gain of more than 25,000 in two years.

The B. & O. has ordered 1000 new freight cars, part of them being needed to take the place of those destroyed in the riot at Chicago.

THE Senate has reported a bill to put a straight revenue duty on sugar, so as not to favor the trusts. That is the proper way, if we have any duty on it.

ALABAMA is exporting coal to Cuba. Yet her senators ask for a duty on coal to prevent the importation of that article from Nova Scotia. "Protection" is a fraud.

ONE reason that gold has been going to Europe is that some men over there have sold their U. S. bonds to men over here. This is especially true of railway bonds.

THE 100 Coxeyites in Maryland, have all been let out of jail but two who are leaders, and will be tried. Maryland people don't pay tramps $100 to make political speeches for them.

BUSINESS seemed to pick up at all great business centers last week, soon after the tariff bill was passed. Compared with the same week last year it was 8 percent better, while Canada showed 8 per cent worse.

THE Senate on Saturday took a vote as to putting back on sugar, the McKinley bounty of 2 cents a pound. All republicans and populists voted for the bounty and the democrat senators from Louisiana. But all other democrats voted no

JOHN B. TALLEY, a circuit court judge in Alabama, has been impreached and put out of office, on a charge of accessory to a murder. He withheld a telegram sent to a man telling the latter that men were going to kill him. Not being warned the man was killed.

THE first democratic county convention ever held in Burnett county, Wisconsin, met at Grantsburg the county seat, last Saturday. It was a big meeting, and endorsed the Wilson bill and President Cleveland. They have never put a ticket in the field before, for the reason that the republicans so greatly outnumbered them.

CHINA AND JAPAN are both buying supplies in this country. The steamer, City of Pekin, which left San Francisco last week had a load of beef, flour canned meats and fruit, groceries, etc. besides about 5000 lbs of ginseng root, which those countries esteem highly as a medicine. They use it about as much as we do quinine.

IT NOW comes out that 4000 of the employes at Pullman joined the A. R. U. paying $1 each as initiation fee. No doubt the Pullman employes have been badly treated, but this $4,000 so foolishly expended, would have done more good if used to move a hundred families or so, to some locality where they would have better treatment.

THE great relay bicycle race from Washington D. C. to Denver, Colo., was completed in 6 days, 10 hours and 37 minutes a distance of 2037 miles. They had expected to do it in eight days, but beat that by 37 hours and 23 minutes. They carried a message from President Cleveland to Gov. Waite, and one from Gen. Greeley the head of the weather bureau to Gen. McCook.

REPUBLICANS try to shed tears over the action of congress in putting a duty on sugar. If they are in earnest, why could not republican senators be found who would take the place of the four eastern, sugar trust democratic senators so that the free sugar bill could be passed? This was easy to do, but they did not want it that way. Four democrats and all the republican and populist senators were solid against free sugar.

THE fool killer has evidently overlooked DeKalb county in his recent travels. If this were not so, we would not be regaled with articles on government ownership of railroads etc. For the fifth time we ask: Where would government get the money to pay them enormous sums? Or, suppose the roads did not want to sell? Or, suppose a part would sell and a part refused? The party that advocates such schemes, is the proper one to back up Coxey and condone the wanton destruction of property, and similar crimes, by A. R. U. and their allies.

Democratic Pledges Redeemed.

The democrats, in the campaign of 1892, promised to reduce expenses from the extravagant point they had reached under republican rule. They have done as they promised. The total net reduction made by this congress as compared with the last congress, amounts to over 40 millions. And this in spite of the fact that some departments had to be given increased sums, as in case of the post-office department. In that, over three millions more had to be given, as the country is growing. There had to be an advance of over three millions to the navy, as we are building so many new and costly cruisers. The fortifications provided for, also take more money, and there is a river and harbor bill that requires 11 millions, as no river and harbor bill was passed by the last congress. The fifty vessels of the new navy, some of which are now done, and several more to be made under that law, will, in a space of about ten years, cost 112 millions. But we will have one of the best navies in the world. But in spite of all these additional items, we will, as noted, save about 40 millions. These savings, taken in connection with the repeal of bad laws, the reform of the tariff, prove that whatever shortcomings this congress may have had, it has lived up to many of its promises to the people. And in these items saved should be named $700,000 saved by reducing the number of government clerks, 600.

Lincoln's Birthplace.

The birthplace of Abraham Lincoln in LaRue County, Kentucky, was recently purchased by Maj. S. P. Gross, who means to make of it a kind of museum, filled with relics of the President. The place is near Hodgensville, a small hamlet about eighty miles from Louisville. It is a desolate farm, and of the single-room log hut in which the President was born nothing remains but a heap of stones where the rough chimney stood. All else has disappeared, though the decayed stump of what is said to have been a pear tree is seen near by. A few hundred yards to the southwest there now stands a substantial farm-house which manifestly belongs to a later era. The place has been in the hands of farm tenants for several years and shows signs of neglect. Weeds have grown up around the yard and wild shrubbery in the fence corners. A more unpromising place for the birth of a great man was probably never seen, and the original dwelling was certainly scarcely better than the dreary fourteen-feet-square hut at Elizabethtown, in which Thomas Lincoln, the President's father, first settled upon his marriage with Nancy Hanks in 1806.

Why they Love Coxey!

Coxey! Well what has Coxey done to make him great, that respectable and intelligent people should fall down and worship him? Why did we not hear of him a year or two ago? And why do we hear of him now? There is but one answer. It is this: Coxey has not done one worthy thing, but has done many things of which a self respecting man would be justly ashamed. He has called together several "armies" of bums, tramps and vagabonds of high or low degree and assuming the borrowed plumes and title of "General" has marched these "Falstaffian" "armies" across the country, and subsisted them by begging food like any other tramp. In fact, this begging was generally some thing more. It was little less than "holding up," for where Coxey's army of bums approached a city, they knew they inspired fear enough to make it certain the people of that city would "shell out." And under this stress of fear, they did shell out. Some of these armies, did worse than to "gently rob cities." They "forcibly robbed", railroads of locomotives and sometimes stole entire trains, and for these acts many of them are now serving terms in prison. Yet Coxey is a leader and idol. He made all these crimes possible and with some people popular. So popular has he made these disreputable practices and audacious crimes that a political party has adopted him as one of its leaders, and has espoused his teachings. With such a leader of such a party, we have a plain intimation of what the new party is likely to be, and to what depths it proposes to drag all who are willing to fall into its net. To the intelligent people of this intelligent community, no further comment is needed.

It was Golden.

Fifty years ago, on August 18, 1844, Mr. Michael Wheteel was married to Miss Caroline Symonds. Fifty years of happy married life have gone by and this aged couple are still permitted to enjoy the pleasures of this life. Their four daughters, Mrs. Wm. Feagler, Mrs. Lyman Lockwood, Mrs. Harve Clark, and Mrs. Ted Kelham, had planned a surprise for their parents, and on Sunday, August 19, they and their families came with well-filled baskets to spend the day at the old home. Mrs. Wheteel was very much surprised. She said she had told the girls that the basket meeting was not until next Sunday, thinking at first they had made a mistake in the date; but when they began to get out of the buggies and carry their baskets into the house, she then realized that she and her husband had been taken by surprise. Mr. Sullivan, the photographer, came out from Garrett, and Mr. and Mrs. Whetsel, their children and grandchildren had their pictures taken. not knowing when they would all be permitted to meet again. One of the main features of this golden wedding day was the splendid repast which was served about one o'clock, of which all heartily partook. Those present beside the aged bride and groom, were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Feagler, their daughter Mrs. Elpha Boreland, Clint, Frank, Orve, Ted and Dottie Feagler, Mrs. Lyman Lockwood, her daughter Hettie and husband Frank Avery, Ora, Bert, Nellie and Gracie Lockwood, Mr and Mrs. Harve Clark, Jay and Ray Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Kelham, Chloe, Claude, Mary and Baryl Kelham. and Miss Florence Pence and Miss Carrie Ensley. Toward evening they repaired to their respective homes, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Whetsel many happy returns and many more years of happiness, as happy, if not happier than the years that have gone by. All those present report a good time.

C. W. Lane is at Rantoul Ill., being called there by the serious illness of his father.

Miss Noel and Miss Scherer, of Ft. Wayne, are guests of the family of Wm. McIntyre.

Court was in session a day or two this week, and some unfinished business disposed of.

A man was walking our street yesterday in his bare feet. Except for this he was comfortably well dressed.

Herbert Martin, of Albion, was here Friday, on his way so visit the relatives in Columbia City and vicinity.

We are sorry to hear that Mrs. H. H. Slaybaugh at Fairfield, has been sick a long time, and is still quite poorly.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church are preparing for their annual bazar, to be held near the holidays.

Don't forget the closing out sale, dirt cheap, of the entire stock of boots and shoes at the Potter store, now going on.

The Rebekahs will give a social Friday afternoon and evening on the court house lawn. Ice cream, cake and coffee, all for 15 cents. Give the ladies a good patronage.

"Scratch your own back." That is what J. A. Slaybaugh advises, when he sells you a neat little article to do it with. Price 10 cents. But who would ever have thought of such a line of business? This is an age of improvements.

A traveling bookseller began sales here Saturday, and has kept it up so far this week, and expects to stay here this week, and then after a few days absence, return for a few days more. He has many excellent books, which he sells very cheap.

Mike Lumm and family move next week to Columbia City, as it is much more convenient for Mr. Lumm for his present work. Since his promotion his duties carry him to all parts of the line, but there is one good feature, he gets twice as much pay, his wages now being $90 a month. He and his family are admirable people, and we hate to see them leave here.

The big century run to start from Auburn Sept. 7 will bring into town a large number of the best cyclers in the country. Wheelmen from all the surrounding counties in this state and Ohio are expected to meet here the 6th of September. Arrangements are made for breakfast next morning at 3:30 so all can start for Huntington together. The distance to Huntington from Auburn is 105 miles. Mr. Cobb went over the road and measured it with a cyclometer, Monday, making the distance in 9 hours and 45 minutes.

W. H. McIntosh was invited by some old comrades, to attend the soldiers' reunion at Denver Miami county last Saturday, and went down there and spent the with them. It was a general, reunion for all the veterans in that section, and it was expected that Gen. John F. Coburn, of this state, was to address them. He was Mr. McIntosh's old brigade commander, and as he could not be present Mr. McIntosh was asked to take his place, and at least make an address, which he did. The citizens and veterans united to make his stay with them pleasant.

Rainier's Meat Market.

Joseph Rainier has again entered on business at the old stand, and will as ever, keep a first-class meat market in the best style. He will keep a full line of fresh and cured meats, and always welcome his old customers, and as many new ones as favor him with their patronage.

Their Fiftieth Annaul Meeting.

The church of the Disciples of Christ hold their fiftieth annual meeting for DeKalb county, August 24 to 28 at Hamilton's Grove 2½ miles north of St. Joe. Hon. Z. T. Sweeney, ex-consul-general to Turkey, will do the preaching. The basket dinner will be a necessary feature.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly." Sold by Robbins and McCord druggist Auburn Ind. 34tf

Martinsville Gazette: The family of Albert Thomas, a farmer living near this city, is afflicted with hæmophilia, known as "bleeders." While this physical peculiarity is no new thing to the medical profession, it is extremely rare. It means that persons thus afflicted will bleed to death, generally before reaching twenty one years of age. The disease is hereditary. Last week the two-year old son of Mr. Thomas received a small scratch on the finger, but it came near proving fatal. Dr. Sweet did what he could, but for three days the blood continued oozing out of the wound. The boy was completely exhausted, and his blood was so thin that it took on a yellowish tint and assumed the fluidity of water. Two sons of Mr. Thomas have died from the same disease, having received slight punctures of the skin. Also, Mrs. Thomas has had several brothers to die with that disease. There is no known cure for the ailment.

By a kind of mutual and general consent the various churches, societies, etc., have come to honor the County Teachers' Institute by holding no meetings on the week the institute is in session. This plan gives all the people the opportunity of attending the various sessions of the institute, and besides, shows a most commendable educational spirit.

Sam P. Jones, the noted Evangelist, said in one of his sermons at the great Canadian Chautauqua, "Having heard the prominent orators of our day, I am free to declare that I reckon Robert McIntyre, of Chicago, the finest popular speaker on this continent." Gen. R. A. Alger, ex-governor of Michigan,—"I heard McIntyre's lecture. It is a thrilling picture and will stir everyone fortunate enough to hear it."

Some people seem to be cross and irritable all time and never have a good word for any body, it is because their stomach bloats and sours making them feel on distant terms with best friend, don't fail to remember there is one who can cure you and make you friends to every body. We refer to Dr. Fruth who will guarantee to cure any case of dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach, that he ever saw, and that too on short notice. Go and see him about your stomach.

Angola Herald:—An esteemed lady subscriber and reader of the Herald tells us she has "invented" or at least discovered a plan for watering plants during this dry weather, that saves labor and at the same time supplies the needed moisture gradually and exactly where it is most needed. Her plan is this: Take an old fruit can, parts of broken crockery or dishes, anything that will hold water, and set it beside the plant to be watered. Now fill the can or dish with water and drop into it a rag or piece of carpet, allowing one end of the rag to hang over the side of the can and rest on the plant near the ground. The rag acts as a conductor and will gradually drink up the water, or rather transfer it to the plant where it goes directly to the roots and supplies the needed moisture. It is simple and practical. Try it.

He will not only do tailoring, but make a specialty of cleaning and repairing men's garments.

William H. Brown, one of our latest new subscribers, takes a pretty sensible view of the cause of hard times. As a young man, he has made a living by his labor, and even saved up enough to get himself a small farm. There are some of his old playmates who had the same chance, but spent every cent of their earnings. Now they complain of hard times, and want to be Coxeyites.

W. H. Hoagland, who used to live east of here as a lad in the family of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. McGown, was here last week. He resides at Springfield, O., and follows the business of putting up reapers for the big factories there. He began in the wheat harvests of southern Iowa about May 20, and had just finished the season in cutting wheat in North Dakota. How is that for harvest experience?

Angola Herald—The work of excavating for the cellar of the new block on the north side of the public square proves that when the town was founded here there was a sink or basin in that locality. A soft maple stump, well preserved, was excavated at a depth of seven or eight feet below the surface. It remained standing where it had grown, and from which the tree must have been chopped about the year 1840.

The Junior Endeavors at the Presbyterian church were to give an entertainment of a literary and musical character, last Sunday evening, but owing to some trouble at the electric light works, the lights failed and they had to give it up. It will come off all right next Sunday evening. There will be a good program, and they invite all to come. The Senior Endeavors will help in the speaking and music.

We hear W. H. Shatto spoken of as a candidate for trustee in Fairfield township on the democratic. We believe he would make a splendid officer, as his education, tastes and judgment would fit him for it. Since writing this we hear of another young democrat who is spoken of for the same office. It is Cron Bair. We are personally acquainted with both men, and feel that Fairfield would be properly cared for by either.

O. E. Wilcox, of Ft. Wayne, rides 16 miles, the distance between Ft. Wayne and Churubusco, in 40 minutes, beating all former records. Mr. Wilcox met with an accident between Churubusco and Albion, running into a large rut that had been filled with pulverized dust to the level. The result was a smashed rear wheel and a hard fall. The driving force, viz., shaft and bevel gears to his Chainless were uninjured in the least. Mr. Wilcox took a train at Churubusco for Auburn, where he procured another wheel and started out to overtake Cobb and Ashelman, who left for Albion 15 minutes before his arrival. The wrecked wheel was on exhibition in one of the windows at the Auburn Cyclery for several days, attracting much attention.

L. O. BUCHTEL, Homœopathic Physician and Surgeon.

Special attention given to chronic and obscure cases and catarrhal diseases of the nose, throat and lungs; also to diseases peculiar to women and children.

Office and residence over Smith & Madden's marble works, Auburn, Ind. Office apart from residence and private. All calls attended to promptly, night or day.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Miss Flora Hoffman's class will give a musical recital at the Presbyterian church August 24, in the evening.

Social supper of the German M. E. church at Chas. Rant's this evening, Aug. 23, from 5 to 7. Mite 15 cents. All invited.

The Junior C. E. assisted by the Christian Endeavors will give a literary and musical entertainment at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening. All invited.

The Rebekahs will give a social on the public square Friday evening, from 4 to 9. Ice cream, cake and coffee for 15 cents. All come and help them.

Gen. Blair, W. H. Less and C. M. Phillips, all Waterloo attorneys, were here at court Monday.

Take your laundry to the Excelsior, opposite the Swineford. Good work guaranteed by the proprietor R. A. York. 34-35

Misses Lula, Lena and Olla Rempis, of Waterloo, will entertain a party of their young friends this evening. Several from Auburn are among the number.

Old Mrs. Weaver, mother of H. H. Weaver, died Monday. Funeral services were held Tuesday, and Mr. Weaver accompanied the remains to the old home in Ohio for burial.

A horse pawed the mud and water with fierce impatience for about two hours, in that heavy rain Saturday evening. He was hitched in a buggy and stood at the big telegraph pole by the Farmers Bank. Who was its cruel owner?

Father Young, of Garrett, and J. R. Skilling, of the same place, were here Saturday to make arrangements for the burial of Mr. Skilling's mother, whose obituary we publish this week. The interment was here Sunday afternoon. She was well known to the earlier residents of this place. She planted the seeds for the big locust trees in front of old Mrs. Hebel's residence, bringing the little trees with her when she came to this town.

Frank Bolender, over in Gastown, has a strange plant, a vine, of an unknown species. The seed was found in a package of coffee, of the kind Joseph Link was selling last spring, and he saved it and planted it. It is a vine with leaves somewhat like those of the honey-locust, only fewer in number. Its growth is remarkable, as it sometimes adds several inches to its length in a day. He will try and keep it through the winter, and see what it makes next year.

Don't fail to attend the Musical Entertainment, Social and Banquet next Monday evening. The supper alone will well be worth the 20 cents admission. The Musical will consist of piano, violin, guitar, cornet, vocal solos, etc., from among the best soloists of the county, and the banquet and social features will furnish entertainment that none can afford to miss. All should procure their tickets early that the committee on supper may know how many plates to spread.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: I have been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy; a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the greatest medicine in the world." Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottles 15 cents. Sold by Robbins and McCord druggists Auburn Ind. 34tf

CONSUL SMITH, at Mayence, Germany, says the German people are "salting down" somewhere about six hundred million dollars annually and investing most of it in interest-bearing securities either at home or abroad. He estimates the net income from such investments at $119,000,000 annually.

MANY fruit growers were somewhat surprised recently to see the Portland market stocked with Tasmania apples, selling at $2 per box. The land of "big red apples" will lose its reputation if she has to go to Australia to get apples, even if they are extra good ones, says the Northwest Pacific Farmer.

IT is now stated that a band of bakers in Vienna are using soapsuds to make the bread lighter than ever. It is hard to imagine a less appetizing concoction than soapsuds and dough, but it is claimed that so carefully is it kneaded that the suds impart "an infinite delicacy" to the loaves. It may be so, but we prefer our suds straight.

COL. SILLOWAGE, who saved President Lincoln from capture by the Southern army, is dying of starvation in Boston. The people at the center of learning have long boasted that more celebrated men die there than at any other place on earth. They work up the record by securing the great men and then refusing to feed them.

THERE is an Ulster landlord of New York City, who after thirty years' sojourn in the United States, is said to be still a loyal subject of Victoria. He passes part of his time on his estate in Ireland, and, to please his son, a native of the United States and a sturdy American, he flies side by side upon the lawn the union jack and the stars and stripes.

STATISTICS of immigration to the United States are of great interest. During all the years from 1821 to 1890, we received only 10,879 Dutchmen from the Netherlands, while the number of Germans who came to us during that period was over 4,000,000. Ireland contributed 3,481,074, England and Wales 2,430,380, and Italy 388,558. France is credited with 366,434, and Russia 324,892.

A MILWAKEE daily paper, says the Elevator and Grain Trade, deplores the exhaustion of our fertile soil and predicts that the United States will cease to export wheat inside of ten years. It overlooks the vast plains of virgin soil and the demand that immigration be restricted. We will never stop exporting wheat on account of lack of facilities to produce it, but our farmers may go into the production of more profitable crops.

THE introduction of predaceous animals, to hold certain pests in check, has not proved an unqualified success in New Zealand. A local paper of the colony states that the weasels, which were imported to keep down the rabbits and rats, are increasing so rapidly as to become a serious menace to poultry keepers. Their success in keeping down the rabbit pest is problematical, and so far are they from destroying rats, it appears that they fraternize with them, one farmer having found a rat living on merry terms in the same nest with four weazels.

WHAT a fortunate thing for those who dislike figures is it that there are many men of many minds. Somebody has been looking up statistics on cows, and has found that the proportion of milch cows in this country is one to every four humans. At that rate pure milk and real butter ought to be within the reach of everybody. The only trouble about it is that the cattle are in one section and the folks in another, yet with the increasing ease of transportation pure milk and butter become more near at hand and by and by will drive the poor quality out, because it will not pay to keep the adulterated products when the pure can be had so cheaply.

FOR forty-two years Switzerland and Italy have been dreaming of boring a tunnel through the Alps. At last the Swiss engineers have pronounced the scheme feasible, and the Simplon tunnel will be ground out of the solid rock for a longer distance than that of the famous tunnel of St. Gothard. The proposed tunnel will, it is estimated, cost $20,000,000 for its twelve and one-half miles. For the protection of the lives of the workmen in the vast underground thoroughfare, an elaborate and costly system of ventilation has been devised, one shaft of which will be sunk 3,252 feet in depth. If the number of victims who may perish during the construction of the tunnel shall not exceed the average the sanitary triumph will excel the engineering achievement.

THE cultivated area of Egypt is slowly increasing by means of various enterprises for leading the waters of the Nile into regions which have relapsed into deserts. A depression, which is claimed to be the bed of the ancient lake Mœris, has been surveyed, and the question of making it once more a storage reservoir is a financial one. Another scheme is the drainage of Aboukir Lake, and the reclamation of the once fertile lands it covers. The area embraces 32,000 acres, which has been acquired by an English company with the view of founding there an English agricultural colony.

IN peach production Georgia and Texas are far in the lead, with more than 5,000,000 bushels each, and eleven other States show a larger production than that of New Jersey or Delaware, which play so important a part in the commercial supply. New York State leads in the production of pears, closely followed by California; no other State having a production half so large. Nearly half the entire production of plums and prunes, or 1,202,573 of the total of 2,554,392 bushels, is in California, no other State raising as much as 200,000 bushels. The product of cherries is principally in the States of Indiana, California, Michigan, Ohio, Kansas and Virginia, in the order named; and California raises virtually all of the apricots, or 970,941 bushels of the total crop of 1,001,482 bushels.

A NEW use for fruit is foreshadowed in the discovery by an English electrician named Hill that a difference of potential exists between different parts of various fruits to such an extent that an electric current may be obtained by connecting such parts by wire. In his own experiments he has already succeeded in securing a current powerful enough to ring an electric bell from a battery of twelve melons, which had been connected in series by platinum wires, inserted at their tops and bottoms. While it seems scarcely possible that fruit will ever be utilized generally for the production of electricity, Mr. Hill's discovery may lead to the disclosure of certain hitherto unrecognized properties which may prove to be peculiarly valuable in medicine and dietetics.

THE complaints of the Jack Tars of the new cruiser Cincinnati as to their insufficient living quarters, seem to deserve the attention of the proper authorities in the Navy Department. It is pretty clear that the officers of the vessel are not to blame for these shortcomings. The fault lay in an apparent oversight of the designers, who in their desire to fill her with engines left little room for either officers or men. We believe that a proper inquiry would develop some way to help the sailor men without impairing the speed or usefulness of the ship. Then, such unfounded complaints as that against a particular officer would not arise; and the brilliant record which we trust she will make will not be at expense of health or life to any man, officer or sailor, who serves Uncle Sam. The human engine should have a chance as well as the triple expansion machine.

THE imports of potatoes for May, 1894, aggregated 790,000 bushels, valued at $326,000, against 692,000 bushels, valued at $347,000 for the corresponding month of last year. For the ten months ending May 31, 1894, imports amounted to 2,771,000 bushels, valued at $1,179,000, compared with 4,139,000 bushels, valued at $1,982,000 closing with the same month in 1893. Exports for May amounted to 17,800 bushels, valued at $12,775, compared with 17,420 bushels, valued at $18,360 for the same month last year. For the ten months ending May 31, the exports were 766,123 bushels, valued at $626,000, against 800,000 bushels, valued at $660,000 for the same period of 1893. The enormous excess of imports over exports suggests great possibilities to potato producers. Isn't it queer that this fertile United States cannot produce sufficient potatoes for home consumption? It will pay farmers in good potato sections to consider this question.

The man had a stub of whiskers on his chin which wagged when he talked, and kicked up their heels when he brought his jaws together.

"As I was sayin'," he remarked, "when I was out West I seen 'em hang a man to a telegraft pole for stealin' a hoss."

"Whose hoss?" asked a person sitting on a molasses barrel.

"Nobuddy knowed."

"How'd they know he stole it?"

"They ketched him ridin' it."

"Mebbe it was his'n."

"P'r'aps."

"Did the owner ever claim the hoss?"

"Not that I ever heerd."

"Then it must a been his'n."

"P'r'aps."

"What become of it?"

"They hel' it three months fer the owner to claim it, and then they sold it fer $87."

"What become of the money?"

"Well, they spent it fer a monument fer the man they hung. They might a made a mistake, and they wanted to do the fair thing by the deceased."—Detroit Free Press.

THE STOCK EXHIBIT AT THE STATE FAIR.

Commodious Buildings, Plenty of Room, Interesting Shows and Excellent Results.

No State Fair Ground in the country can better take care of and afford the visitor and exhibitor more comfort than can be found on the Indiana Fair Grounds. The buildings were constructed after the most approved plans and are easy of access. The live stock can be seen to best advantage. The several departments are so arranged as to be entirely separated, but are near enough to afford the visitor excellent opportunity to see all of the intesting features.

The exhibit at the fair to be held this year, September 17 to 22 inclusive, promises to be better than ever before. The stock raising interests of the country will be represented in all departments, and the visitor interested in this part of the fair will be more than entertained.

THE nineteenth reunion of the Twenty-sixth Indiana will be held at Sharpsville Sept. 18. Address of welcome will be made by Comrade Daniel Waugh. Response by Comrade John Maxwell.

ISAAC DOWNS, an old citizen and widely-known farmer, living near Pendleton, was stricken with paralysis, and has been lying unconscious ever since. The entire right side is afflicted. His recovery is not expected.

FIRE destroyed the barn of Henry Noneman, two miles east of Decatur, with all contents, consisting of two stallions, 300 bushels of wheat, several tons of hay, and farm implements. The fire was caused by a tramp, who perished in the flames. Loss, $3,300; insurance, $400.

J. H. ELCHELBERGER of Bunker Hill, was caught in a shaft and perhaps fatally hurt. His clothes were torn from his body and his arms and other bones were broken. All that saved him being pounded to a jelly was his catching hold of a projecting beam from where he was rescued.

PATENTS for Indianians have been granted to the following: Breson Doud, Chili, fence wire stretcher; Asa Kindley, New Holland, foot stove; Charles Morrison, Shelbyville, typewriter cabinet; Nathan Newson, Elizabethtown, pneumatic straw-stacker; Charles H. Pagtt, Oxford, windmill; David E. Vanvactor, Argos, weather strip.

CHRISTIAN MILLER was arrested at Fort Wayne, and is now in jail in default of bail for taking oleomargarine from original packages and selling it as country butter. He has been doing this since last spring and his sales amount to many hundred pounds.

A COTERIE of sharps are doing a land-office business in the northern counties. They offer the guileless jay a big pile of dry goods, worth $25, for $7. They won't take cash, but a note payable in sixty days. The jay jumps at the bargain, and later the bank notifies him that it holds a note against him for $70.

WHILE the funeral cortege of Mrs. Anna Chez was on its way to the cemetery at Shelbyville, two powerful horses attached to the mineral water wagon of F. Rehme became frightened on an adjoining street and ran along through the procession, scattering the cabs and buggies in every direction. A number of persons were badly frightened and somewhat injured.

JERRE TRUITT, a Jersey cattle breeder, residing east of Muncie, had a very exciting encounter with a young Jersey bull, and the man was so badly worsted that his life is in danger. He was attempting to separate the bull from the other cattle when attacked. The man attempted to escape, but was knocked down and twice gored in the breast and back. The vicious animal then walked away, leaving him for dead.

A HORSE kicked Harry Bush's knee cap off at Anderson.

WM. BRANN, prominent Rushville citizen, was stricken with paralysis. Will die.

A SEA serpent is a Christiana Lake novelty now. Said to be fifty foot long and as big as a barrel.

LAFAYETTE boasts of a five-legged colt, one of the legs growing from the top of the animal's head.

A HUGH tooth, supposed to have belonged to a mammoth, has been plowed up near Vincennes.

THOMAS RYAN'S crop of oats and wheat was burned near Union City by a fire started while threshing.

BURGLARS cracked Merchant Jager's safe at Cynthiana, and took $120. Also carried off $1,200 worth of goods.

A PAVING ordinance passed by the Noblesville Council will compel the L. E. & W. to lower their tracks twenty inches. Company is fighting it hard.

DR. JOHN A. SEATON, a prominent specialist of Fort Wayne, was found dead in bed, death resulting from heart disease, and was not anticipated. He was an old soldier, and a well-known Pythian Knight.

AT Martinsville, Ann Ball received the contents of a loaded gun in her hip and thigh at the hands of Garfield Cramer, aged 12 years. The boy did not know the gun was loaded. It is thought Miss Ball will recover.

A STARKE COUNTY girl plowed the ground and planted fifteen acres of corn in the spring. She is now tending it, beside doing the cooking, milking, washing, and ironing for four persons, and taking care of several head of stock.

WILLIAM PIERCE, near Metamora, in Franklin County, was hauling a load of stone, when his horses ran away and he fell under the wagon wheels. His backbone was broken and he died in two hours. He was 60 years old and leaves a family.

A FARMER residing near Hobart, Lake County, who could not afford to pay $1 for a newspaper, last week received a circular offering for $10 to mail a recipe to keep butter from getting strong. He sent the money and the return came—"eat it."

JOHN ELLIOTT, bank boss at Nellie Mine, near Brazil, operated by the Otter Creek Coal Company received probably fatal wounds by falling from a scaffold while at work at the mine. The heavy timber of the structure fell upon him, badly mashing and lacerating his body.

TOM DICKINSON, aged 12, saved a disastrous wreck on the Big Four at Anderson. The west-bound passenger express had side-tracked to let a fast freight pass. The switch nearest the freight was open and out of reach of the passenger crew when the freight was bounding along at murderous speed. The lad took the situation in, changed the switch barely in time to avert a casualty.

THE death of George Retz, a well-known Muncie citizen, which occurred recently, was a very peculiar and distressing one, and the disease of which he died is exceedingly rare. It is known as epulis. The glands of the throat become enlarged or thickened. This process continues slowly but surely in spite of all treatment until the throat is completely closed up and the patient dies of starvation.

JAMES RYAN, aged 64 years, a section hand on the Chicago division of the Big Four, received fatal injuries at Indianapolis, by being struck by an engine. He was walking on one track and stepped on another to avoid an approaching engine. Another engine on the second track struck him knocking him with great force to one side. He lingered for several hours and died. He leaves a wife and eight children.

A SAD accident occurred at Taylor's mills, six miles west of Columbus, by which Lonnie Coons, aged 12, lost his life. Young Coons took a position on the front end of a wagon loaded with cord wood, and a standard broke, throwing him off. A part of the load of wood fell on him and the rear wheel of the wagon passed over his neck, almost severing the head from the body. The coroner is looking into the case.

THE Adams County Bank, at Decatur, has been reorganized with a capital stock of $175,000. James K. Niblick is president and R. K. Allison cashier.

THE fifth annual Barrett reunion was held near Knightstown last week. Members of the family numbering about 400 were present from Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Michigan, and West Virginia. Interesting talks were made by President George W. Williams, Rev. Elisha Earles, Prof. Eli Butler, James H. Carr and others. New officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: Asa M. New, President; A. V. B. Sample, Secretary; Isaac Barrett, Treasurer. All kinds of amusements were on the program. The brass band from the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home furnished the music. The next meeting will be held at Greenland.

DURING the storm at Uniondale, two miles west of Decatur, the new Lutheran Church was struck by lightning and entirely demolished.

JOHN TURNER, a negro gambler, was put in jail at Muncie, a week ago, and placed in the dungeon because he refused to work out his fine on the stone pile. He vows that he will starve to death before he will disgrace himself with work. Turner badly frightened Jailer Shenz the other day. He asked that his water be served in a glass, and instead of drinking the water he began eating the glass tumbler. Sheriff Shenz at once reported the attempted suicide, not being familiar with the darkey, who is a glass eater.

ALBERT EVANS, aged 25, of Indianapolis, was killed by an Indianapolis & Vincennes freight train at Martinsville. He sold lemonade at the Moorsville old settlers' meeting, and was on his way to Quincy for like occupation at a picnic. He was put off the train at Brooklyn, and was not seen again by the trainmen until the accident occurred. He was seen to fall from the top of a box car. He lived only long enough to tell the conductor to send his body to a sister in Greencastle, but expired before giving his name.

It Depends.

As I rode quietly along the bank of Poor Fork, just where the Pine Mountains begin to let it over to where it joins the Cumberland River, I was stopped by a man sitting on the fence with his arm in a sling and a Winchester in his lap.

"How d'y," he said; "did you come by Brown's?"

"Do you mean the cross roads back here about five miles?" I asked, much surprised that a mountaineer should ask me a question first.

"Yes, that's the place."

"I stopped there to have a man nail a shoe on my horse."

"Hear um say anything about a shootin' match thar yistiddy?"

"I heard them say there had been one."

"I heard so, too, an' I war anxious to find out if it war so. Did you hear who the shooters wuz?"

"I don't remember the names, but they said only one of the men had been shot."

"Not killed, I reckon?"

"No; he was shot in the body, they thought, but he got away before they found out how much he was hurt, or just where."

"This is a dozen funny country for shootin' matches, ain't it?" he asked with a laugh.

"It looks that way," I replied cautiously. "Personally, however, I don't think I would enjoy them."

"Well, that depends, mister, on who gits shot."

"Perhaps it does, but you don't mean to say you enjoy that kind of thing, do you?"

"I reckon I didn't enjoy that one yistiddy."

"Why?" I asked in surprise, "you were not there, were you?"

"Yes; I wuz peekin' 'round a bit."

"And why didn't you enjoy it if you stayed to see it?"

He laughed and held out his bandaged arm.

"I wuz the feller that got shot," he said, and I could at least understand why he hadn't enjoyed that one.—Free Press.

Molly Stark.

Molly Stark not only did not die a widow because of the valorous battle of Bennington, but she lived on to become a noble mother in Israel, and at one time thirty out of forty of the children attending the district school in what is called the "Stark district" of New Hampshire were named Stark. They were all descendants of the four children Molly bore to the hero of Bennington. Now, however, the name is almost extinct in New Hampshire, and in Manchester, the centre of the Stark district, only two or three persons are left who bear the name of the brave general of the revolution. Molly Stark has a namesake now living in Alameda, Cal., a little girl of 13 years, who is in the sixth generation in lineal descent from the heroine of Bennington.

Train and Cannon Ball Compared.

If you will sit down and figure on the subject a little while you will express less wonder when you hear how the next "head-end collision" smashed things up. A train running seventy-five miles an hour moves at the rate of 110 feet per second and exerts an energy equal to 400 tons; in other words, the energy exerted is nearly twice as great as that shown by a 2,000-pound shot fired from a 100-ton Armstrong gun!—St Louis Republic.

TARIFF BILL PASSED.

HOUSE RECEDES FROM ALL AMENDMENTS.

Separate Measures for Free Sugar, Iron, Coal and Barbed Wire Passed—Crisp Offers the Resolution on Which the Decision Was Finally Reached.

Victory for the Senate.

[Washington correspondence.]

The long struggle over the tariff bill came to a close at 6 o'clock Monday evening, when the House by a vote of 182 to 105 decided to discharge the House conferrees from further consideration of the bill, recede from its opposition to the 634 amendments and agree to the same. It was a complete victory for the Senate. The House made an absolute surrender.

The result grew directly out of the sensational course of events in the Senate and in the capitol precipitated by Senator Hill Friday. Up to that time the House conferrees had stood firm against the Senate amendments, especially on the three disputed schedules of coal, iron ore and sugar, and the temper and voice of the House was for war—war to the end. But the indications that the Democrats of the Senate might be unable to longer hold a majority of the votes in line for even the Senate bill and that the bill was in desperate jeopardy forced the House Democrats to immediate action. The Democratic conferrees of the House at last admitted that they were beaten and that another vote could not be risked in the Senate; that it must be either the Senate bill or no bill.

The whole question was precipitated at the caucus held just before the House convened, at which, after a thorough review of the situation and speeches in favor of receding by Speaker Crisp, Chairman Wilson and others, it was decided to take the Senate bill and immediately afterward pass separate bills placing coal, iron ore, sugar and barbed wire on the free list, and by so doing place the House on record and at least partially overcome the humiliation involved in its defeat. The program arranged in the caucus was carried out to the letter in the House after an iron-clad special order.

The caucus met promptly. There was no wait for a quorum. When Chairman Holman banged the desk with his gavel there were 153 members present. Ten minutes later every Democratic member in the city was inside the chamber. There was feverish expectancy on every face. All felt that the eyes of the country were upon them. The Senators themselves—cold and far removed from public touch—betrayed their interest in the outcome of the caucus. Even Senator Gorman, calm and ever in perfect control of himself, cut his greetings shorter than usual. And Senator Brice twirled his glasses around his forefinger with great rapidity.

In administration circles there was keen anxiety. There, more keenly than anywhere else perhaps, the importance of the caucus action was appreciated. Nothing but the Senate bill seemed probable. In the hotels, clubs, streetcars and streets "What will the caucus do?" was the sole topic. Some men like John DeWitt Warner spoke vehemently for continuing the fight. But the majority favored surrender and the prompt settlement of the controversy already much too prolonged.

Proceedings in Secret.

The doors of the House were tightly closed and extra guards placed to prevent outsiders hearing anything of the proceedings within. No one was permitted in the gallery corridors, and it was only after great effort that the Sergeant-at-arms was induced to open the working-room of the press gallery. As Congressmen came from the caucus chamber they were button-holed for information, and like good sensible men answered all questions fully and promptly.

The caucus was exciting, but not tumultuous. Wilson, McMillin Crisp and Cockran spoke, the last in opposition to the surrender, and then the vote was taken on the all-important point of surrender or no surrender. The resolution offered by Speaker Crisp to accept the Senate bill went through with a whoop.

Immediately after the caucus adjourned the rules committee withdrew to the Speaker's room to prepare a rule providing for the immediate consideration of the tariff bill. The majority in caucus having decided to surrender, the best way to carry out its decision was to surrender.

DEATH IN A COLLISION.

Fatal Wreck on the Santa Fe—Two Killed and Eight Injured.

A disastrous head-end collision occurred on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, between Hurdland and Gibbs, Mo. Express train No. 5, west-bound, and express No. 4, east-bound, collided, and two trainmen were killed and several passengers injured. The engines and combination express and baggage cars were completely demolished. According to orders, the trains were to have met at Gibbs, and it is alleged No. 4 violated orders. The trains met on a slight curve and came together with terrific force. Both engineers applied air brakes and reversed their engines. As soon as the passengers and those of the train crew who were unhurt recovered from the shock they rescued the unfortunate victims. Engineer Humphreys of No. 4 was found at his post with one of his legs cut off and his head almost split in two. He died in a few minutes. Express Messenger Caplinger was instantly killed. E. E. Derrick, the express messenger and baggageman of No. 5, had a very narrow escape, and his injuries may yet prove fatal. None of the passengers of No. 4 were injured.

THE OUNCE OF PREVENTION.

Care Alone Makes Doctors Impervious to Disease.

"People wonder how doctors can prevent themselves from carrying disease," remarked a physician the other day. "It is simply care, and nothing else, that makes a physician seem impervious to disease. And the method is so simple that many people would never notice that a doctor was taking any precautions whatever. Now, for instance, I go to the door of a room which contains a patient having some contagious disease. I give a knock; perhaps a voice from within will say 'Come in,' but I make no move. I wait there until someone opens the door for me. By touching the door knob I might come in contact with disease germs. I go into the room; go over to the patient; perhaps feel the pulse or look at the tongue, always careful that none of my clothes come in contact with the bed clothing or anything else in the room. After this I prescribe my medicine and leave. I never sit down in a room where there is a contagious disease. After leaving the room I wash my hands in water containing bichloride, and I am as perfectly free from disease germs as when I entered the room. People do not seem to know that you must come in contact with the germs before you can carry them. Now all these precautions, with the exception of washing the hands, would never be noticed in a sick room, yet I am most careful to carry each one out. Frequently I do not have to wash my hands, as it is not necessary to touch the patient. In such cases I always have the door opened for me when I come in and go out. A careful doctor does not carry disease; but some are apt to overlook the importance of these little sanitary rules and their patients suffer.

JOHN BULL'S LATEST FAD.

The "Pig in the Poke" Puzzle Which Is Amusing the English.

John Bull's proverbial phlegm and all-the-year-around lassitude has been aroused to almost fever heat by a puzzle compared to which our discarded "Pig in the Poke" affair was tame indeed. The new puzzle consists of a glass-covered box, on the bottom of which is painted the red-nosed physiognomy of a sot. A hole in the bottom of the box forms the mouth of this grim-looking personage. The box contains also a tiny bottle, and the trick is to bring the mouth of this bottle into the facial cavity of the man, as shown by the second cut. It is by no means easy to do this. A pretty sure way to accomplish it is to throw the bottle against the glass top at the side of the box, and then incline the box quickly the other way. Every street gamin is busy working the puzzle, the noble profession of boot-blacking is a secondary consideration just now, and the street peddlers are selling the puzzle by the thousand, and reaping a rich harvest. It has created quite a stir, and is certainly proving a success.

THE TYPEWRITER IN BATTLE.

The Operator Bestrides a Bicycle and Types Messages.

The typewriter on the field of battle is a curious sight. It has not quite reached that point yet, but it was to be seen at the military tournament in the mimic action. Tommie Atkins mounted on a cycle, which was surmounted by a typewriter, rode into the arena and typed the messages taken from the signalers, while a trained war dog carried the dispatches to the rear. Whether all this would do in a real warfare remains, of course, to be seen.

The Clock-Winding Snake of Persia.

In Persia there is a kind of snake which is known to the natives as the "clock-winding snake." It derives its name from a peculiar buzzing noise which it makes that resembles the winding of a clock. These snakes are perfectly harmless, and frequently glide in and out of the houses, no attention being paid to them by the natives. During a visit there several years ago, says a traveler, I was attracted one morning by an unusual twittering of birds, and on looking up saw about twenty sparrows on the top of a wall, all jumping about in an excited manner. At first I was at a loss to understand the cause of such a commotion, but presently I heard the peculiar buzzing of a clock-winding snake, and in a minute perceived the reptile crawling along the wall, making directly for the birds, which appeared to be fascinated, and made no attempt to fly away. The snake glided in among the birds, and, choosing one to his liking, deliberately seized it in his mouth and swallowed it. I picked up a stick, and after killing the snake cut him open, and extracted the sparrow. After about ten minutes' exposure to the sun the bird got up, and in a few minutes more flew away, apparently unhurt.

When the Liver Reprimands Us

For our neglect of it by inflicting upon us sick headache, by dyeing the skin yellow, coating the tongue with fur, producing vertigo, pains in the right side and souring the breath, we are little less than lunatics if we disregard the chastisement. If we call Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to our aid, tranquility and health follow speedily, and with the departure of the symptoms mentioned departs also irregularity of the bowels, which invariably attends disorder of the liver. In malarial complaints the liver is always involved, and it is a fortunate circumstance that this fine anti-bilious medicine is also the finest specific in existence for every form of malarial disease. Nor is it less efficacious for dyspepsia, failure of appetite and strength, nervousness and a rheumatic tendency. It renews the ability to sleep, and greatly promotes convalescence after wasting diseases.

Mistakes of Breeders.

Lack of knowledge of the characteristics of the breeds has caused many failures. The country is full of farmers who have used the Jersey breed to improve their herds with the view of increasing the flow of milk, and this mistake has occurred with those who make a specialty of shipping milk to the cities. As the Jersey is not noted for large yields of milk many of those who made the experiments became dissatisfied and further refused to improve. Before using a breed the farmer should determine for what purpose he intends to use it, and should therefore aim to secure the breed most suitable for his object.

CONSUMPTION

WORK OF CONGRESS.

RESUME OF WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED.

Matters That Would Have Ordinarily Attracted Attention Overshadowed by the Tariff Discussion—Brief Reference to Enactments.

Tariff the Main Topic.

THE second session of the Fifty-third Congress accomplished much that would ordinarily have attracted greater attention had not the tariff been the absorbing question.

One of the most important acts of the session, passed by a strictly party vote, was the act repealing all laws creating federal supervisors of elections or defining their powers.

Appropriation bills, which are of first importance, were no exception in that upon them has been engrafted general legislation. The postoffice department bill, the first to pass, authorized the Postmaster General to allow postmasters of the first and second class to disburse at their discretion the amount allowed their offices and admitted to mails publications of benevolent and fraternal societies as second class. The pension bill regulated fees and methods of examining boards, the naval bill empowered the President to fill certain vacancies and prescribed the methods of appointment to naval schools by the Secretary of the Navy.

Several measures were enacted in accordance with recommendations of the Dockery commission so-called for improving and amplifying the methods of doing government business. Most important were those changing the method of auditing accounts in the Treasury department, improving the methods of accounting in the Postoffice department and changing the money order system, and that regulating the making of property returns by officers of the government.

Appropriations.

The diplomatic and consular bills changed several salaries. Nothing important was attached to the fortifications bill. The agricultural bill provided for distribution of seeds. The river and harbor general deficiency and sundry civil bills have not gone to the President. One deficiency bill contained legislation relating to suspension of pensioners without thirty days' notice against them. Five deficiency bills have been necessary during the session. The first was for $127,000 for treasury janitors and custodians and $200,000 for mileage for members. The second, signed the same day, included $745,000 for the treasury, $300,000 for customs service, $200,000 for pension service, $300,000 for the census, and $200,000 for public printing. The third carried a total of $770,000, the fourth $1,451,000, and the fifth bill $310,000 for various departments. Two resolutions appropriated $50,000 and $10,000 for enforcing the Chinese exclusion act, approved Dec. 7, 1893, and April 4, 1894. As most of the appropriation bills had not passed at the beginning of the fiscal year, July 1, it was necessary to extend by resolution all appropriations for the necessary operations of the Government, for pensions, and for the District of Columbia. They were twice extended for thirty days and once for fifteen. Two special appropriation bills for salaries of employes were necessary, and one for the expenses of investigation ordered by the Senate.

Miscellaneous Enactments.

Provisions for the admission of Utah and the making of the first Monday in September (Labor Day) a national holiday—largely at the instance of labor societies—became laws, and at the urgent request of scientific societies an act to define and establish the units of electrical measure was passed. Three bills were passed to give effect to the Paris seal arbitration and another to regulate seal fishing.

By resolution the Secretary of the Treasury was ordered to receive and place to the credit of the Cherokee nation $6,740,000 for the Cherokee outlet and the Secretary of the Interior to settle agents' accounts with Delaware Indians. Several special acts for printing reports were passed and a dozen laws of benefit to merchant marine were enacted.

The acts pertaining to the judiciary of the United States were: To provide for two additional associate justices of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma; for the division of the Eastern District of Michigan into two divisions; to provide that a term of the Circuit and District Courts of Vermont may be held at Montpelier; that criminal causes in the district of Minnesota shall be brought and prosecuted in the division of the district in which the offenses were committed; to fix a term of the District and Circuit Courts of the Southern District of Mississippi, to be held at Meridian; and four other acts.

Bills of All Kinds.

Laws to require original receipts for deposits of postmasters to be sent to the Treasury Department, to authorize the Fourth Assistant Postmaster to approve bonds, to regulate inspection of boiler plates and their stamping, to redress an injustice to certain graduates of Annapolis, to fill vacancies in the grade of assistant paymasters and to reclaim the wreck of the Kearsarge on Roncador reef were passed. A vast number of territorial and public lands bills were adopted, one of the latter extending to January, 1897, the time within which persons may purchase railroad grant lands forfeited to the government by the act of Sept. 29, 1890.

By joint resolution, officers and men of the army and navy were authorized to wear the government badge on occasions of ceremony; three members of the Board of Managers of the National Solders' Home were chosen, and the Secretary of War was authorized to restore to Michigan and Iowa recaptured flags.

Foremost in importance of the numerous bills which became laws was the act authorizing the New York and New Jersey Bridge Company to bridge the Hudson between New York City and New Jersey. After its first passage the bill was vetoed by President Cleveland, but an amended bill finally met his sanction. This structure must be built in ten years not less than $1,000,000 to be expended on it each year, and $2,500,000 the first year.

Acts were passed also to amend several bridge charters and to authorize the construction of numerous dams for various purposes. In addition there were odds and ends of legislation, such as authorizing the World's Fair to confer diplomas upon designers, artisans and inventors; the erection of the fire escape on the Government printing office and Maltby building, providing additional clerical force for the librarian of Congress, relieving employes injured in the Ford Theater accident of the law restricting sick leave, and numerous others.

THE TWO BILLS COMPARED.

Reductions Made on the Different Articles by the New Law.

The following is a statement of average ad valorem rates of duty of the McKinley law and the Senate bill, on a number of principal items, as compiled by the Treasury Department. Wherever duties are specified in either bill they were reduced to ad valorem rates for purposes of comparison:

Its Provisions In Brief.

The Senate bill puts the following rates of duty upon the great staples which have been the bones of contention:

All raw sugars, 40 per cent ad valorem; sugars above No. 16 (refined), ⅛ per cent additional; sugars produced in bounty-paying countries, 1-10 per cent additional to these rates. Hawaiian sugar is still free under the reciprocity treaty.

Iron ore, 40 cents per ton; pigs, $4 per ton; iron or steel rails, 7-20 of 1 per cent per pound; lead ore and dross, ¾ of 1 per cent per pound; silver lead-bearing ore, the same duty as on the lead contained therein.

Tobacco for wrappers, $1.50 per pound unstemmed; $2.25 stemmed; cigars and cigarettes, $4 per pound and 25 per cent ad valorem.

Coal, bituminous and large slack, 15 cents per ton.

Precious stones, cut and unset, 25 per cent ad valorem; set, 30 per cent; uncut, 10 per cent; glaziers and miners' diamonds free.

Logs and sawed lumber and timber (save tropical woods) and wood are free.

Tin plate, 1 1-5 cents per pound after Oct. 1.

Marble, rough, 50 cents; dressed, 85 cents per foot (cubic).

White and red lead, 1½ cents per pound.

Under the internal revenue sections of the bill playing cards are taxed 2 cents a package. An income tax of 2 per cent on incomes above $4,000 is provided for; also a tax on corporations of 2 per cent. Whisky is taxed at $1.10 per gallon and the bonded period fixed at eight years.

ONCE MORE THE BANDEAU.

Curling Irons Must Be Laid Away by Fashionable Women.

Late illustrated exchanges from Paris contain pictures of women wearing their hair in bandeaux, a style common enough thirty years ago. The fashion is already well under way in the French capital, and will, of course, soon be the correct thing in this country. Any old daguerreotype will show just what the bandeau is. When last in fashion it was accompanied by the chignon, but the revival of to-day omits that abomination. The bandeau is brought down from the middle of the brow, so that it touches the outer corner of the eyebrow, hides most of the forehead, a portion of the cheek and all but the lower tip of the ear. It must be trained to cling to the face with a closeness that no rude wind or other force can disturb, for a bandeau in a ruffled condition is, of all hopelessly incongruous affairs, the worst.

THE BANDEAU.

THE biggest coward can give the bravest advice.

It Depends.

As I rode quietly along the bank of Poor Fork, just where the Pine Mountains begin to let it over to where it joins the Cumberland River, I was stopped by a man sitting on the fence with his arm in a sling and a Winchester in his lap.

"How d'y," he said; "did you come by Brown's?"

"Do you mean the cross roads back here about five miles?" I asked, much surprised that a mountaineer should ask me a question first.

"Yes, that's the place."

"I stopped there to have a man nail a shoe on my horse."

"Hear um say anything about a shootin' match thar yistiddy?"

"I heard them say there had been one."

"I heard so, too, an' I war anxious to find out if it war so. Did you hear who the shooters wuz?"

"I don't remember the names, but they said only one of the men had been shot."

"Not killed, I reckon?"

"No; he was shot in the body, they thought, but he got away before they found out how much he was hurt, or just where."

"This is a dogon funny country for shootin' matches, ain't it?" he asked with a laugh.

"It looks that way," I replied cautiously. "Personally, however, I don't think I would enjoy them."

"Well, that depends, mister, on who gits shot."

"Perhaps it does, but you don't mean to say you enjoy that kind of thing, do you?"

"I reckon I didn't enjoy that one yistiddy."

"Why?" I asked in surprise, "you were not there, were you?"

"Yes: I wuz peekin' 'round a bit."

"And why didn't you enjoy it if you stayed to see it?"

He laughed and held out his bandaged arm.

"I wuz the feller that got shot," he said, and I could at least understand why he hadn't enjoyed that one.—Free Press.

A MOTHER'S STORY.

HAPPINESS COMES AFTER YEARS OF SUFFERING.

The Terrible Experience of a Well-known Official's Wife—A Story That Appeals to Every Mother in the Land.

From the Chattanooga, Tenn., Press.

No county official in East Tennessee is better known and more highly esteemed than Mr. J. C. Wilson, Circuit County Clerk of Rhea County, at Dayton, the home of Mr. Wilson. He enjoys the confidence and respect of all classes, and in the business community his word is as good as his bond. Just now Mr. Wilson is receiving heartiest congratulations from his numerous friends because of the restoration to robust health of his estimable wife, who has for years been a helpless invalid. Mrs. Wilson's high standing in society, and her many lovable traits of character have won her a host of friends, and her wonderful recovery has attracted widespread attention.

As the Press was the medium of bringing to the invalid lady's attention the remedy that has effected her remarkable cure, a reporter was sent to Dayton to interview Mrs. Wilson, in order that the general public might have the benefit of the sufferer's experience and be made aware of the treatment that wrought such a marvelous change in her condition. The reporter was welcomed at the Wilson home, and the enthusiastic lady with becoming reluctance gave the history of her affliction and the manner in which she was relieved:

"Yes," said Mrs. Wilson, "I was for eight years an invalid with one of the most distressing afflictions woman can suffer. For eight years I moped around, dragging myself with difficulty and pain out of bed. My little ones went untrained and were greatly neglected, while I looked listlessly and helplessly at the cheerless prospect before me and them. I suffered the most intense pains in the small of my back, and these seemed even greater in the region of the stomach, extending down to the groins. I suffered agony sleeping or awake. Despair is no word for the feeling caused by that dreadful sensation of weakness and helplessness I constantly experienced.

"I was treated for my trouble by several local physicians, but they were able to give me only temporary relief by the use of sedatives and narcotics. I had almost given up all hope of ever securing permanent relief when I saw an account in the Press of a cure which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had effected. I decided to try them, as I knew the lady who had been cured and had great confidence in her statement. I began to take the pills in October, 1893, and in two months I was doing light housework and attending to the children, without any bad effects or weakness such as I had formerly experienced. Hitherto, I had been unable to retain any food, but now my appetite grew stronger, and with it came back that old healthy and hearty tone of the stomach. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me, and I assure you the cure has brought a great change in our home. I can now rejoice in my husband's success, for I feel that I have something to live for. Who has a better right to feel this than a mother? One thing more. I have recommended these pills to others, and many of the women of Dayton have taken them with good results, and it is my greatest pleasure to recommend to every suffering woman a remedy that has done so much for me."

An analysis proves that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

IF THERE are any housekeepers not using ROYAL BAKING POWDER, its great qualities warrant them in making a trial of it.

The ROYAL BAKING POWDER takes the place of soda and cream of tartar, is more convenient, more economical, and makes the biscuit, cake, pudding and dumpling lighter, sweeter, more delicious and wholesome.

Those who take pride in making the finest food say that it is quite indispensable therefor.

Hotel Rules Sometimes Inoperative.

A case recently occurred in this city which illustrates the extent to which the laws applying to lost articles will go. A man in a downtown hotel found a $10 bill in one of the public rooms and the proprietor, seeing him find it, demanded it on the ground that he was the proper custodian until the owner was discovered. The finder of the bill denied this, and the landlord referred him to the rules of the establishment. The guest replied that the landlord might make what rules he pleased to govern his own employes, but could make none to control his guests. The matter was referred in a friendly way to a lawyer who chanced to be acquainted with both, and he decided in favor of the guest, laying down the general principle that the finder of property had rights superior to anyone else except the owner.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Fire Service in Russia.

In a Russian village there is not even such an organization as we possess in this country in the small volunteer companies. In their stead is a log stable with thatched roof containing an old-fashioned pump and three casks mounted on wheels. These are kept filled with water and each is drawn by a single horse.

The horses are the property of the commune, and they are kept tethered outside the cabin, ready for duty at a moment's notice. A place is also set apart in the hut for the muzhik who serves as watchman, an office that is held, turn by turn, by the inhabitants of the township. The location selected for the cabin is as near as possible to the residence of the pristay, or the district captain of the police, and upon an alarm of fire he drives to the scene in his telega at the head of the procession of carts and peasants.

An Actor's Mistake.

A celebrated French actor came over to England. He had studied our language carefully. His friends were a little anxious about his powers of acquiring our difficult pronunciation, but he said he felt confident that, well made up and by gaslight, his accent would pass muster. But, alas! he was overhopeful. The critical evening arrived, and he wanted at the most pathetic moment of the play to exclaim, in broken-voiced despair: "I shall die! I shall die! There is peace in the grave." But his histrionic powers carried him away, and he forgot his carefully prepared pronunciation, and in heart-broken tones he sobbed forth: "I shall die! I shall die! There is peas in the gravy!" And then he could not understand why all the theater shouted with laughter.—Lady's Pictorial.

One Hundred Thousand Clippings.

Speaking of newspaper files, they are now so bulky that a condensation seems preferable, and this has led to a new and very peculiar method now used in a prominent New York library. A scrap book of clippings on all important subjects is under way and an efficient newspaper reader is employed. His task is renewed day by day, and in this manner his scrap book is constantly increasing. Strictly speaking, however, it is not a book, but a series of pages of manilla paper, on which the clippings are mounted, the subjects being kept together in boxes for reference. Thus far the collection contains nearly 100,000 clippings, and it is already a favorite place for research, as one can find many facts which are not contained in books.—Troy Times.

An Italian Idea.

Two Italian horticulturists propose to prevent the loss of ammonia from stable litter and other organic manures by means of sulphuric acid, employed in the form of a composition, which they call arotol. This is formed by pouring sulphuric acid on dry sawdust, chopped straw or similar vegetable substance. Great heat is evolved, and when that subsides the charred vegetable matter or charcoal is dried and reduced to powder. This powder is freely sprinkled on the manure and arrests fermentation. Strict precautions are necessary in its preparation to guard against the corrosive action of the acid.—American Agriculturist.

Summer Mulching.

If your fruit trees suffer in summer for want of moisture and you are so situated that the land can not be irrigated, try mulching with coarse hay, straw, or any similar material. Apply the mulch early in the season, and spread it on to a depth of three or four inches, and when beaten down by the rain it will prevent the rapid evaporation of moisture from the soil underneath and also keep down the weeds and save the expense of cultivating your orchard. This is nature's method of keeping the soil moist about the roots of trees in the forests, and there are many cultivators of fruits who are practicing it.

A Crushing Answer.

Apropos of the fact that those who "came over in the Mayflower" mostly bore such surnames as Winthrop, Haythrop, Lothrop, and Lathrop, the Cornhill Magazine tells of a New York parvenu who loudly proclaimed to a Plymouth Winthrop: "My people came over in the Mayflower." "Indeed!" was the crushing answer, "I didn't know the Mayflower took steerage passengers."

Why Her Grief Became Mollified.

The present Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, as is already known, was a widow. Her little daughter of nine or ten years was the one person above all others to whom she dreaded to break the news of the engagement with Mr. Page. It at length became necessary to do this, however, and she set about her task with all possible diplomacy. As she had feared, the little girl, on learning the fact that her mother was to be married again, wept profusely. Finally the mother, thinking to assuage the child's grief, said: "I'm going to marry Mr. Page." The sobs of the little girl suddenly ceased. "You ought to have told me that at first," she said in a mollified tone. "Why, I've been in love with him myself for over a year. Philadelphia Record.

Emotions and the Complexion.

Constitutionally jealous or envious folk never have fresh complexions, it is said. The unwholesome feelings within affect their personal appearance. Vanity is not as mischievous in its effects as envy, but it gives an intensely vacuous expression to the face which at times amounts to positive stillness. We do not, perhaps, realize what an effect our characteristics have upon our faces, else we would, I fancy, be more careful to discourage these undesirable ones.

In a Tree.

A maple tree 100 years old, which stands on the left bank of the River Oder, in Germany, has been curiously converted into a circular two-storied house. A flight of steps leads up to the first story, where the branches have been woven together and form a firm leafy floor. Above this floor is another, formed in the same way; and the ends of the branches have been woven into solid walls and cut so as to admit the light through eight windows.

Money in Winter Wheat—100 Bu.

That's the way. Farmers who sowed Salzer's new World's Fair wheat report it yielded all the way from 40 to 70 bush. per acre, and a good many are so enthusiastic over this wheat, that they claim 100 bush. can be grown per acre. The monster winter rye yields 70 bush. per acre, which pays tremendous profits. The John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., send their fall catalogue and samples of wheat and rye for 4c postage. C gives you a feeling of horror and dread. There is no longer necessity for its use in many diseases formerly regarded as incurable without cutting.

A SURGEON'S KNIFE

The Triumph of Conservative Surgery is well illustrated by the fact that RUPTURE or Breach, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses can be thrown away! They never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death.

TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the peril of cutting operations.

PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.

STONE in the Bladder, no matter is how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting.

STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For pamphlet, references and all particulars, send 10 cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

SAILED THE SEAS 38 YEARS.

One of His Experiences.

For thirty-eight years Capt. Loud followed the sea, most of that time as master of a vessel, and upon retiring from the water was appointed by the Secretary of the United States Treasury to superintend the seal fisheries in Alaska, which position he held five years. He relates one experience as follows:

"For several years I had been troubled with general nervousness and pain in the region of my heart. My greatest affliction was sleeplessness; it was almost impossible at any time to obtain rest and sleep. Having seen Dr. Miles' remedies advertised I began using Nervine. After taking a small quantity the benefit received was so great that I was positively alarmed, thinking the remedy contained opiates which would finally be injurious to me; but on being assured by the druggist that it was perfectly harmless, I continued it together with the Heart Cure. Today I can conscientiously say that Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and New Heart Cure did more for me than anything I had ever taken. I had been treated by eminent physicians in New York and San Francisco without benefit. I owe my present good health to the judicious use of these most valuable remedies, and heartily recommend them to all afflicted as I was."—Capt. A. P. Loud, Hampden, Me.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and New Cure are sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or by Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5, express prepaid. They are free from all opiates and dangerous drugs.

Sparkles From the Dispatch.

"We are pleased to note one retrenchment of the present administration," says the Dispatch, "the size of postage stamps has been reduced." But the size of the stamps is the same as it has been, and as they were established by a republican administration years ago. For a short time during the world's fair, the large ones were issued, merely in honor of that event. Now, that special issue is out, and the same old size comes into use. Perhaps the Dispatch never saw one of these small ones before.

The Dispatch is frightened because the number 13 enters so largely into the recent legislation in congress. These superstitions about the number 13, and the rabbit's foot, etc., may count with republicans, but democrats merely laugh at such childish whims.

"The saddest body of politicians ever assembled in Indianapolis was the democratic state convention," says the Dispatch. But the article was evidently written before the convention of Wednesday came off, as at the date the Dispatch goes to press half the convention's work was yet to be done. We mention this little matter to show how gladly a republican will wander from the paths of truth, when he thinks he can make a hit at the democratic party. The facts are, we were at that convention, and having seen all the state conventions, but one, in twenty years, feel free to say that this one, instead of being a "sad" one, was the most enthusiastic we ever attended. Never before were the speakers and the resolutions so constantly cheered as was done at that meeting. The enthusiasm was unbounded. The delegates were not "divided on indorsing Gov. Matthews' position in calling out the militia" As we said, the article was written before the convention met. What shall we say of such political journalism?

A Milion Friends.

A friend in need is a friend indeed, and not less than one million people have found just such a friend in Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds.—If you never used this great cough medicine, one trial will convince you that it has wonderful curative powers in all diseases of throat, chest and lungs. Obituary.

Died, July 21, 1894, at Fairhope, Stark county, Ohio, Leah, wife of Peter Lesh, aged 67 years, 9 months and 6 days. Sister Lesh, nee Youtz, was born in Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, October 25, 1826, and in early life moved to Stark county, Ohio, where she lived until death. She was married to her new sorrowing husband 48 years ago. This union was blessed with two sons, who are now left to mourn the departure of a mother they tenderly loved. She was converted under the labors of Rev. John Burkitt, and joined the Evangelist church 35 years ago, of which she remained a member until death. She frequently told the writer of her readiness to depart and be at rest. She leaves to mourn, a husband, two sons, ten grandchildren, one great-grand child, a father now 93 years old, two brothers and three sisters, with many relatives and friends who remember her as a kind neighbor and dear friend. She was followed to her grave by a large concourse of people. The funeral services were held in the Fairhope church. The sermon was preached by the writer, assisted by Revs. G. W. Brown, J. A. Grimm and L. M. Boyer. May God comfort the surviving ones and grant them to meet in the home-land above.

H. B. SUMMERS, Pastor.

Obituary.

Elsie May, daughter of John C. and Nora L. Cool, was born July 16th, 1893, and died August 10th, 1894, aged 1 year, 25 days. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. I. M. Thomas, of the Church of God, at the home of her parents in Jackson township August 12th, at 10 a. m. She was a bright, winsome child, and had attached herself to the hearts of her many friends, but it pleased an All-wise God to take her home in infancy. She leaves a father, mother, little brother and many friends to mourn her early departure.

A Noted Minstrel.

M. T. Skiff, formerly business manager for W. J. Scanlan, the Irish Comedian, suffered with Rheumatism for years with relief until he bought a bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy. Two bottles made a well man of him. There are a thousand remedies for Rheumatism, but none have received the unsolicited testimonials from prominent people as shown by Drummond's Lightning Remedy. When a cure is wanted send $5 to the Drummond Medicine, Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles of the remedy—enough for one month's treatment. Agents wanted. 34

Best for Flux.

Mr. Thomas Bate, editor of the Graphic, Texarkana, Arkansas, has found what he believes to be the best remedy in existence for the flux. His experience is well worth remembering. He says: "Last summer I had a very severe attack of flux. I tried almost every known remedy, none giving relief. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was recommended to me. I purchased a bottle and received almost immediate relief. I continued to use the medicine and was entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending this remedy to any person suffering with such a disease, as in my opinion it is the best medicine in existence." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

Arctic Geology.

According to Sir Henry Howorth, the Arctic lands, during the Pleistocene period, instead of being overwhelmed by a glacial climate, were under comparatively mild conditions. Since Pleistotimes the climate has been growing more and more severe. The author bases this conclusion on a study of the Arctic flora as displayed in Greenland, Spitzbergen, and the uncovered moraine of the great glacier in Alaska, and also upon certain faunal facts. He cites evidence to show that the present flora of Greenland is undoubtedly a relic of an old flora which has survived in favorable localities, and not an importation since glacial times. The same is true of the Spitzbergen flora. The discovery of a colony of sea cows on Behring's island seems to indicate a recently milder climate in that region. The peculiar types of northern migratory birds suggests that at no very remote period they lived the year round in their present breeding places in northern Siberia, Greenland, and Spitzbergen, and that it is the present, ever-increasing cold that leads them to migrate in search of warmth and food. In short, the only glacial climate we are warranted in supposing to exist in the Arctic lands is that which is now current, and it is the product of changes in the level of the earth's crust since Pleistocene times.

Cured the Children.

The success of Mrs. Annie M. Beam, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, in the treatment of Diarrhœa in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many mothers. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnstown, Pa., after the great flood, on account of my husband being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the diarrhœa very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarhœa Remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I knew of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be excelled and cheerfully recommend it." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

The Return of a Projectile.

The question is often asked, "Will an object thrown into the air—either from the hand, a volcano, or even when shot from a rifle or cannon—return to the earth with the same initial velocity with which it left?" The answer is, A projectile thrown vertically upward into the air will return with a velocity less than the initial. The word less is emphasized because this view of the matter is contrary to the one generally accepted. In the air the accelerating force which acts during the descent is not equal to the retarding force during ascent. The retarding force is the same for the weight of the projectile and the atmospheric resistance—both acting in the same direction. In the descent the accelerating force is the difference of these two since they act in opposite directions. In a vacuum it would be different. In that case the weight of the projectile being the only force acting, this force would generate in each foot of the ball exactly the same amount of velocity that it had lost in its passage upward. Thus the final would find it with a speed equal to its initial velocity.

Fayette is the seat of a progressive and prosperous Normal University. Its success is due to the high aim and far reaching wisdom of its founders. It is a school with a purpose. It has something of importance to say to every prospective student in the country. Normal work is a speciality but there are Preparatory, Commercial, Musical, Elocutionary, Shorthand, Typewriting, and Fine Art Departments, in addition to regular college courses. It has an able faculty, ample equipments, superior location and large attendance. Expenses are less than half what they are in many institutions. Write for catalogue to Pres of University,

The Correct Stars and Stripes.

The law provides no specific dimensions for the flag of the United States. Sections 1791 and 1792 of the revised statues prescribe simply that there shall be thirteen horizontal stripes alternately red and white, and that the union of the flag shall be white stars in a blue field, the number of the stars corresponding with the number of the states, and a new one being added on the Fourth of July next succeeding the admission of a new state. At present there are forty-four states, and the arrangement of the stars which has obtained official sanction is in six horizontal rows, the top and bottom rows containing eight stars each and the intervening rows seven.—[New York Press.

WATERLOO.

Born, Aug. 20, to L. S. Goodwin and wife, a son.

Mrs. Isaac Speer is visiting friends in Williams county, Ohio.

Mrs. Sarah Edge has been sick a few days, but is now recovering.

Lee Goodwin is still quite ill, although thought to be out of danger.

Mrs. Shuman has been ill for about five days, but is much better.

Mrs. Ab. Kelley has gone to Toledo for a visit of two or three weeks.

Mrs. A. R. Stevens and niece, Cora Roby, are camping at Crooked Lake.

George Ettinger, of Elkhart, spent Sunday with his parents at this place.

Frank Fisk entertained Miss Allie Young, of Pleasant Lake, over Sunday.

Jules Denison and family spent Sunday at Angola in the home of Wm Braun.

Robert Speer has bought the Carle property near his home in the west part of town.

H. E. Braun was taken very suddenly ill on Friday night and is not yet out of danger.

Isaac Speer has one of the fac-simile Columbus clocks at his store. It is quite a curiosity.

F. P. Blair made a flying trip home on Sunday, He came down on No. 6 and returned on No. 7.

Scott Campbell has moved his family from the Waterman cottage into the Reformed parsonage.

Mrs. James McHench and son Willie, of Fairmont, Minn., are the guests of R. G. Daniels and family.

Master Harold Blair is down again from Laporte to stay with the family of Gen. Blair till his school begins.

Mr. and Mrs. Lollar have returned to their home at Montrose, Colo Mrs. L. is better known here as Miss Flora Speer.

Mrs H. E Braun returned from Ft. Wayne Monday. She has been there some time caring for her aged mother, who is very sick.

Mrs. Winslow, who was taken sick Aug. 4, and has since been under a physician's care, is gaining strength and was out for a short walk Monday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Ross and Miss Rebecca Bell returned to their home in VanWert, O., Saturday. Mrs. Georgie Pepple going as far as Ft. Wayne with them.

Miss Anna Deventer has returned from Elkhart where she has spent her summer vacation, and is now ready to begin her year's work in the public schools.

The members of the L M. C. continue to hold their weekly readings with unabated interest. Milton's Paradise Lost occupies them at present. Mrs. Olive E Long was hostess Tuesday evening of this week.

Friday evening a fine load of straw was driven in the alley back of Mr. Yeagy's stable to unload, but for some reason it unloaded itself, at least a large part of it, on the other side of the fence into a neighbor's garden, causing Mr. Y. and son some extra labor.

Mrs. Winslow has received a letter from her sister, Mrs. Finch, at Seward, Neb., in which she speaks of the suffering there on account of loss of crops. Farmers are moving to town to obtain means of living, and many have killed their cattle as they have no feed for them.

Edward Braun had another attack such as he has been subject to for some time past Saturday afternoon. His wife who had returned to Ft. Wayne, was telegraphed for and returned home the same night. Mr Braun sold his building and business the latter part of last week to a Mr. Barr, who will commence conducting it the latter part of this week. Those who have been customers here for many years, always finding Mr. Braun reliable, accommodating and neat and furnishing the best at fair prices, regret he feels it best for himself to abandon business. His genial face and presence here will be missed. We understand George Braun has a position with the new proprietor for some months to come.

The Kessler Train Robbery.

As noted in last week's paper, there was a second attempt Aug. 6, to rob the now noted "trains No. 12" that goes east on the main line of the Lake Shore about midnight. This attempt was also at the same old spot. Kessler Siding west of Kendallville. The Standard gives this account:

In less than a year's time from the great express robbery near here a bold attempt was made to wreck and rob the east bound express train No. 12 on the Lake Shore at Kessler, again Monday night. The train was running about fifty miles an hour and when the famous spot of the great hold up last September was reached, the engineer, Chas. Buntin, saw the switch turned just three car lengths, ahead of his engine. He promtly reversed his engine, but at the rate of speed being traveled his train passed through the switch and was soon gliding along the side track, after having thrown from the track a pile of ties and stone placed there by the robbers to wreck the train. Having passed the obstruction and still going at a lively rate he kept his train under good motion until the east switch was reached, which was promptly opened and the train pushed on its way to this city, arriving here nearly on time, with a well broken up crew, but congratulating themselves upon the successful outcome. The front end of the engine was somewhat demoralized but not damaged so that the trip could be finished.

When the little telegraph building which cut such a figure in the last hold up was reached, one of the robbers emerged and fired four shots at the engineer, who promptly after the first shot was fired, dropped down by the side of the boiler and escaped the fate of Engineer Knapp last September.

When the engine was reversed, and the speed of the train slackened, United States Mail Clerk Crawford, of Avilla, thinking this city had been reached, came out upon the steps of the mail car to await the stopping of the train. He saw a party running along the side of the train with a gun and a sack resembling a hunter's bag thrown over his shoulder, but who did not get close enough to do any harm, and left the scene going toward the south.

The same express messengers, Wert and his helper Hammond, who were on duty when the hold up was accomplished last year, were on the express car again that night, and when the engine was reversed and the obstruction struck upon the track, they immediately put out their lights and prepared themselves with revolvers to do battle, for they expected a big time, their former trouble being fresh in their memory, and knowing immediate action was necessary to save the valuables intrusted to their care.

Trackmaster Werley being informed of the trouble called out extra gang foreman Smith, who with several of his men, armed with guns, hastily started by a special engine for the scene. Marshal Berhalter was also notified and was soon upon the scene. It is claimed they have a fairly good clew to work upon as it is believed the robbers went south from the scene of action.

It was either the experience of last September that prompted the railroad employes to be more fearless, and prepare themselves for cases of this kind, or else the gang of thieves were less smooth and inexperienced that saved a repetition of another big haul. It surely terminated very satisfactorily to the railroad and express companies, and Engineer Chas. Buntin is to be congratulated upon the part he played in the trouble.

Bliss Must Answer.

The great reformer can now show cause why he is better than the "corrupt old parties". Last week's Waterloo Press has an eye-opener, in the form of a letter from Beck & Miller, at Hamilton, in which they ask what became of the collection taken up in the crowd that attended the populist meeting there. It had caused a considerable talk especially as Beck & Miller, or some one, had, after the collection was taken up, set a ticket seller at work and taken ten cents admission from those who went onto the Island on Sunday. It looked bad enough to hold a political rally on Sunday, let alone charging a gate fee. Hence there was a hot time about it. The letter of Beck & Miller may help to clear up the skies a little, but it needs the finishing touch of editor Bliss, the populist candidate to represent this county in the legislature, to bring out the colors in their proper light. So while waiting for this, we will publish their letter. It is headed.

AN EXPLANATION.

HAMILTON, IND, Aug. 16, 1894.

Editor Press: There seems to be some misunderstanding regarding the receipts of the populist meeting on Pleasant Island and we understand that charges have been made reflecting upon us as having misappropriated the funds. The facts are as follows: By an agreement with Mr. Bliss, we were to pay for all the printing matter, expense of posting bills, postage, advertising in the Auburn Times, and one-half the amount paid speakers Bumpus and Hawthorne, for which we hold the receipt in full from Mr. Bliss. To offset this by mutual agreement we were to have the entire gate receipts on Sunday. It seems that during the week some thought it inadvisable to charge an admission fee on Sunday, so we made them a proposition that if they would pay us our expenses as above stated we would throw off the five days work in posting bills and give them the free use of the island. Upon this suggestion, we are told, they took up a collection on Saturday, amounting to over $20, and that Mr. Bliss stated the collection was to defray expenses and that there would be no fee charged for admission on Sunday. Now what became of the collection we know not, as it was never given to us nor any tender of any kind in payment for our expenses and there was no alternative than for us to follow the first agreement. This explains why the gate fee was charged and relieves us from any censure. If any one is to blame it is the person or persons who have the collection and never turned any of it over to us. A great many drove in on Sunday absolutely refusing to pay any gate fee, and at three o'clock the guard was removed and no charge made after that hour, so that probably not many over one-third of those on the island paid an admission.

ASSEMBLE AT AUBURN.

A New Arrangement for the Century Run of Sept. 7.

Ft. Wayne Journal.

After conferring with a number of Fort Wayne wheelmen, R. W. Cobb, captain of the century run to be made September 7 from Auburn to Huntington and return, gives out word that Auburn is to be the rendezvous of all persons who participate in the run. Wheelmen are requested to report the day or evening of September 6, at Auburn, where provision has been made for their accommodation and a 3:30 o'clock breakfast. This arrangement will obviate the necessity of an extra force of officials for the Fort Wayne division, and prevent any misunderstandings or any delay in starting on schedule time and finishing at Auburn, where the officials will be on duty. The schedule time table will be issued in a day or two.

All wheelmen of Allen, Huntington, Whitley, Noble, DeKalb, Lagrange and Steuben counties, in Indiana, and Defiance, Williams, Paulding and Van Wert counties, in Ohio, are invited to join in the run.

Coming Sept. 6.

The visit to this place of the genial Dr. Fruth is like a ray of sunshine to scores of afflicted. His happy presence always cheers up his callers and many are drawn to him on this account. His wonderful success in this section in treating difficult cases has won him a rapidly increasing patronage—and why shouldn't it? Don't people find it better and cheaper to employ an expert than a novice? Should not a doctor who treats thousands of different cases monthly and who is in continuous touch with modern scientific developments, be better fitted to give quick relief to the afflicted than one whose surroundings compel him to devote most of his time to common everyday cases? At first thought the rapid growth and present extent of Dr. Fruth's patronage here seems phenomenal, but when viewed in the light of understanding, it appears only fitting that his remarkable skill should be so liberally recognized. There are hundreds of people in this city and vicinity in whom the germs of some chronic disease are becoming imbedded. Wouldn't it be well for these people to submit their cases to this trained specialist, so that the disease can be nipped in its early stages and the patient be saved years of suffering? 35

THE WHEEL OF THE FUTURE.

THE WHEEL THAT IS AND IS TO BE.

The League Wheel "Chainless."

People who ride the Chainless and know it to be far superior to the Chain and Sprocket Wheel, LAUGH AT THE IDEA of a person buying anything short of a League Chainless. One can no longer expect to be strictly up to and ahead of date who does not ride this machine. This voices the sentiment of thousands of old chain wheel riders, who will have nothing but the best thing going.

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

One of the Most Successful of all the Many Gatherings of Brave Women and Fair Men.

BEFORE beginning this article, perhaps we might admit that our second heading seems a little confused, and may be we are wrong. But the presence in town of so many handsome girls and married ladies is apt to turn a young fellow's head just a little. However, to proceed. Quite early Monday morning our streets began to take on ornamental airs, on account of numerous figures like the larger one in this picture as they came sauntering up the street by twos and threes. Then came a good sprinkling of the other sex and all well dressed and looking the picture of intelligence. The work began in due time and proceeded without a jar, of course. By night, there were enrolled about 180 teachers. The trustees, the most of them, came in that day, also.

THE MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT.

CAN'T sing, is what we say of the gaudy insect just at the left of this, but there are those who can sing and those who can play, and do both to perfection. Co. Supt. Merica had looked the field over and made a selection containing no errors. Monday evening they came on for duty at the church before the later entertainment and banquet at the hall. Miss Maude Sembower, of Garrett, daughter of Frank Sembower, had the first exercise and played in a masterly way, showing great skill and excellent training. Her selection was a difficult one, but in her hands it became easy and delightful. Then came Dr. Buchtel with a violin solo, Mrs. Garwood playing an accompaniment. It was fine—so fine that the audience called them back and would not take "no" for an answer. So they played "Annie Laurie" and variations and were roundly cheered again. Mrs. F. M. Merica, of Garrett, one of their sweetest of singers, had the next exercise, a song, "The Crown of Love," which won for her hearty applause. Geo. Kennedy, of Waterloo, played a guitar solo, and so much was it enjoyed that he was called back and gave another. It was one of the finest things of the evening. Little Miss Flora Thompson, daughter of Dr. Thompson, of Garrett, played a sweet selection on the piano. She has a fine talent for music, and few girls so young can equal her. Miss Estella Merica played a violin selection which was very difficult, but so thorough has been her work in this, that it was easily and gracefully done, to the delight of the great audience, who vainly tried to get "just one more piece." But her selection had been put on by request and was too long and difficult to make a second call easily responded to, and with a graceful bow she was let off. Mrs. F. J. Yesbera sang with her usual sweetness and power, "The Coming of the King," accompanied on the piano by Miss Merica. The entertainment closed with the ever popular "Home, Sweet Home" and its variations, including the wonderful "waves in the storm," played by Mrs. D. A. Garwood. It carried the audience away by its fascinating power and her brilliant execution. The audience, which included many from the surrounding towns, then adjourned to the hall.

THE BANQUET.

SOME 360 sat down to the banquet in Armory Hall, after leaving the church, and passed an hour or two in this very satisfactory way, and listening to some very excellent speeches. So prominent a thing was the banquet, that we have concluded to let the COURIER artist illustrate an important feature, which is shown in the picture at the head of this article. Perhaps we ought to explain that the lady carrying the large piece of cake is Mrs. Vest Zimmerman and not Mr. Richards, Mr. Gerke or Dr. Casebeer, though all were present and helped on the good work mightily. Over 200 were seated at the four long tables the first turn. Then came a second, and partly a third set. The first speech was by Mr. Harrison, superintendent of the Auburn schools, who gave the welcome address, and was, moreover, the representative of DeKalb's graded schools. Mr. Harrison never speaks for the purpose of killing time. He always says something. It was well received. Miss Ida Husselman, for the "district teachers," made a nice talk and did great credit to the important branch of our school work that she represented. John F. Shuman, of the Waterloo school board, spoke for his department of the work, making an eloquent and effective address. He is a good speaker. Mrs. W. B. Campbell, formerly Miss Sarah Tarney, as a graduate of our State Normal school, in which she was also a teacher, spoke in behalf of the higher educational interests of the state. Our people always like to hear her speak. Like Mrs. Ehlers, she has a command of choice words of the simpler and purer expressions of the English language, and a speech so clothed is always powerful. We cannot forbear a passing compliment to several of our state institutions for the pains they take in giving their graduates this mastery over the strongest, simplest and best language in the world, the pure "English undefiled."

INSTITUTE NOTES.

C. P. Houser is probably entitled to the credit of having the best record for institute attendance. He has been present at each one more or less every year, beginning in 1865. A. P. Foltz can probably show the longest continuous, or nearly continuous record as a teacher. He began in 1860 and is still at the work. He stopped only long enough to serve as a soldier in the great rebellion and began again as soon as he returned. He also served two years as county surveyor. Of the other teachers, Miss Mary Eberly is one of the earliest in the work.

Prof. Mace, of the University of Syracuse, N. Y., has been doing effective work, his lessons alternating with those of Mrs. Campbell. Tuesday afternoon President Johns, of Depauw, arrived and assisted some that afternoon. He delivered the annual institute sermon the same evening to a large audience. It was an able and eloquent sermon. Mr. Bain's lecture was on Wednesday evening after the COURIER had gone to press. But he is always good and interesting, so we feel free to say that so far, the institute work, both day and evening, has been up to the usual high standard. There is a large attendance and the teachers generally seem to be alive to work. To-night is the lecture by Rev. Robert McIntyre, of Denver, who, is said to be one of the most eloquent lecturers on the platform. We look for a large audience to enjoy the brilliant things he has to say.

Mr. McIntyre reached here yesterday. Also President Swain of our State University.

Twelve Times a Winner.

The Eastern Indiana Agricultural association at Kendallville will give their 12th annual fair in that city Sept. 24 to 28, 1894. Square dealing with the public has made for the Kendallville fair a reputation second to no district or county fair in the state. The managers are making an extra effort to make the coming fair equal to or better than former exhibitions and the indications are all in the direction of another successful meeting. The premiums and purses are all liberal and have always been paid in full. In addition to the regular program this year, a wheelman's day has been added with premiums aggregating $1,200 in value. The program throughout is first-class. Half fare and special trains to parties attending by rail. Write the secretary for premium lists and particulars.

THE NEWS RECORD.

SUMMARY OF A WEEK'S HAPPENINGS.

The Tariff Bill Becomes a Law Without the President's Signature — Cranberry Swamps in Wisconsin Burned Out — A Young Man Loses His Life in a Wheat Bin.

Cranberry Swamps in Wisconsin Ruined.

Cranberry Center (Wis.) special: The losses of cranberry growers from fires have been enormous. In and about Mather, where there have been many acres of bearing marsh and from the railway station thousands of barrels have been shipped yearly, there is almost nothing left. The peat has burned down to the sand in places to the depth of two feet. The peat formed great beds of hot coals which were ever ready to brighten up when fanned by the breezes. Whirlwinds took burning coals into the air and carried them over the heads of the fire fighters and deposited them twenty, thirty, and forty rods away. Many of the tracts of land will never be used for growing cranberries again, and as they are almost worthless for any other purpose, will for a time revert to the county as useless land.

Cholera Record in Russia.

St Petersburg special: The following cholera reports have been received: From August 21 to August 24 there were 123 new cases and forty-one deaths in the city of St. Petersburg. From August 11 to August 18 there were 208 new cases and seventy-three deaths in the government of St. Petersburg, 236 cases and eighty-eight deaths in Warsaw, 154 deaths in Seidlec, and 747 cases and 3.0 deaths in Petrikov. From August 5 to August 10 946 new cases and 469 deaths occurred in Kielec, and 1,285 cases and 612 deaths at Radom. In Grodno from July 29 to August 18 there were 1,520 new cases and 629 deaths.

It Is Law.

At 12 o'clock Monday night the McKinley law, which has been in operation since October 30, 1890, practically four years, died on the statue books, and the new Democratic tariff bill, passed by the Fifty-Third Congress, became a law without the signature of President Cleveland. The constitutional period of ten days allowed the President to consider the bill expired with the midnight hour, and according to the terms of the constitution, the President having failed to return the bill to Congress with or without his approval, it became a law.

A Fiendish Act.

The coroner's jury investigating the disaster in the Franklin coal mine, near Seattle, Wash., in which thirty-seven men were killed, has rendered a verdict finding that the fire was started by parties unknown, willfully, knowingly, and maliciously, to do great injury to lives of employes and the property of the Oregon Improvement Company. It is believed the person who fired the mine also perished. No one has an opinion as to who did the deed.

Settlement Wiped Out.

Ishpeming (Mich.) special: Forest fires invaded the settlement known as Finland, on the South Shore Railroad, and completely wiped it out of existence. Many of the residents lost everything. Thousands of cords of poles, ties and wood, as well as standing timber, have been destroyed. Trout Creek and other settlements are threatened. Several hundred million feet of standing pine are badly damaged.

Cleveland Writes.

President Cleveland has written a letter to Representative Catchings of Miss., in which he sets forth his views of the new tariff law, and gives his reasons for not approving the bill. He says the bill is not in line with honest tariff reform. He doesn't claim to be better than his party.

Loses His Life in a Wheat Bin.

At Flora, Ind., Walter Long, a young man in a spirit of bravado, jumped into a great bin of wheat, which was being loaded from an elevator into a car on the track below. The suction was so great that he was drawn in and suffocated before any effort could be made to save him.

Train Wrecked.

The Baltimore and Ohio express, west bound, was wrecked at Silver Run, near Parkersburg, W. Va., by a rock on the track. Fireman James Shaughnessy of Salem, was killed. Engineer Patrick Flannery of Grafton, was injured. The passengers were not hurt.

Horses and Lumber Burned.

Tramps started a fire in the dressed lumber shed of H. Paepcke & Co., Chicago, and twenty-five fine draft horses valued at $225 each and $10,000 worth of lumber were destroyed.

Death on the Rail.

William Adams of Fort Wayne, jumped from a rapidly moving Wabash passenger train and received injuries from which he soon afterward died.

Will Remain Neutral.

In her speech proroguing the British Parliament the Queen said strict neutrality would be observed in the war between China and Japan.

Thousands of Fish Dying.

At Tiffin, Ohio, the continual drought has reduced the water in the Sandusky River to such a low stage that the fish are dying by the thousands and are rotting upon the rocks of the river bed right in the heart of the city, a menace to the health of the public.

Dangerous for Lake Craft.

Forest fires in Wisconsin and Michigan have caused a dense volume of smoke on the lake, rendering navigation dangerous.

Chinese Cruelty.

Shanghai special: The activity of the Chinese in hunting down Japanese spies increases every day, and if the Chinese are to be believed the coast must be overrun with agents of the Japanese Government. Seven Japanese, in Chinese costume, were arrested and it is given out that they will be expelled from China, but nobody would be surprised if they were treated much more severely. The Japanese elsewhere in China are subjected to the most harsh treatment. In the Island of Formosa the Chinese authorities have been decapitating Japanese subjects, supposed to be spies, in large numbers. According to advices received here from Formosa, fifty Japanese have had their heads cut of recently, after having been arrested as spies.

A MINE HORROR.

Thirty-Seven Miners Burned to Death.

Seattle (Wash.) special: A terrible catastrophe occurred in the Oregon Improvement Company's coal mine at Franklin, thirty-four miles from this city. Already thirty-seven dead bodies have been recovered from the mine, and it is known that many others are imprisoned in the fiery furnace. The number is as yet only a matter of conjecture, and it is probable that none will escape.

The first news of the tragedy was received in this city by Manager Smith, of the company, in the shape of a telegram from the mine superintendent at Franklin. This message stated that the mine was afire and many miners, both white and black, were imprisoned. Later a second telegram was received, reading substantially as follows:

"Thirty-seven bodies have been taken out and it is supposed that there are more to be recovered."

Manager Smith, upon the receipt of the first telegram, sent out a special train bearing Superintendent Corey and a crew to assist in subduing the flames, if possible, and ordering them to take care of the company's property and rescue the imprisoned men. The officials in the city are reticent and refuse to give out any information whatever beyond the fact that the mine caught fire and that thirty-seven dead bodies have already been removed. The fire, it is said, caught in breast No. 62 in the sixth level, but of the cause nothing has been learned. The last report was to the effect that the fire was still raging and heroic efforts were being made to recover others known to be in the mine.

A late telegram from the scene states that the thirty-seven men who were killed probably died from being suffocated by the smoke as the bodies do not show burns of a fatal nature.

Another dispatch from the railroad operator at Franklin says wives, children, and comrades of the dead men are crowding around the mouth of the mine, frantic with grief. Their lamentations are heartrending, moving the strongest to tears.

CAPTURED.

A Pair of Desperate Train Robbers.

Chicago special: Two desperadoes, Will Lake and H. F. Gorman, who shot and killed Patrick Owens of the Chicago, Milkwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, at Deerfield, the other night, and a few hours later shot and probably mortally wounded Officer McGrath, at Mayfair, were surrounded and captured by police in the Elk Grove woods, near the Desplaines River.

The capture was only effected after a six hours' chase and the exchange of fully 100 shots. The desperadoes fought off the blue coats and excited civilian participators in the man hunt until their amunition was exausted, and then, unable longer to reply to the fire that was poured in upon their retreat, the men sought safety in flight. Bullets from the officers' revolvers brought both men to the earth, and when the police apprehended their game the men were weak from loss of blood.

Officers Mullaney, Finnegan, Hays, Maisley, and Lawson, who had been among the first posse to start out after the fleeing desperadoes, were the officers who forced the surrender of the bandits.

As soon as the wounded men were taken in charge by the police, a new danger arose. The infuriated citizens, who had learned of the wanton murder of one officer and the fatal shooting of another by the desperadoes, demanded that the wounded men be immediately deprived of their lives. The officers were forced to draw their revolvers to save the very men into whom a few moments before they had poured lead.

The crowd made desperate attempts to get the bandtis from the police, but each time they were repulsed without bloodshed.

CANNIBALISM.

The Indians of Bolivia Drink Human Blood.

Panama special: The Star and Herald prints the following details of the recent double murder by Indians in Bolivia:

The Indians of Carangas killed the Magistrate of Court of Oyuro, Senor Arce, and his son, who was with him. The unfortunate men, seeing the menacing attitude of the Indians, took refuge in a priest's house, which was surrounded by the Indians, who threatened to set fire to it. Having held a council at Martyrdom they resolved that the life of the son should be taken first, and in the presence of the father they clipped out his tongue, extracted his eyes, and otherwise tortured him until he was dead. As the blood flowed from the body they caught it in the horn cups and drank it with avidity. They then put the father to death in a like manner. A carnival of cannibalism was then held over the bodies until the flesh was eaten to the bones. This act of such inhuman barbarity occurring within the region of civilization is almost incredible. This story also seems to explain the reason for a report that it was ex-President Arce, who is at present in Chili, who has been assassinated, but it has been made known already that it was a namesake of his that was the victim of these crimes, and the unfortunate magistrate was the man.

Stole $100,000.

Pittsburg special: "Harry A. Gardner, the defaulting cashing of the Second National Bank of Altoona, is en route for China or Japan and he has with him the sum of $100,000 in bank notes of large and small denominations." So spoke Samuel B. Griffith, Assistant United States District Attorney, when asked regarding the truth of a rumor that Gardner has been in this city recently.

"Gardner was in Portland, Ore., a few days ago,'" said Mr. Griffith, "and he has likely left the country by this time. A week ago Gardner learned that Bank Examiner Miller was going to investigate his accounts. Gardner at once began preparations for a flight and left, taking every dollar of the bank's money he could carry. The capital stock of the bank is $100,000, and the defalcation is in excess of that sum."

Big Lockout.

Fall River (Mass.) special: Friday night marked the commencement of the greatest lockout of operators ever known in this city, and that implies the greatest concerted lockout of textile operatives in one center in America. With the possible exceptions of the Kerr Iron works, Connecticut and Seaconnet mills, every corporation in town will remain closed until it is shown that a vote of three-fourths of the spindles represented in a certain agreement shall decide that the gates shall be reopened and an opportunity offered for workers to return to their places. An exact statement of the number of idle operatives is given, showing that excepting the above mentioned mills, thirty-four mills, employing 21,859 hands, with a weekly payroll of $135,475, are idle.

From the Artic Regions.

Aberdeen special: The yacht Saxon has arrived at Peterhead, returning from a scientific expedition to the Artic regions. She reports that she landed Professor Battie, the ornithollgist, and one companion on Kolquve Island, three miles from the Russian coast, on June 2. The Saxon, however, was obliged to abandon Battie and his companion on account of the heavy seas and the ice, which threatened the destruction of the yacht. It is hoped that the two explorers will be rescued by the next Russian gunboat which visits the island.

Chinese Loan Fails.

A telegram from Shanghai says that the attempt of the Chinese Government to float a loan of 1,000,000 taels, to be guaranteed by Chinese merchants, has proved a failure. The Japanese Government has declared rice to be not included among articles contraband of war. The American Consul at Shanghai has ordered the Japanese in that city to discard the Chinese costumes and advises a majority of them to return to their native country. Mr. Otori, the Japanese Minister at Seoul, is reported to have been killed.

Will Contest with Directum.

Portland (Me.) special: The owner of Alix, the little mare, who at Washington Park, Chicago, trotted a mile in 2:05¼, telegraphed President Barnham of Rigby track, that if a race could be arranged between Alix and Directum for a purse of $10,000 he would bring Alix here. Barnham agreed to a $10,000 purse, and Directum's owner also agreed to the terms. The race will come off about September 20.

Murder and Suicide.

At Waddington, near Siloam Springs, Mo., Dr. Ott, a practicing physician, shot Miss Lizzie Craig in the back and then killed himself. Ott was a married man with grown children. He had long been in love with the girl, and she had given such encouragement to his suit that scandalous gossip started, and one of the results was an estrangement between Dr. Ott and his wife, who left him and went to Texas.

Four People Drowned.

Four persons were drowned one-half miles north of Portsmouth, Ohio. Adam A. Parrett, ex-County Commissioner, and his wife and three children, riding in a spring wagon, attempted to ford the Scioto River, it being very low, but the team struck a sink hole and all the occupants of the wagon were drowned except a 12-year-old boy, who managed to get to the shore.

Town Destroyed.

Santa Rosa (Cal.) special: A report reached here that the town of Guernville had been destroyed by fire. Guernville is a town in the heart of a forest, and has a population of 500. All the buildings in Guernville burned except a livery stable and the public schoolhouse. Dr. J. A. Burns and Oscar McKeen were killed by falling walls.

Aeronaut's Neck Broken.

Alonzo Kendall, the Kalamazoo aeronaut, made an ascension at Schoolcraft, Mich., but during the descent, and when about 100 feet from the earth, he lost his hold from the tapeze bar and dropped head first to the ground, striking a fence. His neck was broken, and when picked up there was not a whole bone in his body.

A Mad Wealer.

Enos Rauch, a Populist and Commonweal leader, who figured prominently in connection with the Coxey movement, is locked up at Columbus, Ohio, a raving maniac, caused, it is supposed, by the fact that he has been forbidden to see a Miss Smith, with whom he is in love.

The Barrel Blew Up.

Ten-year-old Carl Molter held a burning match in the open bunghole of a whisky barrel, in his father's saloon at Tiffin, Ohio, and an explosion resulted which wrecked the building, and was succeeded by a disastrous blaze. The boy wondrously escaped unhurt.

Officially Confirmed.

Shanghai special: The report that the Rev. Mr. James Wylie, a Presbyterian missionary, has died from injuries received at the hands of Chinese soldiers at Liao-Yang, north of New-Chwang, China, while they were marching to Corea, is officially confirmed.

Lynching in Oregon.

A mob of masked men surrounded the County Jail at Lake View, Oregon, and forced the jailer to surrender a prisoner named W. S. Thompson. The mob then hanged Thompson on the Court House steps.

All Went Down.

Benjamin Kershaw and Robert Thomas, middle-aged men, and Johnnie Kershaw, aged 10, were drowned in the Charles River at Waltham, Mass., by the overturning of a canoe.

EGAN ON THE STAND.

ACTIVE FIGHTER OF THE RAILWAY UNION TESTIFIES.

Thought Debs' Letter to the Managers a Piece of Cheek—Says the Charge that the Companies Hired Men to Burn Cars Is Vile Rot.

Railroad Men Testify.

John M. Egan, who was the manager of the fight against the American Railway Union, testified before the Strike Commission that it was his duty to receive reports of condition of things on the different lines and the nature and amount of violence committed; to hire new men, take charge of the new men from the East and to assign them to duty and to report to the authorities points where protection was needed. Mr. Egan said that he made a requisition on the United States Marshal for men and sent a great many men to him with the request that they be sworn in as deputies. Referring to the visit of Mayor Hopkins and Ald. McGillen to his office with a proposition from the officials of the American Railway Union to declare the strike off if the roads would take the men back, Mr. Egan said he told the Mayor that the association would not receive any such document and that he was sorry to see him acting as a messenger boy for the American Railway Union. He thought the document was a piece of cheek. Asked if he regarded it as an insulting document, answered that it spoke for itself.

JOHN M. EGAN.

"You do not answer my question, Mr. Egan," persisted Commissioner Worthington. "I am asking you was the document of an offensive or insulting character?"

"Well, so far as the roads were concerned the strike was settled. The document dictated the terms of an adjustment of a matter which so far as we were concerned was already settled."

"Had the troops been withdrawn?" asked the Commissioner. "No."

"Were you running the trains at that time?" "Only irregularly."

"Then why did you refuse to confer with the officers of the American Railway Union?"

"Well, I had no authority to confer with them; and as I looked at it such authority could only be given by the association."

"You had full authority to hire men and to employ force in quelling the strike, but no authority to seek any peaceable methods of settling it, is that it?"

"Well, we regarded the A. R. U. as whipped and did not propose to compromise at that late date."

"Did the Managers' Association ever use any means other than force to settle a great strike which was causing both themselves and the country hundreds of thousands of dollars every day?"

Mr. Egan admitted that they had not.

"Was it not a fact that the Managers' Association was determined to crush out the American Railway Union, and was it not for that they steadily refused to receive any communication from them?"

Mr. Egan finally admitted that was about the true state of the case.

"One of the witnesses here stated that there was evidence that you used money to hire men to burn cars. What do you say to that?" asked Kernan.

Egan replied: "Well, considering the source, it is the vilest rot. I never heard of such a thing till I saw it in the papers, and consider it on a parity with many other statements made by Debs and Howard."

Asked to state his views on the methods to be employed to prevent strikes, Mr. Egan said that he favored government license of all railway employes except common laborers; that each class be provided with distinctive uniforms and be required to pass an examination as to their competency in their lines; that all should be able to read and write the English language, and that none but citizens of the United States should be licensed. That a schedule of wages should be made and that both parties should be under severe penalties for violation of existing agreements.

Manager St. John brought with him a pile of documents, among them a set of books showing the schedule of wages paid the employes of each railway belonging to the Managers' Association. He began his testimony with a report made to him by an agent of the Rock Island Railroad on June 30 of a meeting held at Blue Island, at which Vice President Howard made an inflammatory speech, saying that he "would like to hang Pullman," and "to show St. John that the American Railway Union had strength and stamina to tie up the Rock Island so tight that a fly couldn't get over it," and that he "hoped if any sneaking detectives were found among us there would be moral courage enough to use the round end of a coupling pin." This report was made by one of the "sneaking detectives" which it was alleged Howard wanted a coupling pin used on.

GEO. W. HOWARD.

Superintendent Dunlap, of the Rock Island, testified briefly regarding the alleged blacklist, which he declared had no existence.

WINDS ARE WROTH.

They Spring Up from the Sea and Wipe Out Russian Towns.

It was a wind of death. No other name can describe the cyclone that swept across the Sea of Azov Saturday. It will be impossible for days yet, says a St. Petersburg dispatch, to compute the damage done, but it is almost certain that at least 1,000 persons have perished, some by drowning, others by being crushed under falling houses and trees. The excitement is great among the American colony in this city, for it is feared that at least two parties of American tourists were on the sea of Azov at the time the wind did its deadly work.

The wind was first felt at Nogaisk. Nogaisk is peopled mostly by fisherman, who were out on the water. When the hurricane had swept out to the north a terrible scene was presented. The village was razed, overturned—as if an immense plow had been pushed through it. Lying everywhere were woman and children, dead or in the last agonies. The shallow waters of the Sea of Azov were lashed to such a height that it was plain that every fishing-boat must have been sunk. The cyclone swept on to the northeast after wrecking Nogaisk. It path seems to have been unusually wide, for at Marinopol it devastated the country to a point eleven miles inland, and had its outer edge far upon the sea. Marinopol was practically blotted out of existence. Not three houses in a hundred are left standing.

HAD BEEN DEPUTY MARSHALS.

Desperadoes Who Held Up a Train Had Been in Uncle Sam's Employ.

Henry F. Gorman and William Lake are now prisoners in the West Chicago Avenue Police Station, charged with holding up a train on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Road at Deerfield, murdering Special Officer Patrick H. Owens, attempting to take the life of Wm. McGrath, a watchman employed by the Northwestern Road, and robbing Conductor N. A. Sargent. The men were only captured after a desperate fight, in which 100 police officers and they were engaged. Both prisoners were badly wounded before they surrendered. Over 200 shots were fired during the engagement, and the man hunt, for such it was, lasted over eight hours. During the desperate fight a distance of over thirty-two miles was covered.

At first it was thought that the bandits were novices in crime, but after the exhaustive examinations made by Inspector Schaack and Capt. Koch it is the general opinion that the murder and robbery of Detective Patrick H. Owens, the shooting of Detective McGrath and the robbery of the conductor and brakeman of the Milwaukee freight train, for which they are now held, are but the last of a series of depredations marked by the same daring recklessness.

Of the two men, Gorman, Griswald, or Gordon—and the police only conjecture how many other aliases he may have—is the deperado. He is the one who did most of the shooting and all of the talking, and it has become apparent to the police that Lake was only an understudy, a pupil, sworn to do the bidding of the master-hand in crime. It is now believed that the two men committed many of the recent depredations on the Northwestern and Milwaukee Roads. Their appointment as deputy marshals to protect the property of the railroad companies against the ravages of the strikers during the recent disturbances attendant on the boycott doubtless gave them a double opportunity to pursue their path of crime. The hold-up of a freight train on the Lake Shore road several weeks ago and the robbery of the conductor and brakeman in a manner exactly similar to the attack on the Milwaukee trainmen early Saturday morning can, the police think, be traced to Bandits Gorman and Lake.

BLACK DEATH IN CHINA.

Frightful Ravages of the Plague Among the Celestials.

The fatalities accompanying the plague in the Canton district of China have been terrible, thus far over 120,000 people having perished. In the streets of Hong Kong and other cities the dead were so numerous that they lay on the streets for hours, awaiting the curious funeral rites so peculiar to the Chinese. In Canton, says Consul Seymour, everything is in wild confusion. Business is almost suspended.

THE DEAD LYING IN THE STREETS.

During all of this plague heathen processions have constantly marched through the streets of Canton throughout the night pounding gongs, exploding firecrackers, exposing idols, and other similar doings, supported by contributions from the shops and stores, to propitiate the evil spirits and to dispere the adverse elements. Among its latest victims are Capt. Vesey and two privates of the Shropshire regiment, who caught the dread disease while engaged in sanitary duties in the Chinese quarter. All three were strong men, but despite the efforts of the doctors they were carried off in a few hours. No treatment that has yet been discovered has had the slightest effect upon the disease. The death of these men conclusively proves that the plague is not a curse which falls upon Chinese alone, as was at first thought, but is a contagious disorder, if it is not highly infectious.

Numerous orders have been published in the Government gazette enjoining sanitary measures, such as whitewashing and cleaning the drains of their dwellings, but, as might be expected, scarcely any notice was taken by the natives, who herd together in Hong Kong under conditions that would be tolerated in no civilized country in Europe or America. The richer Chinese have left the colony and come to the coast ports, the arrivals at Shanghai alone being often 300 a day. Fully a quarter of the native population has thus fled from the plague-stricken colony.

BUNKO THE FARMERS.

How Chicago Produce Swindlers Daringly Victimize Country Shippers.

Country produce dealers think they have a grievance against South Water street, Chicago. They cannot be satisfied until various sums of money out of which they have been swindled are returned to them or the swindlers are put behind prison bars, or both. South Water street teems with swindlers whose operations are crooked as a forked stick, but who shrewdly manage to work and thrive safe from prosecution though evading the criminal laws. The Chicago police appear to be powerless, and the postoffice authorities, within whose jurisdiction these transactions come, confess that they are unable to make out a case that would "stick."

These swindlers are men who have for stock in trade a little cheap furniture and office stationery. They rent a small room somewhere in the produce commission district and send out inflated advertising circulars and business cards to the country dealers. They are ready to promise anything to get trade quickly, as time is precious to them. The countryman ships his goods and waits for a check. After waiting a long time, as he is invariably compelled to do, he may write to the firm for a settlement. He receives no answer, and then he makes a sight draft, which in due time comes back marked "payment refused," or "parties not found." Then he writes to a friend or an officer of the law, and he is informed there is no such firm in the directory or at the address given. The produce is then sold on the open market and the alleged commission man pockets the proceeds. In a month or two he has completed many of these transactions and realized considerable money in cash, as his expenses are light. In the mean time complaints, which he completely ignores, are pouring in and the swindler knows that he must soon change his base or he may get into trouble. He hires another room, changes the firm name, has a new stock of office stationery printed, has the old sign repainted and moves.

Members of the Chicago Produce Exchange at a recent meeting decided to take prompt action in getting rid of these swindlers. A committee has been appointed to thoroughly investigate the matter, and steps will probably be taken to secure State legislation to meet the exigencies of such cases.

ST. ANNE'S SHRINE.

SOME MIRACULOUS CURES EFFECTED RECENTLY.

And Are the Sights Occasionally Witnessed and Many Disappointed Ones Are Encountered—The Bones of the Good Saint—History of the Relics.

Crutches Thrown Away.

The pilgrimages to the shrine of St. Anne, twenty-two miles below Quebec, are in full blast and thousands are to be found there every day. A few days ago a large delegation from Morrisburg, Ont., visited the place. Among those were Kate Sweeney, who is 22 years old, and who for a long time has suffered severely from spinal disease and paralysis of the legs. She was carried from the train into the church, and no sooner had she communicated and venerated the relic of St. Anne than she felt her natural strength return to her, and she rose and left the church without assistance. Last week Mrs. Diogene Guirmont, of Cap St. Ignace, who had been bedridden since February and incapable of walking, was assisted to the foot of the statue of St. Anne. There she remained for a time praying and weeping, after which, raising herself painfully upon her crutches, she approached the altar railing and reverently kissed the relic which the priest presented to her. As she did so she felt the crutches slipping away from her, and, making no effort to retain them, she stood erect for a moment. Then, with her husband and a friend at her side, she walked firmly to the foot of the statue and there kneeling returned thanks with happy tears. This done she walked to the boat. She is now said to be thoroughly cured and able to attend to her household affairs. This miracle is vouched for by the priest of Cap St. Ignace, who accompanied the pilgrims. The woman's crutches, left behind, have gone to swell the large collection of discarded canes, crutches and other aids which form two large pyramids, twenty feet in height, just within the entrance to the church.

Mrs. Joseph Paquette, of Indian Lorette, recently had a smothering sensation in the region of her heart, which physicians could not cure. She declared that she had made a vow to St. Anne to the effect that if relief were given to her she would publish the fact to the greater glory of the saint. She said she had obtained the longed-for cure in the sanctuary of the saint, and would proclaim it to the world. An 11-year-old girl from Coaticooke had been dumb for eight years, when, after invoking the aid of St. Anne and communicating, the string of her tongue was loosed, and she cried out, "Good St. Anne, I thank you."

Some Pitiful Scenes.

Nine-tenths of those who pray for relief fail to secure it. This is the most distressing feature at St. Anne. Very pitiful, indeed, are some of the scenes thus witnessed. Sickly children, whose cries fill the air, are seen on every side. Consumptives in the last stages of the disease stagger or are led by friends to the altar railing. Frequently, at the foot of St. Anne's statue, are seen supplicating sufferers who, unsatisfied with their own oral petitions and unable to remain at the altar until their prayers have been favorably answered, supplement them with written pleas inclosed in sealed envelopes and bearing the simple address, "A la bonne St. Anne." Numbers of these letters are always to be seen upon the pedestal of the statue. The church contains two or three relics of St. Anne's body, the largest being a portion of the wrist bone three inches in length. Another is a portion of a lower thumb joint. Thousands of people venerate these relics, after confessing, communicating and hearing the reading of the gospel of St. Anne. The main portion of the bones of the saint are claimed by the cathedral at Apt, France, where the relics were obtained. The body is said to have been taken from Jerusalem by St. James and others to Marseilles, the ship containing them being miraculously preserved from wreck. From Marseilles the body was taken to Apt, where for centuries its location was unknown, until its remarkable rediscovery.

Delay has been encountered in the transmission of intelligence from our naval representatives in Corea, but that is due to Japanese interference with the means of communication. Urgent messages are allowed to pass, but details of engagements are suppressed by the Mikado's Government other than such facts as are intended exclusively for official information.

DEBS ON THE STAND.

The A. R. U. Chief Tells of the Pullman Strike and What Led to It.

President Debs, of the American Railway Union, in his testimony before the strike commission, now in session in Chicago, told of having received word that a strike in Pullman was imminent and of his coming to Chicago to investigate. "I found," he said, "that the men were working for the Pullman Company at wages upon which they could not live. I found that salaries had been cut time and again, until the skilled mechanics were working their lives away for wages not sufficient for a common laborer; that the town of Pullman with its shops, its houses and its stores, was so schemed that every penny the workingmen made found its way back into the company's coffers. In fact, I found the workingmen of Pullman in a pitiable condition. The strike followed, ordered by the men themselves. Then came the boycott, ordered by duly elected delegates to our convention, and then followed the railroad strikes, ordered by the various local unions, each of which had grievances of its own."

"Would the railroad strike have occurred had there been no Pullman trouble?" asked Commissioner Wright.

"No; the Pullman strike was the prime cause. We desired to stop Pullman's cars and shut off his income, thus forcing him to arbitrate. But the railroad men had grievances of their own. The General Managers' Association had been organized with the avowed intention of giving assistance to railroads in labor troubles. The evident aim was to drive organized labor from existence. No sooner had this association been formed than a systematic reduction of railroad wages all over the country began. The cuts were made on one road at a time and in one department at a time, but the systematic regularity with which they appeared was sufficiently significant. The men were ready to strike and felt they had cause. But the trouble would not have come when it did had it not been for the Pullman matter."

Mr. Debs then said that within five days after the strike was declared the union had the railroads beaten. "They were paralyzed," he said, "but just at that time injunctions were sown broadcast and shortly afterward the officials of the American Railway Union were arrested for contempt of court. That beat us. It wasn't the railroads or the army, but the power of the United States courts that beat us." In reply to a question Mr. Debs said that the union had taken every possible means to prevent rioting and disorder. "We objected to the presence of the Federal troops, but not to the State troops and police."

RAIN AIDS THE CROPS.

Prospects for Corn Are Brighter—Yield of Small Grain Is Good.

Reports for the week as to the condition of crops throughout the country and the general influence of the weather on growth, cultivation and harvest have been made by the directors of the different State weather services to the United Stater weather bureau. The reports received by telegraph at Chicago are as follows:

Illinois—Temperature and sunshine above normal. Except in central portion and a few counties in northern portion, rainfall below normal and badly distributed; drought continues in many southern counties. Prospects for corn more encouraging. Plowing for wheat progressing slowly.

Indiana—Light and heavy showers and cool nights improved corn in low places and pasturage in some localities. Wheat, oats and rye thrashing nearly done; fall plowing progressing slowly.

Wisconsin—Weather conditions are unchanged; hot days with cool nights; no rain except occasional showers; forest and marsh fires continue with increased severity. Corn on low ground will make half a crop. Thrashers report large yield of small grain.

Iowa—Drought effectually broken in larger part of state, helping all immature crops and putting ground in condition for plowing.

South Dakota—Generally copious showers, but too late to benefit crops in eastern portion except late corn, flax, and potatoes in scattered localities. Black Hills crops out of danger. Thrashing progressing slowly; all yields light. Pastures greatly improved.

Kansas—Hot week, with but little rain in western half and central part of eastern half of State; elsewhere good showers have benefited pastures and late corn. Plowing retarded by dry weather. Corn-cutting general. Stock water becoming very scarce.

Nebraska—Corn cutting for fodder continues general. Pastures improved somewhat, and a few fields of late corn helped by showers. A little fall plowing, but ground generally too dry.

Ohio—Considerable corn being cut for feed, but generous showers have much improved late corn and potatoes in southern section. Some showers in north part, but not enough to relieve drought. Tobacco has generally an improved appearance, but will be a light yield. Some is being cut. But little plowing has been done.

Missouri—But little change in weather or crops, though showers improved late corn and pastures in some localities. Apples and grapes injured considerably by drought. Plowing for fall wheat retarded.

Michigan—Temperature and rainfall below normal, sunshine normal. With exception of scattered showers in western counties of northern and central sections the drought remains unabated. In many places corn and potatoes are past help.

WHEELING 'ROUND THE WORLD.

Mlle. Londonderry Must Earn $5,000 Before Boston Sees Her Again.

Mlle. Londonderry, as she calls herself, the young woman who says she is going around the world on a bicycle, has started on her journey. Mlle. Londonderry's circumnobilal journey, she declares, is being made on a wager of $10,000 a side, by the terms of which she started penniless from Boston and must return there in fifteen months' time with $5,000 earned en route, after paying her expenses.

Mlle. Londonderry set out from Boston last Monday. Before leaving the Hub she made $230.01, the one cent being given her by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, whose ribbon she wears, and the rest of the money for carrying advertisements of different firms on her wheel. Although she had taken but three lessons on the bicycle, Mlle. Londonderry covered twenty-one miles at the start in four hours and fifteen minutes, and made the run from Boston to Providence—forty-two miles—in nine hours. She says she has met the most polite and kindest treatment on the way. Male and female bicyclers escorted her along stretches of her journey, and even the tramps she encountered treated her with the most distinguished consideration.

UNITED AT LAST

BY

CHAPTER XXIII—Continued

Gilbert went up to London an hour after the race with his pot of money, or, at any rate, some portion of it, in his pocket. The rest would be paid up at Tattersall's in due course. He had eaten nothing that day, having been too anxious about the result of the race to eat any breakfast, and too much elated by his triumph to eat any dinner. He had, therefore, been compelled to sustain nature upon brandy and soda, which is not exactly a sedative for a man of hot temper. He talked about Goblin and his own cleverness in getting hold of Goblin all the way up to London, and arrived at Shoreditch with his pulse galloping and his blood at fever heat.

"I'm not going to let that beggar have Davenant now," he said to himself. "This race brings me something like twenty thou', and I shall pot as much more over the Derby."

He called a hansom, and told the man to drive to Bloomsbury square, intending to honor Mr. Wyatt, otherwise "that beggar," with a call. The cab rattled through the grimy city streets, all shining in the setting sun, which was fading redly on the westward facing windows of the grave old square when Gilbert alighted at Mr. Wyatt's door.

It was a fine old house which the solicitor occupied, one of the oldest and largest in the square, and there had been no attempt to disfigure a house in which Steele and his companions may have hobnobbed over the midnight bottle with such modern improvements as stucco without and gas within.

A respectable-looking man-servant out of livery admitted Mr. Sinclair into a square hall, oak-paneled and paved with black and white marble. The doors were oak, deeply set in the solid old walls, the architraves handsome enough for a modern palace. An old-fashioned oil lamp had just been lighted, and shed a yellow sickly light on some of the panels, while others reflected the crimson glow in the west, as if they had been splashed with blood.

"Your master at home?" asked Gilbert.

"Yes, sir. He has just dined. Shall I show you into the dining-room?"

"Yes: and you can bring me something to eat, Staples," replied Gilbert, who was quite at home at the solicitor's house.

He went into the dining-room without giving the man time to announce him. James Wyatt sat in a lounging attitude facing the western sun, with a claret jug and an untotched dessert before him on the small oval table. That snug oval table of pollard oak had superseded the ponderous old mahogany twenty-two feet by six, at which Mr. Wyatt's father and grandfather had been wont to entertain their friends. James Wyatt wanted no twenty-two-foot table, for he never gave large parties. Cozy quartets, or even confidential tete-a-tete banquets, were more to his liking, and he gave as elaborate and careful a dinner to a man who dined with him alone as other men provide for a gathering that includes all the magnates of their circle. Were pollard oak gifted with speech, the snug oval board could have told many a thrilling tale of 30 per cent. which had been made, in the initiative stage, to seem only 7, of clients in the city who had money to lend, and were so good-natured about lending it, on a safe mortgage or otherwise: and of that awful hour in which the same good, easy-going clients assumed quite another character, and were determined to foreclose or to get their money back by any means. But happily for the maintenance of the decencies, Mr. Wyatt's table was not loquacious, and the grave old room with a few fine pictures on the oak paneling, and some valuable bronzes on the tall chimney-piece, looked respectable enough to inspire confidence in the most suspicious mind. If the pictures had been daubs, or the furniture gaudy, the effect would have been different. But the pictures looked like heir-looms and the furniture told of a chastened taste and a refinement that implied virtue and honor in the possessor thereof.

"Back already," exclaimed Mr. Wyatt. "How did Goblin go? Got a place?"

"Won in a canter," answered Gilbert, flinging himself into a chair and wiping his damp forehead. "Never saw such a horse. There's nothing to beat him. I was right about him, you see."

"Jackson was right about him, you mean. Have some dinner," said Mr. Wyatt, ringing the bell.

"Thanks; I've ordered some. I don't stand upon punctilio with you, you see."

"I should be sorry if you did. Well, you've made a heap of money, I suppose."

"Yes; it's a pretty good haul. Jackson raved like a lunatic about his horse. I was to put on every sixpence I had. I told the fellow I should be ruined if Goblin lost.

"'He won't lose,' raved Jackson, dancing about like a maniac. 'You don't know what that horse can do. I tried him last March against Lord Windsor's Cowcumber, and put a hextra seven pound on him, and Cowcumber was nowhere. I was sorry I hadn't made it fourteen pound when I saw that blessed Cowcumber regular pumped!'

"I was bound to believe in that horse after that, wasn't I?"

"Yes, if you could believe in the trainer."

"Well, the result has shown that he told me the truth. Oh, here comes the dinner."

Gilbert made a weak attempt to eat some fish, and a still weaker attempt at a plate of lamb, but failed in both efforts.

"I've no appetite," he said. "You'd better give me a brandy and soda!"

"How many brandies and sodas have you had to-day?" asked Wyatt, with an air of friendly anxiety, and the tone of an easy going-mentor which long use had made natural to him. If James Wyatt's clients went to the dogs, their ruin could never be laid at his door. He gave them such good advice on the way, and parted with them with a friendly shake hands at the last, just before the dogs ate them.

"Do you suppose I counted them?" demanded Gilbert, with a laugh. "The sun was hot, and I was excited about Goblin. I had a pocket full of silver, and it's all gone, and I don't think I've paid for anything except brandy and soda. That's a rough way of calculating."

"You've been drinking too much brandy, Gilbert."

"That's my lookout."

"Try some of that claret."

"I'll have brandy or nothing."

Mr. Wyatt sighed and rang the bell, and then filled a large, cool-looking glass with the Lafitte, which he sipped in a calmly appreciative manner, with the air of a man who had never been thirsty in his life.

"Yes, Jim," began Gilbert, leaning back, "I've made a tidy haul to-day, and I expect a bigger haul on Wednesday fortnight. And now, old fellow, I want you to do me a favor."

"Find you a good investment for your winnings? With pleasure. I can get you a safe 7 per cent."

"Thanks, that's not the favor I mean. Ah, here's the stuff," as the man brought in a spirit stand and a supply of soda water. "I want you to let me have Davenant back, Jim," pouring brandy into a small tumbler, without looking at the quantity. "You can't want the place for yourself, you know."

"Why not?"

"Well, my dear boy," replied Mr. Sinclair, with the amiable candor which is sometimes induced by alcohol, "you're not the sort of man to play the country gentleman. You wouldn't find it pay. You may stop, you may shut up shop, if you will, but the odor of sixty per cent. will hang around you still. You understand, old fellow. The country people wouldn't associate with you—they come to me, you know, for my wife's sake; that's a different thing. They would not cotton to you. They're very fond of borrowing money, but they don't like money-lenders. You'll find county society a dead letter, dear boy, and it would be folly to keep up such a place as Davenant for the reception of a pack of young fools from London. You can pluck such pigeons anywhere."

"How kind of you to be so interested in my business."

"Nothing like candor between friends," said Gilbert.

"And you want me to sell Davenant? That's curious. You were red-hot to sell a few months ago."

"I was down on my luck just then. Things have changed for the better. And I find that I care more for the place than I thought I did. And I shouldn't particularly like my neighbors to crow over me. It would look as if I were ruined to part with such a place as that."

"What a complete change of tone. I suppose your wife's recovery has caused this alteration in your feelings."

Gilbert winced. It always stung him when James Wyatt spoke of his wife. The man's tone implied some occult knowledge. Speak as courteously as he might, there was always a lurking sneer in his speech.

"Come, Jim, I'll give you a handsome profit on your bargain. What more can you want? Name your own terms. I know you only bought the place as a speculation."

"Suppose I did, and that the speculation has answered. How then?"

"You mean that you have sold it again?"

"Within four and twenty hours of my purchase."

"By Jove, that's sharp work," cried Gilbert, bitterly disappointed. "But perhaps the man who bought it would take a profit on his purchase."

"Not much chance of that. The man who bought it would have given me almost any money for the place, if I had been inclined to take advantage of his eagerness to get it back again."

"Back again!" cried Gilbert, starting up with a vehemence that sent the soda water bottles spinning across the table—"to get it back again. Then you've sold it to Sir Cyprian Davenant?"

"That's the man," answered Wyatt, opening his cigar-case, and affecting an extreme deliberation in the choice of a cigar.

"Jim Wyatt, you're a scoundrel!" roared Sinclair.

"That's strong and actionable in the bargain. Don't be a fool, Sinclair. You want to turn your estate into money. I give you the money you want, and take my property to the best market. Where is the wrong?"

"Where is the wrong? You duped, you hoodwinked me. You know how I hate that man. You know that I would rather cut my throat than give him any advantage. You know, or you ought to know, that my chief motive in buying Davenant was to humiliate him, to give my wife the place he might have given her, to show her which was the better man of the two, to set my heel upon Sir Cyprian Davenant. And you swindle me out of my revenge; you put the winning card into my enemy's hand. You, my professed friend—you, who have made thousands out of me!"

"I grant the thousands," answered James Wyatt, looking up, and facing his accuser with a sparkle of defiance in his pale gray eyes. "People who want dirty work done must pay a good price for it. But as for friendship, please remember that I have never made any professions on that score. When have you ever treated me like a friend, Gilbert Sinclair, or like an equal? When have you descended from the lofty standpoint of your coal-pits and your smelting works to my level? Not once. And you think because you made a social door-mat of me—because you have let me fetch and carry, and honored me with your confidence when you wanted to air your grievances, or get out of a difficulty—because, in one word, I have been useful, you think I am to call you my friend, and sacrifice my own interests to any amount in order to gratify your spite. You wanted to get rid of Davenant. I took it off your hands, and made profit by the transaction. You don't suppose I would speculate five-and-thirty thousand to oblige you?"

"Judas," cried Gilbert Sinclair, seizing his quondam friend by the throat, mad with passion.

The soberer and calmer man had the better of mere brute force. James Wyatt shook off his assailant as easily as if he had been the athlete, and Gilbert the thinker and plotter.

"Fool!" he exclaimed, contemptuously, "don't waste your breath in upbraiding me with treachery. Look at home. Look to your own house, and your pretty wife, who recovered her senses so quickly under the influence of her German physician. Have you had many visits from that German physician, Mr. Sinclair? Perhaps he times his visits so as to avoid meeting you. You spend a good deal of your life away from Davenant, you see."

"What do you mean?" gasped the other.

"What I say. Look at home for treachery. I gave you a hint that night our German friend first came to your house, but you were too dull to take it."

Gilbert started, and looked at him intently.

"I remember what you said—'Watch your wife.' I did watch her, what then?"

"You saw how he—the strange doctor—could awaken intelligence which no one else could arouse. You saw how she sung at his bidding—how tears flowed—for him. A case of electrobiology, one would suppose."

"Wyatt, I shall strangle you if you don't put your meaning into the very plainest words!"

"And perhaps strangle me if I do. I shall have to risk that, I suppose," said Wyatt, with a laugh. "Plainly, then, you should have made better use of your eyes that night, and seen through the disguise of a pair of smoke-colored spectacles and a gray wig and beard. The man who came to your house with Lord Clanyarde was Sir Cyprian Davenant!"

"It's a lie!" cried Gilbert Sinclair.

"It's as true as that your wife's recovery dates from the hour of his visit."

"You knew this—you—my legal adviser—friend—and you sold my estate to that man—knowing this!" cried Sinclair, almost inarticulate with passion.

"Again I must repeat that I never professed to be your friend. As your legal adviser I had no right to interfere in your domestic affairs. As to the sale of the property, I cannot see how that affects your position with Sir Cyprian."

If Gilbert could have flown at the man's throat again and strangled him, there might have been some satisfaction in that act of savagery. To call him bad names, and to see his sardonic grin as he heard them, was a poor relief, but all that civilization allowed. Gilbert hurled some of the hardest epithets in the vocabulary of abuse at that smiling traitor, and then flung himself out of the room and out of the house.

The hansom was waiting for him—meekly as your most spirited hansom will wait on a balmy evening for a safe customer. The young May moon was up in the soft, opal sky.

"Charing Cross Station—double fare," cried Mr. Sinclair, and the cab-horse enlivened the shades of quiet Bloomsbury by the clatter of his poor chipped hoofs in a hand gallop.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

FAMOUS VENDOME COLUMN.

A Few Words of Its History and the Facts of Its Destruction.

The Vendome Column in Paris, which was destroyed by the Commune in 1871, was erected by Napoleon I., principally of cannon taken at Ulm, to commemorate the victory of Austerlitz in 1805. It was covered with 425 bronze plaques, molded in bas-relief to display the chief incidents in the Austrian campaign of that year. They were each three feet and eight inches high, and formed a continuous band, inclosing the column twenty-two times as it circled to the top, the entire length of the spiral being 840 feet. Instead of Charlemagne, as at first intended, it was surmounted by a statue of the first Napoleon in a Roman costume and crowned with laurel. After several postponements it was brought to the ground on the 16th of May in the presence of many thousands who had waited for hours to witness the spectacle.

Owing to some engineering difficulties in cutting the base it could not be brought down at the time originally fixed. The members of the Commune attended in state to witness the affair and sentinels were posted about half way down the Rue de la Paix to prevent the crowd from approaching too close, as up to the last moment accidents were feared. At 5:30 in the afternoon the ropes were tightened, and suddenly the column was observed to lean forward toward the Rue de la Paix, then finally to fall with a dull, heavy thud, raising as it did so an immense cloud of dust. Before it touched the ground it separated into three parts by its own weight, and on reaching the bed of dirt and fagots to receive it broke into at least thirty pieces. The statue of Napoleon, on reaching the ground, broke off from its pedestal at the ankles, then at the knees, the waist, and the neck, while the iron railings which surrounded the summit of the monument were shivered to pieces. Shortly after the column had fallen spectators were permitted to traverse the place to witness the wreck, but were not permitted to take away any of the fragments.

Ancient Jokes.

When Themistocles was trying to get money out of the Andrians for the Grecian defense fund and told them that the Athenians would come with two great gods, persuasion and necessity, the Andrians replied that the Athenians were well off with two such serviceable gods, but they had two gods who always dwelt in their country—poverty and impossibility.

Cyrus' bitter jest about the fishes to the wretched Ionians, who had declined his overtures, and then after the taking of Sardis, wanted to come to terms, is too cruel to be humorous.

"Say," said the insulting victor, "that a piper, seeing fishes in the sea, should pipe to them, thinking they would come out to the land, and when he was disappointed of his hope took a net and inclosed a great multitude of the fishes and drew them to land, and seeing them flopping about said to them, 'Cease dancing to me, since you would not come out and dance when I played.'"

Russian Firemen.

In a Russian village there is not even such an organization as we possess in this country in the small volunteer fire companies. In their stead is a log stable with thatched roof containing an old-fashioned hand pump and three casks mounted on wheels. These are kept filled with water, and each is drawn by a single horse. The horses are the property of the commune, and they are kept tethered outside the cabin, ready for duty at a moment's notice. A place is also set apart in the hut for the mujik who serves as watchman, an office that is held, turn by turn, by the inhabitants of the township. The location selected for this cabin is as near as possible to the residence of the pristav, or the district captain of police, and upon an alarm of fire he drives to the scene in his telega at the head of the procession of carts and peasants.

Have You Eaten Scalloped Onions?

Pear, slice and boil the onions in salted water until tender; drain and put in a baking dish suitable to send to table; cover with cream sauce and dust thickly with buttered bread crumbs and brown in a quick oven. It is well to know that turnips cooked in the same way make really a very fine dish.

OH! give me liberty! for even were paradise my prison, still I should long to leap the crystal walls.—Dryden.

IS A MIGHTY POWER.

GROWTH OF THE CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Born in Ohio Twenty-one Years Ago, the Woman's Temperance Crusade Is Now a Great Organization, Exerting an Influence in Every Civilized Land.

In a Noble Cause.

A potent force in the elevation, emancipation and education of the mothers of the race that is yet to be born is the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. It is a link in the chain along which humanity is feeling its way to a nobler and better life, and of the few organizations which work throughout the English-speaking world it is, perhaps, the strongest. But its influence is not confined to the world that speaks the English tongue; there are branch organizations in the Sandwich Islands, in China, India and Japan. It is almost universal in scope, recognizing no sectarianism in religion, no sectionalism in politics, and no sex in citizenship. Of an organization so powerful and so widely extended it is interesting to glance at the history.

MISS FRANCES WILLARD.

Back in 1873 a singular crusade swept over a large section of the West. It was a crusade of prayer, women relying on that spiritual weapon to bring the saloon down. Starting in Hillsboro, Ohio, the crusade swept in the short space of seven weeks over as many States, obliterating thousands upon thousands of barrooms and saloons. Women besieged such places, praying and singing psalms; religious enthusiasm was kindled, and thousands signed the pledge and professed conversion. Church bells pealed in steeples and the sound of jubilant thanksgiving rose from the street as the crusading ladies were asked by reformed publicans to stave in casks of liquors and empty the contents into the gutters.

MRS. MARGARET BRIGHT LUCAS, First President of the W. C. T. U.

Birth of the W. C. T. U.

But the pace was too fast and the inevitable reaction came. Other saloons sprang into existence and the traffic flourished as before. The principle of the crusade, however, lived, and in 1874 a number of ladies met in conference in Cleveland and adopted the name of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. A plan of organization was adopted, an appeal made to the women of the globe and a publishing house established in Chicago. That house now issues no fewer than 130,000,000 pages of printed matter yearly, all directed to the objects of the union. Out of the appeal made to womankind has grown the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, a society which comprises, besides our own order, the British Temperance Association, the Canadian Woman's Christian Temperance Union and organizations in the Sandwich Islands, Japan, India and China. Its first president was Mrs. Margaret Bright Lucas, a sister of John Bright, one of England's great statesmen.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET, President of the British W. C. T. U.

A Wonderful Growth.

In 1876 at a convention of the W. C. T. U. in Newark, the question of woman suffrage was first broached and was advocated by the "Uncrowned Queen of American Democracy," Miss Frances E. Willard, Secretary of the Woman's National Christian Temperance Union and president of the local union in Chicago. Upon the platform of equal woman's rights Miss Willard was elected president of the Woman's National W. C. T. U. in 1879—a post she has since filled with credit to herself and profit to the society.

WOMAN'S TEMPERANCE TEMPLE CHICAGO

Under her direction the work of the society was divided into preventive, educational, evangelistic, social, legal, and organizing departments and thereafter the society wielded an immense power in the nation. In the nurseries and schoolrooms, in the reformatories and in the home, at encampments and at fairs, in the halls of Congress and in the dives of great cities the influence of these indefatigable workers for humanity's sake is constantly felt. All over the globe they have dispatched missionaries to educate, to preach, to purify. Now the membership is nearly half a million and is ever growing. In Chicago the national headquarters are in a building which was erected by the society at a cost of $1,100,000.

RAILWAY BUILDING FALLING OFF

The Boom Days of Railroad Construction and Extension Seem to Be Over.

In a general way the facts pertaining to the financial standing of railways are known. Accepting railway construction as an indication of the condition of the railway industry, the period through which we are now passing shows greater depression than any previous period, says the Review of Reviews. The increase in new mileage brought into operation during the fiscal year 1892 was less than during any year since 1880, while the percentage increase stood lower than for any previous year since the beginning of railways in this country. Thus the rate of increase from 1886 to 1887 was 9.08 per cent.; from 1887 to 1888, 6.05 per cent.; from 1888 to 1889, 3.22 per cent.; from 1889 to 1890, 4.78 per cent.; from 1890 to 1891, 2.94 per cent.; from 1891 to 1892, 1.88 per cent.; and from 1892 to 1893, 2.80 per cent. These figures show a remarkable depression in the business of railway construction. Another fact emphasized by railway writers is the large amount of mileage placed in the hands of receivers during the last eighteen months. Thus 43,000 miles of line have been under the protection of the courts, an amount equal to 24 per cent. of the total length of line.

STABLE AND CARRIAGE HOUSE.

Elegant Design of a House Suitable for a Rich Man's Horse.

This design was prepared by Palliser, Palliser & Co. for erection in connection with a proposed residence at Seaside Park, Bridgeport, Conn., and is arranged to suit the requirements of individual wants as well as the peculiarities of the site. There is a cellar built under carriage house, which will be found useful for the storage of vegetables, roots, etc., and the carriage house being arranged to drive through, makes it very convenient for every-day use, as well as utilizing the room. The shed is designed as a shelter for horse and carriage, so that the horse can be fed noon times without unhitching. The two stalls and box stall give ample room for two or three horses, while there is room enough for three carriages. On second story is provided a man's chamber, hay-loft and feed-room—the feed bins being built into position and having chutes down to stable below.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW.

PLAN OF FIRST FLOOR.

PLAN OF SECOND FLOOR.

The building is of wood, frame sheathed, and lower or first story clapboarded and shingled above, roof slated. The ventilator is connected with stable below by means of wooden vent pipes, and thoroughly ventilates the whole building. Harness-room has an open fire-place, the chimney running up through man's room on second floor. The hay-racks, mangers and stable fixtures are of iron. Water is supplied on first floor. The harness-room is fitted up with the necessary hooks, pins, etc., for hanging and storing harness. The whole built in a first-class manner at a cost of $850, and makes a neat building for the purpose.

Irrigation in "Drouthy" Kansas.

A large individual irrigation plant in Kansas is described as follows by a paper in that State:

"Among the irrigation plants in course of construction in Kansas probably the most extensive is that of Mr. G. M. Munger, of Eureka, Greenwood county. He is constructing a reservoir which will cover about 160 acres with water. This is done by building a dam 2,800 feet long and 38 feet high at its greatest height. This, as described by the Irrigation Farmer, will catch the storm waters from a large area and will be used primarily for the irrigation of a 500-acre orchard now just beginning to bear. The water will be raised by two compound duplex steam pumps, the water cylinders of which are twelve by fifteen inches. Each pump has ten inch suction and eight inch discharge. These pumps will elevate the water to a height of sixty-five feet, delivering it on the highest part of Mr. Munger's farm. The estimated cost of the plant complete, including ditches for distribution of the water is $15,000.

When to Stop.

The following answers were received by an English paper in response to a request for opinions as to when to stop advertising:

When the population ceases to multiply and the generations that crowd on after you and never heard of you stop coming on.

When you have convinced everybody whose life will touch yours that you have better goods and lower prices than they can get anywhere else.

When you perceive it to be the rule that men who never advertise are outstripping their neighbors in the same line of business.

When men stop making fortunes right in your sight solely through the direct use of the mighty agent.

When you can forget the words of the shrewdest and most successful business men concerning the main cause of their prosperity.

TOO MUCH turkey to-day may result in a dinner of feathers to-morrow.

"I am 22. At 15 I learned a bad habit which I continued till 19. I then became 'one of the boys' and led a gay life. Exposure produced Syphilis. I became nervous and despondent; no ambition; memory poor; eyes red, sunken and blur; pimples on face; hair loose, bone pains; weak back; varicocele; dreams and losses at night; weak parts; deposit in urine, etc. I spent hundreds of dollars without help, and was contemplating suicide when a friend recommended Drs. Kennedy & Kergan's New Method Treatment. Thank God I tried it. In two months I was cured. This was six years ago, and never had a return. Was married two years ago and all happy. Boys, try Drs. Kennedy & Kergan before giving up hope."

J. P. Ensley Married.

Hundreds of our readers will be interested in the following notice which we take from the Ontario Cal. Record of August 1, and to which the COURIER adds its full measure of congratulations:

"One of the pleasantest weddings that has ever been celebrated in Ontario was that of J. P. Ensley and Miss Elizabeth Borthwick, on Wednesday evening. The happy event took place at the residence of the bride's father, J. P. Borthwick, only relatives and a few intimate friends being present. The rooms were handsomely decorated for the occasion, and the ceremony took place under a wedding bell of evergreens and flowers. Rev. A. E Tracy performed the agreeable task of uniting the couple, and conducted the service in a most felicitous manner. After the ceremony an elegant lunch was served. The presents were numerous and valuable. The contracting parties are both old residents in Ontario, and justly popular. The Record unites with a large circle of friends in extending congratulations. Mr. and Mrs. Ensley left on Thursday for Catalina, but will be "at home" on west D street after this week."

The democrats of Grant township will hold their caucus at the engine house in Waterloo on Saturday of this week, September 1, at 2 p. m. to put in nomination a trustee, assessor and two constables. Let there be a full turnout.

BY ORDER OF COM.

CONGRESS adjourned Tuesday. The first Monday in December the next regular session begins.

TRUSTEES elected this fall will not take their office till August of next year, the old trustees holding over till that time. This is the latest decision.

FRANK MILBOURNE one of the men famed as rainmakers in the dry west, committed suicide last week at Denver, Colo. This has been a hard year on "rainmakers."

A TERRIBLE cyclone swept over the Sea of Azov on Sunday, destroying many vessels and such other property as came in its way. It is believed that nearly 1000 lives were lost.

AUTHORITIES estimate that under the new tariff law sugar duties will amount to 43 millions for the government and 17 millions to benefit the sugar trust. Under the McKinley law, the sugar trust got 22 millions.

MAJ. W. B. BINGHAM, a veteran of the old 44th, died at his home in Lagrange, August 16. He was in the Mexican war a member of the 4th Ohio, and took part in the battles Atlixco, Pueblo and Huamantla and the capture of the city of Mexico, coming out as orderly sergeant. Of his connection with the honorable record of the 44th, Ind., all our readers are familiar. He was a prominent citizen of his county and widely known.

"THERE is nothing to discourage the democracy of Indiana. Many of you have seen the clouds hang lower than they do to-day, and yet, with the earnest work of a united party, fortified with the consciousness of a righteous cause, these clouds were swept away, and the sunshine rested upon your banners clothed with victory. I have that confidence in the intelligence and justice of our people that they will again confide the destiny of their state into the hands of a party that has been the party of progress and reform in Indiana, and that has proven that it can be trusted."—Governor Matthews.

CLEVELAND refused to sign the new tariff bill, because it was not the kind of bill the people asked for. He was especially opposed to manner of taxing sugar. But as he believed the people wanted some sort of a law, he allowed it to become a law without his signature, as it would in ten days. He admits the bill is a great improvement on the McKinley bill, but not what it should be. He says the fight for tariff reform must go right on, till we have taken the shackles off of business and trade and manufacturers and given them a chance to beat the world, as he believes they can do.

NOW COME the prohibitionists with a plank in their platform demanding that the government buy up, own and run all the railroads and telegraphs. For the sixth time, we ask, Where is the money to come from? Suppose the roads won't sell out? Suppose the poor paying roads only will sell, while those that do pay well, refuse to sell? The capital in railroads alone is about ten thousand millions. Again, they "demand" that all officers be paid a salary, and not fees. This law was passed nearly four years ago, and is in effect in half the offices now. It will commence in most of the others in November, while a very few will begin two years later. So the work they ask is already done. They don't seem to have heard of this any more than the populists.

THE new tariff bill became a law Tuesday. It is not the best one that could be invented, but the best, perhaps, that could be had under the circumstances. The two senators from Louisana thought it their duty to stand by their sugar growers, and Hill of New York was against the bill in any shape. This compelled the democrats to swallow the sugar duty, as with the two senators from Louisana, they had the 43 votes necessary to pass any bill. It was a question of that bill or none. In some regards, the senate bill is better than the House bill, and all in all, is about as good. The matter of free iron and coal, is of little value to us here, though in eastern states it would have been an advantage. The greatest wrong is the way the sugar duty is levied. It should have been at a lower rate if any, and so placed as to secure revenue, with as little protection to the trust as possible. It will probably be taken up again at the coming fall session, for the democrats, having reformed so much of the tariff, propose to go forward and do more.

WE favor the establishment of a tribunal of arbitration in which there may be secured a peaceful settlement of all disputes between employers and employes. —Democratic Platform.

WE are in favor of a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. We are also in favor of such constitutional and other changes as may be necessary in order that congress may assemble as soon after its election as practicable, and to that end that the will of the people, as expressed at the polls, may receive prompt and legislative expression.—Democratic Platform.

E. P. JONES, a bank president, who died in Findlay, O., a few days ago, had the interesting commercial distinction of being the first applicant for a bank charter under the existing national bank law. The morning of the day the law went into effect, in 1867, he appeared before the comptroller and presented his application and the cash for his bonds. The comptroller was not ready for business, however, and someone else secured the prize eventually, much to Mr. Jones' regret.

BLISS is slowly improving his way of doing things. First he dropped that old ad. about the little glass populist charm which an admirer wrote him was a "most charming momento," etc. It had a "clover leaf, which reminded one of the farm," and there were the letters, "F. T. L., which mean Finance, Transportation and Land." Then there was the "clover leaf, to suggest greenbacks and good luck," But we suppose as it had no sign of a rabbit's foot, it failed to sell well and he dropped the ad. out. But he kept on for some time with the other double column ad. about that "Populist Button" which "fastens together with a screw. To put it on, unscrew the base, insert the button as desired and then put the button back on. The pin prevents the button from turning," etc, etc. Then he adds that this button can be worn by either sex, etc. But now he has dropped even this, and the several hundred to whom the Times is sent free will miss the most interesting and enjoyable reading matter the paper ever had.

A $125.00 FRAUD.

"Gen." Coxey, "Gen," Bliss and the Populists Show Their Colors.

Friday last was the great day when we were to have "Gen." Coxey, commander-in-chief of the "armies" of the Commonweal of Christ, as he called his crowd of tramps and bums, or "industrials" that he led to Washington and abandoned The day was fair, and the crowd began to come in early, By 1 p. m. there were at least 2,000, of all ages and both sexes, all gathered on the public square, and the supreme moment had come. Editor Bliss, all smiles and sporting a badge with the idol's likeness, introduced the gilt-edged tramp, and allowed him to commence earning his day's salary of $125. The Hon. Freeman Kelley and the Hon. John Ammon squared themselves for the reception of new ideas; there was a slight creaking of the wheels, a little jar, a tremor, and the machine was in motion. It did not stop for two hours and a half, though much of the time it ran only emptyings. He exploited his ridiculous "good roads" scheme, for which he has sent a bill to congress, which is to empower Uncle Sam to issue 500 millions irredeemable paper money to build roads. Then he told of his other bill, which is an act authorizing cities, towns, etc., to issue bonds to the amount of half their assessment and take them to the U. S. treasury, when the treasurer is obliged to issue on these bonds "American paper money" equal to 99 per cent of their face. And this money, the cities, towns, etc., will use to make public improvements, such as street car lines, electric lights, school houses, court houses, etc., etc. It is a great scheme, and just about fits "Gen." Coxey's ability. Then he wants the government to own all railroads, so that "people can ride at cost," whatever that may mean. He also favors unlimited coinage of silver. He said also that Christ was a populist and favored good roads, and made other remarks that savored of irreverence. He is evidently a man of very limited education and narrow ideas. He certainly is not up to the average DeKalb farmer in point of intelligence. But he knows a good thing when he sees it, and if he don't happen to see it, has the gall to ask for it. Hence, when he strikes a crowd of suckers, he manages to get his bearings pretty well, so that when he leaves, 100 or more dollars "American money, full legal tender," are wearing on the lining of his capacious pockets. We append a few thoughts in the form of NOTES.

The crowd that believe most in Coxeyism came from the country, and as this agreeable treat was provided for them free, by the townspeople, we suggest that they should quit preaching the doctrine of hatred to townspeople. They should now forgive, etc. But who will forgive the townspeople who subscribed to bring this disgrace on DeKalb county? We don't know who they are. They are evidently ashamed of it. In the meantime Coxey slaps that $125 in his pocket and goes back to Ohio and tells the people what suckers DeKalb people are. Who can blame him? There are, we are sorry to say, two or three hundred people in this county who delight in beidg victimized. A new man with a newspaper or a speech is sure to get their dollars.

Coxey wants 500 millions issued by the government to be used in building roads. Here is the opportunity for Concord township. A week or two ago they had a big fight to prevent the building of a gravel road. But some of the same ones were here cheering Coxey's plan of going into debt equal to half the assessed value of the property of Concord township for the same purpose.

Coxey's plan, in brief is: "In order to relieve ourselves of the burden of our debts, we must increase our indebtedness 100-fold." And his deluded followers shouted, "Amen!"

Coxey complained that Cleveland imprisoned him. Coxey lied and knew he was lying. Cleveland had nothing to do with it. It was done by the local authorities of the District of Columbia.

Instead of complaining of a few days' imprisonment, this king of tramps should now be breaking stone in some jail, instead of his deluded followers. He is the man responsible for the crimes of his "army" of bums and tramps. He led them forth to prey on the country. Let him be punished in their stead for the crimes they committed.

Some hitherto respected citizens crowded around "Gen." Coxey anxious to shake his hand. Did they feel the degradation they were bringing on themselves and the community?

We have a few men in the pen at Michigan City whose crimes are less dangerous and of less magnitude than Coxey's. Why not give them $125 to come and let us fall down and worship them?

Coxey talked affectionately about the "poor working people." It is just such howling frauds as he that keep the working people poor, by keeping them running after false gods, wasting their time, their thoughts and energies on delusions. But of the entire crowd, "Gen." Coxey himself was perhaps the only one who is not a "laboring man." He toils not, neither does he spin. But Solomon in all his glory could not wring $125 of the laboring man's hard earnings for a silly harangue of two hours with such neatness and dispatch.

If Coxey's plan of borrowing money of the U. S. government for every little thing we want were put into practice, how long would it be before Uncle Sam would own all the towns, cities, counties and townships, and all the railroads, telegraphs, water works, electric lights and street railways? What wou'd there be left for the people to own? Coxey is a fool and his deluded admirers ought to be ashamed of themselves.

The assessment of the town of Auburn is over a million. The Coxey plan would be to bond the town for half a million. But we are kicking already over a debt of about $12,000. DeKalb county is assessed at fourteen millions. Coxey's plan would be to bond the county for seven millions. But we are now kicking about our county debt of $58,000. But a few of the men who kick on the town debt and the county debt, claim to believe in the Coxey plan.

"Coxey does not come to Auburn to make a populist speech" says the Times. Well, he didn't make a speech that would suit any other party, living or dead, that we ever heard of. And no other party invited him to come. No other party sat around and cheered his silly teachings or rushed up to shake hands when he had run down.

There were not over 100 populist voters in the crowd, though a large number had their wives and children along. The entire audience, drawn out largely by curiosity, numbered at least 2,000.

Smithfield Democratic Caucus.

The democrats of Smithfield township met at the Center last Saturday, at 2 p. m. to nominate their township candidates. Trustee J. O. Blake was made president and Douglas Kelley secretary, Isaac Barker and W. May, were appointed tellers. There were three named for trustee, W. Betz, Fred Gfeller and John Clark. The first vote showed, Betz, 13; Gfeller, 21; Clark 10. Clark withdrew, and the second ballot gave it to Mr. Gfeller, on a vote of 29 to 19. All are first rate men and good material for the place. For assessor, Milton Barker was chosen by acclamation. In the same way, A. W. Bair was named for justice, north, and John Clark for the south. Phillip Albright was nominated for constable in the north and Daniel Shuman in the south. The nominees are all good men. Mr. Gfeller has been trustee before, and made an excellent officer. Mr. Betz would have made a strong candidate and good trustee. So would Mr. Clark, who was later on, selected for justice. There was a pretty good attendance for so busy a time.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

The sick in town are all improving.

Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Crooks have returned from the east.

The Daniels family had a picnic at Hamilton on Saturday.

Mr. A. C. Gruhlke has a cousin visiting him from Toledo, Ohio.

Mart Miser has moved into the Waterman cottage on Center Street.

J. G. Johnson and wife have gone to Chicago after their new fall goods.

Miss Mary Wenrich has gone to Oshkosh, Wis, to visit her brother Frank.

The school teachers of the county are off to Auburn to the institute this week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Keep entertained a number of friends to tea last Wednesday eve.

Fred Starr, wife and daughter, of Indianapolis, are the guests of Dr. J. N. Chamberlain.

The Sunday evening union meetings still continue and are found interesting and profitable.

Ex-Postmaster McBride has commenced rebuilding his residence, badly damaged by fire.

Mrs. Charles Rude, of Tecumseh, Michigan, is visiting her parents, Wm. Ettinger and wife.

Mrs. John Shull who returned home August 4 from her western visit looking very well, has been quite sick, but is now recovering

Mrs. George Morel went away this week for a little outing. She expects to resume her position next week in Mr. and Mrs. Johnson's store.

Mrs. Phil Morel has returned from her visit to Toledo and Lakeside. She reports a delightful time, the only drawback being obliged to come back so soon.

A report is floating about that in Elkhart, in the vicinity of the gas works, the earth has cracked open for a distance of 300 feet in length, forty feet in depth and three feet wide.

Some little sickness is prevailing among the children here. A child of Mr. Sutherland, in the southeast part of town, is now recovering from a severe attack of membraneous croup. Frank Jones and wife buried a child last week six months old. Mr. and Mrs. Luce, on Washington street, buried a little girl Friday of last week who died from diphtheria. Mr. Mergy has a child sick at present with the same dread disease.

BUTLER.

Charley Campbell is visiting in Detroit.

An heir is reported to the house of Dan Tombow.

Mrs. Romain Campbell is visiting her aunt at Napoleon, Ohio.

William Prosser remains very poorly, with but meager hopes of recovery.

Rev. J. B. Helwig and family are spending a part of his vacation among relatives near Helmer, Ind.

The basket factory employes are working over-time. They are having more orders than they can fill.

The canning factory is running full time and is furnishing employment for about fifty hands. They are working on corn, apples and tomatoes.

Eli Healy, living three miles north of town and who was so seriously injured in a recent runaway, is reported as rapidly improving with good hopes of early recovery.

Isaac Springer, a well known saloonist died suddenly last week. His remains were taken to Lagrange for interment. Mr. Springer, though for a time engaged in the sale of liquor, was, nevertheless, a very fair sort of a man; too good, we have often thought, to be engaged in such a business.

One of the sensations of the week was the marriage of Will Stokes to Mrs. Warner Blackwell. Our readers will remember that Mrs. B. is the widow of Warner Blackwell, who was killed a short time ago while resisting arrest. May more sunshine and less shadows be the lot of both than in their previous matrimonial ventures.

The Disciples' annual gathering took place last Sabbath on the historic banks of the St. Joe, seven miles south of Butler. The day was all that could have been hoped for and the woods were just full of Disciples and their many friends and well wishers. The speaker, an ex-consul to some foreign port, proved himself well worthy the earnest attention of the many thousands assembled, and the day was one of deep enjoyment, both to old and young.

ASHLEY.

The ball games brought quite a crowd to our town last Saturday.

The shop men are being increased. Two new men were put to work last week.

The walk around the school grounds has been completed and the new bell will be placed in the tower next week.

Jimmy Clark rode the goat in the second degree of the K. P. lodge last week. Jimmy is pretty active for an old man, but he says the goat was a little too hard in the mouth.

The Indiana Improvement Co. are fast making arrangements to lay walks along their property, which will make a big improvement to our town, especially in the muddy seasons.

The ladies of the Christian church gave a 15 cent supper in the Babe building last Saturday evening. They met with good success, the proceeds being enough to put the large window in their church, which they had pledged themselves to do.

If anyone wants to see pears that will beat the famed California pears, let him see those on S. U. Tarney's tree, at his residence on South Main street. They are Bartletts, and perfect specimens of that popular variety. They are the largest Bartletts we ever saw.

The largest stock of artificial teeth ever brought to this section of the state was purchased recently by S. B Johnston for Auburn office and M. W. Johnston for Garrett office. There are nearly three hundred sets and every one is of the best make in the world. They are the strongest teeth in the market and beautiful in shape and shading. We are informed that for cash, there will be some reduction in prices during the hard times.

Great many of our citizens attended the yearly meeting of the Christians at the Hamilton grove on the St. Joe River, Sunday. Among them were A. J. Ralston and J. E. Rose and their wives, and Mrs. Ann Culberteon and Mrs. J. A. Barns. All had a good time, heard good sermons, had a nice picnic dinner and about 100 invitations to picnic with the hospitable people who live near there They all met many old friends, and came home nearly lame with the handshaking.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly." Sold by Robbins and McCord druggist Auburn Ind. 34tf

There was a large number of applicant's at the teachers', examination Saturday, in spite of the fact that we have already a sufficient number licensed to fill the schools. And as schools begin next week, it is hardly a business way, if the teachers are not all employed now. Some of these teachers, who were working at the examination Saturday, say the trustees are keeping the places open for them, though a part of them have been up for examination before. As the superintended cannot possibly examine their papers this week, we cannot see how they can begin schools next week.

Miss Lulu Rempis, of Waterloo, was a guest of Nellie Barns while at the institute this week.

Actually selling at cost at the Potter shoe store, their entire stock. Buy now and save money.

Our old friend and neighbor Frank Francis, of Waterloo, was here Friday and made us a visit.

Al Roland is pushing forward his new house on West Seventh street. It will make him and his wife a neat home.

Don't forget the closing out sale, dirt cheap, of the entire stock of boots and shoes at the Potter store, now going on.

The reception given by the Y. P. S. C. E. to Miss Gertie Wilson, will be at the home of Mrs. F. J. Yesbera Friday evening.

Cyrus Brandaberry and his little daughter, Pearl, were here last Friday. It is pretty lonesome for them at the old home, since his wife died.

Wm. A. Goodrich, of Morenci, was a caller Friday last. He has been back looking up some ditch expense connected with his land in Fairfield township.

It is not often that a newspaper man has a gift of a big sackful of pears. But W. H. Less broke the record all right, and and has thanks as big as the generous gift.

Jim Pearce is very sick at this writing. His family have passed through quite a siege of sickness during which he has cared for them, and now he gets down himself.

WANTED:—An active agent to represent the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of N. Y., in DeKalb county. A liberal contract will be made with the right man. Apply to Thos. Merritt, Gen'l Agent, Mutual Life Insurance Co. of N. Y., Indianapolis, Ind. 35

John Anthony, of Smithfield, was in town Saturday, and we hardly knew him. He is one of the young DeKalb men who went to Honduras plant banana orchards and grow up with the country. He came home last spring, but has his fruit land planted and growing.

The old ladies of the Lutheran church will give an old fashioned farm supper in the lecture room of the church next Saturday evening Sept. 1, 1894. Supper served from 5 to 8 o'clock. Mite 15 cts. If you come you will not be disappointed. Come and bring your best friend.

The Auburn Rifles received their pay yesterday, for service at Hammond. M. D. King, Gov. Mathews' secretary was here, and goes to other points. The governor borrowed the money by a mortgage on his farm. But of course the state will some day pay him back. Capt. Kuhlman has the checks ready for the boys.

Miss Hoffman's Class Recital.

If anything were needed to satisfy our people that Miss Flora Hoffman is a music teacher of a high character, the work done by her pupils last Friday evening would be decisive in her favor. The work was mostly by small pupils. Only one, little Miss Marie Weamer, was absent, she being ill. Her place was taken by Aileen Garwood, who sang a sweet little song about "You can't play in our yard," etc. The names of the pupils who took part are: Blaine Otto, Allie Grube, Emma McClellan, Georgie Zimmerman, Ruth Baker, Vera Zollars, Edna Barnes, Rosamond McIntyre, Laura. Mae and Pauline Rose, Estella Henning, of Waterloo,, Lila Hanna, and Nora Saxton. Miss Saxton, Miss Grube, Miss Henning and Mae and Pauline Rose are of the older members, the rest being all small pupils, some of them, like Rosamond McIntyre, being very young. It was very gratifying to their friends, as well as to Miss. Hoffman, to see how correctly and coolly they did their work, how well they sat at the instrument, immovable as older players would be. Both pupils and teachers should be complimented. And right here we wish to say, that a child should begin quite young in order to master this difficult yet desirable accomplishment. Let them train the fingers early and let the budding mind reach out in its younger hours for the enjoyment and employment of sweet music. We nearly forgot one of the neatest things done. Charlie Borst, one of the pupils, did not play, but read an essay instead. Charlie has quite a dramatic and elocutionary talent, and his composition, so true to boy life and experience, brought down the house in cheers.

Waterloo Fair Premiums Lists.

The Premium lists for the fair are now out and placed where they can be easily had. In Auburn they may be had of Marion Willis at his news store, or at this office. Or send to J. G. Johnson, Sec. Waterloo, Ind.

DON'T SAY ANYTHING ABOUT IT,

FOR

WE DON'T WANT IT TO GET OUT.

BUT

IT'S A FACT JUST THE SAME,

It has been whispered to me a good many times, and I am compelled to believe it. For I dropped into Dangerous Acoident.

M. E. Krontz, of Butler, was out at his farm on Monday and on his way home some part of the harness broke so that the wagon ran against the horse and Mr. Krontz fell forward. He was badly bruised about the head and arm and his shoulder dislocated. Two ladies, Mrs. Berry and Mrs. Bordner, saw him and helped him up, and David Maxwell coming along took him to town. Dr. Fanning was called and at last accounts he was getting along very well.

Died.

Minerva VanAuken, at the age of 8 years, 6 months and 11 days. She was the daughter of J. J. and Maggie VanAuken, and a bright, promising child. Her disease was diphtheria, which after a suffering of several days, terminated in death Wednesday morning, August 29, 1894. The interment was the same afternoon at 4 o'clock in Woodlawn cemetery, the brief services being performed by Rev. J. D. Brosy of the Lutheran church.

Died, at Ft. Wayne, August 23d, Edna Levon, only child of Selden and Nora Engle, aged 2 years and 4 months, of congestion of the brain, after an illness of only twelve hours. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. D. W. Sanders, of Columbia City. Little Edna was a sweet child, loved by all who knew her, and the home will be very lonely without her sweet presence.

Political News.

Last week wek we had on our inside pages not only a synopsis of the doings of the democratic state convention, but a fairly correct likeness of each candidate, with a brief account of each one. There was also a small portion of the platform adopted and of Gov. Matthews' great speech. In another column we had a brief statement of the new tariff bill containing a hundred or more of the leading articles, with the rate of tariff on each, and also the rate in the McKinley law. Our readers would do well to cut out and keep this list as it will be interesting to study and well to keep posted on. This week we will publish the state platform in full on the eighth page of our home side. It is the work of Hon. R. C. Bell, of Fort Wayne, mainly and was read by him. Is was heartily cheered at every point he made. Next week we intend to publish Gov. Matthews' speech in full. It should be carefully studied as it is the democratic "keynote" of this campaign.

Our Local Courts.

George English, a "colored darkey" who has been working here for some time, got enthused at the Coxey dance south of the jail Friday evening and sailed into Frank Parrett. Parrett had no time to defend himself from this sudden and malicious assault before the darkey had him down, but before any damage could be done parties separated them and the darkey was ejected from the place. Next morning English was taken before his Honor, 'Squire Walborn and was fined $5 and costs. Not having the change in his pocket, and the 'Squire not finding it convenient to change a $1,000 bill, George was escorted by Marshal Baker, to quarters in the popular Hotel de Ralston.

Friday evening, two local sports, W.W. Brown and Al. Jenkins were stowing away Coxey cocktails in Refner's saloon when in some way they differed, neither one remembers how. But after they had been pulled apart, separated would be nearer the word, it was found that Jenkins had the bridge of his nose broken in and several bad cuts about his right eye. They were politely requested to pay their respects to 'Squire Ross, who listened to their tale of woe and then told Brown he must contribute $15 to the school fund. But the latter thought the figures high, and will appeal to the circuit court at the next term.

Thursday evening and Friday forenoon 'Squire Walborn wrestled, figuratively speaking, with a number of young men who had allowed the siren charms of a certain girl to lead their innocent little feet astray. At least it appeared so to the satisfaction of the 'Squire, who kindly let them down at $5 apiece. If the girl and the boys will agree not to transgress again, the COURIER will withhold their names. But next time ——!

Monday, Squire Walborn tackled a new sort of case that came up from Fairfield. Charles Rowe, had Orin Smith arrested for trespass. He asserted that Smith had gone into his, Rowe's, potato patch and dug and used some of his potatoes. The case was begun Monday, and concluded Tuesday. It seems the law will not punish a man unless the value of the thing taken is 10 cents. Smith admitted he dug up one hill, and thought it was worth not more than five cents. Rowe could not show that it was worth more, and so Smith was let off.

If anyone wants to see pears that will beat the famed California pears, let him see those on S. U. Tarney's tree, at his residence on South Main street. They are Bartletts, and perfect specimens of that popular variety. They are the largest Bartletts we ever saw.

The largest stock of artificial teeth ever brought to this section of the state was purchased recently by S. B. Johnston for Auburn office and M. W. Johnston for Garrett office. There are nearly three hundred sets and every one is of the best make in the world. They are the strongest teeth in the market and beautiful in shape and shading. We are informed that for cash, there will be some reduction in prices during the hard times.

Great many of our citizens attended the yearly meeting of the Christians at the Hamilton grove on the St. Joe River, Sunday. Among them were A. J. Ralston and J. E. Rose and their wives, and Mrs. Ann Culbertson and Mrs. J. A. Barns. All had a good time, heard good sermons, had a nice picnic dinner and about 100 invitations to picnic with the hospitable people who live near there. They all met many old friends, and came home nearly lame with the handshaking.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly." Sold by Robbins and McCord druggist Auburn Ind. 34tf

There was a large number of applicant's at the teachers', examination Saturday, in spite of the fact that we have already a sufficient number licensed to fill the schools. And as schools begin next week, it is hardly a business way, if the teachers are not all employed now. Some of these teachers, who were working at the examination Saturday, say the trustees are keeping the places open for them, though a part of them have been up for examination before. As the superintended cannot possibly examine their papers this week, we cannot see how they can begin schools next week.

Miss Hoffman's Class Recital.

If anything were needed to satisfy our people that Miss Flora Hoffman is a music teacher of a high character, the work done by her pupils last Friday evening would be decisive in her favor. The work was mostly by small pupils. Only one, little Miss Marie Weamer, was absent, she being ill. Her place was taken by Aileen Garwood, who sang a sweet little song about "You can't play in our yard," etc. The names of the pupils who took part are: Blaine Otto, Allie Grube, Emma McClellan, Georgie Zimmerman, Ruth Baker, Vera Zollars, Edna Barnes, Rosamond McIntyre, Laura Mae and Pauline Rose, Estella Henning, of Waterloo,, Lila Hanna, and Nora Saxton. Miss Saxton, Miss Grube, Miss Henning and Mae and Pauline Rose are of the older members, the rest being all small pupils, some of them, like Rosamond McIntyre, being very young. It was very gratifying to their friends, as well as to Miss. Hoffman, to see how correctly and coolly they did their work, how well they sat at the instrument, immovable as older players would be. Both pupils and teachers should be complimented. And right here we wish to say, that a child should begin quite young in order to master this difficult yet desirable accomplishment. Let them train the fingers early and let the budding mind reach out in its younger hours for the enjoyment and employment of sweet music. We nearly forgot one of the neatest things done. Charlie Borst, one of the pupils, did not play, but read an essay instead. Charlie has quite a dramatic and elocutionary talent, and his composition, so true to boy life and experience, brought down the house in cheers.

Dangerous Accident.

M. E. Krontz, of Butler, was out at his farm on Monday and on his way home some part of the harness broke so that the wagon ran against the horse and Mr. Krontz fell forward. He was badly bruised about the head and arm and his shoulder dislocated. Two ladies, Mrs. Berry and Mrs. Bordner, saw him and helped him up, and David Maxwell coming along took him to town. Dr. Fanning was called and at last accounts he was getting along very well.

Died.

Minerva VanAuken, at the age of 8 years, 6 months and 11 days. She was the daughter of J. J. and Maggie VanAuken, and a bright, promising child. Her disease was diphtheria, which after a suffering of several days, terminated in death Wednesday morning, August 29, 1894. The interment was the same afternoon at 4 o'clock in Woodlawn cemetery, the brief services being performed by Rev. J. D. Brosy of the Lutheran church.

Died, at Ft. Wayne, August 23d, Edna Levon, only child of Selden and Nora Engle, aged 2 years and 4 months, of congestion of the brain, after an illness of only twelve hours. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. D. W. Sanders, of Columbia City. Little Edna was a sweet child, loved by all who knew her, and the home will be very lonely without her sweet presence.

Political News.

Last week wek we had on our inside pages not only a synopsis of the doings of the democratic state convention, but a fairly correct likeness of each candidate, with a brief account of each one. There was also a small portion of the platform adopted and of Gov. Matthews' great speech. In another column we had a brief statement of the new tariff bill containing a hundred or more of the leading articles, with the rate of tariff on each, and also the rate in the McKinley law. Our readers would do well to out out and keep this list as it will be interesting to study and well to keep posted on. This week we will publish the state platform in full on the eighth page of our home side. It is the work of Hon. R. C. Bell, of Fort Wayne, mainly and was read by him. Is was heartily cheered at every point he made. Next week we intend to publish Gov. Matthews' speech in full. It should be carefully studied as it is the democratic "keynote" of this campaign.

Our Local Courts.

George English, a "colored darkey" who has been working here for some time, got enthused at the Coxey dance south of the jail Friday evening and sailed into Frank Parrett. Parrett had no time to defend himself from this sudden and malicious assault before the darkey had him down, but before any damage could be done parties separated them and the darkey was ejected from the place. Next morning English was taken before his Honor, 'Squire Walborn and was fined $5 and costs. Not having the change in his pocket, and the 'Squire not finding it convenient to change a $1,000 bill, George was escorted by Marshal Baker, to quarters in the popular Hotel de Ralston.

Friday evening, two local sports, W.W. Brown and Al. Jenkins were stowing away Coxey cocktails in Refner's saloon when in some way they differed, neither one remembers how. But after they had been pulled apart, separated would be nearer the word, it was found that Jenkins had the bridge of his nose broken in and several bad cuts about his right eye. They were politely requested to pay their respects to 'Squire Ross, who listened to their tale of woe and then told Brown he must contribute $15 to the school fund. But the latter thought the figures high, and will appeal to the circuit court at the next term.

Thursday evening and Friday forenoon 'Squire Walborn wrestled, figuratively speaking, with a number of young men who had allowed the siren charms of a certain girl to lead their innocent little feet astray. At least it appeared so to the satisfaction of the 'Squire, who kindly let them down at $5 apiece. If the girl and the boys will agree not to transgress again, the COURIER will withhold their names. But next time ——!

Monday, Squire Walborn tackled a new sort of case that came up from Fairfield, Charles Rowe, had Orin Smith arrested for trespass. He asserted that Smith had gone into his, Rowe's, potato patch and dug and used some of his potatoes. The case was begun Monday, and concluded Tuesday. It seems the law will not punish a man unless the value of the thing taken is 10 cents. Smith admitted he dug up one hill, and thought it was worth not more than five cents. Rowe could not show that it was worth more, and so Smith was let off.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health, and when the natural desire for food is gone strength will soon fail. For loss of appetite, indigestion, sick headache, and other troubles of a dyspeptic nature, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the remedy which most certainly cures. It quickly tones the stomach and makes one "real hungry."

Voting.

In the year 119 B. C. the Lex Maria was adopted in Rome, and under its provisions narrow bridges were constructed leading to the polling booths, the object being to prevent voters from being interfered with by the partisans of the candidates. Enormous sums were spent by candidates for office, and many eminent men, including Cæsar and Mark Antony, were crippled financially owing to the extravagant sums they had to lay out in bribery and election expenses.

Another link is to be added to the submarine pulse of the world. The contract between the Portuguese Government and a British company for laying and maintaining a cable between Lisbon and the Azores, with power to extend the communication to England and America, was signed by the King and ratified two weeks ago, and the cable will be laid forthwith.

"Mud More Valuable Than Gold"

Is the truthful, startling title of a beautiful souvenir book just received describing the wonderful Magnetic Mineral Mud Baths in Warren County, near Attica, Ind. The Indiana Springs Company has spent $150,000 in developing and beautifying this noted resort, and it is to-day the only place in the United States where it is possible to get a Magnetic Mineral Mud and Lithia Water Bath and drink the Puritan Lithia Water. The Puritan Lithia Water is undoubtedly the strongest yet discovered.

The cure of rheumatism, kidney, skin and stomach troubles is quickly brought about by this combination of Nature's remedies, some of the cures wrought being marvelous. We certainly think it is to the interest of every sufferer to write and get a copy of this handsomely printed and beautifully illustrated souvenir, which will be mailed for the asking.

Physical Training of Girls.

The novel gift to a woman's college of a series of photographs of the babies of the graduates of the institution is supposed to show pretty conclusively that college women are as well fitted to assume the duties of motherhood as their sisters. There is no reason indeed, why this should not be so. Thanks to the modern system of physical training in vogue at our institutions for the higher education of women there is every reason to expect that the girls in attendance there will be at least the equal in bodily health of the young women who quit school at an earlier age.—Providence Journal.

BETTER TIMES NOW.

BUSINESS REVIVING THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

Views of Business Collected by a Great Paper Express the General Feeling that Industrial Activity Will Now Quicken—Beneficial Changes in the Tariff.

Dawn Is Breaking.

The New York Herald is, perhaps, the most important of all independent newspapers in this country. It is interesting to read what this non-partisan paper has to say of the new tariff bill and of the clique of Senators who blocked the passage of the Wilson bill and tried to prevent all tariff legislation. The Herald says:

The views of business men and others in various parts of the country which will be found in our news columns may be taken as voicing the general feeling that the dawn of better times has come. There is every reason to believe that business will now begin to revive, finances improve, markets become more active and industrial activity quicken. That the outlook will be hailed by the people, and especially by workingmen, goes without saying.

In addition to this, the law itself which has been enacted will afford the country no little relief from the burdens and blighting effects of McKinley protection. It does not embody the tariff revision which the people had a right to expect, and which they commanded in thundering tones at the polls in 1892. It does not embody the revision which the Democratic party was pledged to give, and for which its patriotic leaders struggled so gallantly. But, disappointing and unsatisfactory as it is, the new bill is a marked improvement on the McKinley law, and, moreover, its enactment puts an end to an agitation which was inflicting untold losses upon the country and pushing it the verge of panic.

For failure to carry the moderate, judicious revision which the country needed and the people commanded, the Democratic party cannot, in our opinion, justly be held responsible. The representatives of that party in the House not only passed such a bill and sent it to the Senate, thereby fulfilling the pledges of the party and their duty to the people, but they stood out for it nobly as long as there was any hope of saving it, and yielded only when they were forced to choose between the Senate bill and no legislation.

For the obstruction of revision through six long months, with its consequent business stagnation and destitution among the working classes; for the defeat of such a law as the people wanted and the country needed; for the failure of the democratic party to carry out its pledges to the full, the responsibility must fall upon the petty ring of Democratic Senators headed by Mr. Arthur P. Gorman. Had the Senate contained a larger Democratic majority these men could have been stripped of their power for mischief as recreants to their party and public enemies, and an honest tariff bill passed months ago in spite of their deviltry. But, unfortunately, the Democratic majority in the Senate was so narrow that the Gorman-Brice cabal had it in their power to "hold up" the entire American people as well as both branches of Congress, and as everybody knows they did not scruple to use that power with merciless disregard of consequences, either to their party or to the country.

Many Beneficial Changes.

While the new tariff bill is not ideal, it still has many good parts. In order of importance we mention:

1. Free wools and greatly reduced duties on woolen goods. In 1893 we paid $8,000,000 duty on $18,000,000 worth of imported wools. In the same year we paid $36,500,000 duty on $37,000,000 worth of goods imported. We probably paid ten times this amount to our home manufacturers because of the duties which permitted increased prices. As the new bill cuts duties on woolens in the middle the saving to the American people by this reduction will be about $20,000,000, or $15 per family. Two years from now the product of our woolen mills will be greater than ever and work will be steadier and wages higher in these mills than ever before. Workingmen and school children will be better clothed, and life will be happier and brighter to all because of cheaper and better woolen goods than have been worn by the present generation. Nor will the wool grower suffer. Prices of wool have declined steadily and rapidly under McKinleyism, until they have now reached a free trade basis and we are exporting wools to England. In fact, prices have advanced about 10 per cent. during the past two weeks.

2. Duties have been reduced about 40 per cent. in the iron schedule. While many of these reductions are more nominal than real, they yet compel the trusts to lower prices and to decrease the difference between the prices of their goods for export and for home consumption. About $7,000,000 will be saved by the reduction of the duty on tin plates alone. Probably $100,000,000 will be saved by the reductions in the metal schedule. The duty on iron ore has been reduced from 75 to 40 cents per ton. If the Senate should pass the bill making iron ore free, the benefits will be still greater.

3. All kinds of wood and lumber are made free, and the duty on furniture is reduced 25 per cent. The people are the gainers by several millions of dollars by this change.

4. Plows, harrows, harvesters, drills, mowers, horserakes, cultivators, threshing machines and cotton gins are made free. These are some of the articles that our manufacturers have been selling cheaper to foreigners than to Americans. This shameful business will now be stopped and our own farmers will be treated as well as their foreign competitors.

5. Salt, binding twine, bagging for cotton, Chinese matting, burlaps and cotton ties are some of the other important articles placed on the free list. The duties on burlaps and grain bags made of burlaps amounted in 1892 to over $2,500,000.

6. Duties have been reduced in all of the schedules except that of sugar, and it is not yet certain that the reductions in this schedule will not exceed those in any other schedule.

7. The income tax has come and come to stay, until superseded by a better direct tax. The plutocrats, who have shirked all other taxes, and who will shirk this one to the full extent of their elastic consciences, have tried in vain to prevent the introduction of this tax. They have been unable to stem the tide of public sentiment on this question.

All future tariff changes will be reductions. Let them come swift and fast.

A Difference in Surrenders.

The "ghoulish glee" of the Republicans over the House surrender to the Senate bandits is almost frantic. Their gibes were invited; their joy is natural. But will they intermit their cachinnation long enough to consider some contrasts with the Republican surrender in 1890?

The first difference is this: The Republican surrender was made in advance, eagerly and without a fight. In return for campaign contributions and other favors the protected interests were permitted to write their own schedules, the trusts to name their own bounties. The member of the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia who said, "We paid for this bill and are entitled to make it to suit ourselves," revealed exactly the process under which the McKinley law was framed. The sugar trust got its raw material free and a rate on refined sugar which has enabled it to make $30,000,000 in the past three years.

The second difference is this: The Democratic surrender is deplored and was long resisted by the great body of the party. It was rendered necessary by the corruption of a mere handful, not by the complaisance of the many. The Republican surrender, however, was general and willing. There was not virtue enough in the party in Congress even to make a show of resistance. Mr. Blaine had to smash his hat in the committee-room to secure any modification of the schemes of the grabbers. As Hamlet said to the skull of another jester, so say we to Tom Reed of this contrast: "Where be your gibes now?"

The Tariff Bill.

DEFECTIVE as the measure is, it is still better than no bill.—Buffalo Enquirer.

THE Senate bill is not a bad bill. It is not as good as it might have been made. But as compared with the McKinley law, it is commendable in every particular.—Kansas City Times.

IT is much to be preferred to the McKinley bill, and is a long step toward the practical reform of the tariff which the country has demanded and which the Democratic party has pledged itself to bring about.—Atlanta Constitution.

WHILE the senatorial compromises undeniably have marred an ideal, they yet have passed a practical measure of tariff reform more liberal in its reductions than any revision that was ever placed upon the statute books.—Boston Globe.

THE Senate bill is objectionable in many particulars, but in no particular is it so objectionable as the law it supersedes. It was better to take what could be had than to go back to the country empty-handed.—Philadelphia Record.

IT is undoubtedly true that the Senate bill, in spite of the subservience to monopoly which it carries on its face, is a distinct improvement on the McKinley act and a considerable step in the direction of tariff reform.—Detroit Free Press.

PHARISEEISM OF THE DAY.

THE PHARISEE—"Oh, Look at that Patch!"

SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

For fifteen or twenty minutes Monday the business of the Senate was suspended while the Sergeant-at-arms was sent in search of an actual quorum. The four supplemental tariff bills were all reported from the Finance Committee and sent to the calendar. Several bills were passed, among them the bill for the speedy prosecution of the United States against the estate of the late Leland Stanford. Less than fifty members were present when the house met at 12 o'clock. There were the usual indications that Congress was on the eve of an adjournment. A bill appropriating $9,000 for an additional force for the collection of internal revenue and $6,000 for carrying into effect the arbitration convention between the United States and Venezuela signed at Caracas in January last, was passed without objection. A bill was passed to incorporate the Association of American Florists.

The Senate seems to have nothing to do. There was not a quorum present when the House began its session Tuesday, but members sought to take up several measures by unanimous consent. Senate bill allowing an additional $54,000 for the public building at Little Rock, Ark., and another authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to allot rooms in the Government building at Meridian, Miss., for holding court, were passed; also a resolution to print 20,000 copies of the tariff bill; also, on motion of Mr. Haugen, a bill to grant to the Duluth and Winnipeg Railroad Company a right of way over the Chippewa and White Earth Indian reservations. At 1:25 o'clock the House adjourned until Thursday.

There were just twenty-one Senators present Wednesday when the Vice President called the Senate to order. The deficiency bill was received from the House immediately after the Chaplain's invocation, and having been signed by the Speaker the Vice President immediately attached his signature. The absence of a quorum was immediately pointed out by Senator Aldrich and only thirty-three Senators answered the rollcall—eleven less than a quorum. There was a long delay while the list of absentees was being made up for the sergeant-at-arms. One by one they reported, Senator Blanchard (Dem.), of Louisiana, making the thirty-seventh. The Senate at 1:15 p. m. went into executive session. At 1:40 p. m. the Senate adjourned.

The Senate could muster no quorum, Thursday and adjourned without action. Representative Hudson, Populist, of Kansas, has introduced in the House a resolution for the appointment of three pension commissioners instead of one. One would represent each political party, including the Populists; they would hold office for six year, and in disputed cases a majority of the board would decide. Mr. Hudson also introduced a bill for the coinage of all silver from American mines into standard silver dollars.

Friday saw the last of all the legislative business of the Senate. Senators were then leaving in all directions. The following bills were passed: House bill to provide for the collection of internal revenue; to carry into effect the provisions of the convention between the United States and Venezuela relative to the arbitration and settlement of the claim of the Venezuela Steamship Company; fixing the salary of the United States Commissioner in the Venezuelan claim arbitration at $5,000, and Senate bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to correct errors where double allotments of land have been erroneously made to an Indian, and to correct errors in patents; authorizing the construction of bridges across the Missouri River at Dewitt, Mo., across the Osage River in Missouri. The House had no quorum. Both houses meet again Monday.

His Apology Was Accepted.

Not a bad story is told of two bellicose members of the Town Council of a certain town, not to be too particular, that has for some time gained a reputation for its stormy debates. During a recent meeting the two members, who are old antagonists, became involved in an animated discussion about some trumpery matter, and things came to a climax when one of the disputants gave the other the lie direct. The other made a plunge for him, and as the pair got hold of one another, his antagonist exclaimed:

"I reiterate that you are a liar."

"Oh, if that is the case," said the other, whose knowledge of the English language is not the best, "I accept the apology. If a man says that he reiterates, that's all that any gentleman can ask," and he forthwith relaxed his hold of his opponent.

A Queer Temperance Society.

A very curious temperance society exists in the Siberian village of Ashlyka. Every year, in September, the members meet in the church and make a solemn promise to abstain from wine and spirits for a whole year. They also sign an agreement that any person breaking the pledge shall pay a fine of 25 rubles to the church, and submit to be spat upon by his more continent fellows. The most peculiar feature of the whole business, however, is that the members on the one day of the year when the pledge expires allow themselves wine and brandy during the few hours which intervene before the pledge for the ensuing year is made.

Injun Too Big for His Cell.

There is trouble on the Umatilla Indian Reservation because the cells in the calaboose are too small. The other day Swichlick, one of the tallest of the government wards on the reservation, was arrested, and he could not enter the door of the guardhouse erect, and in the morning was found curled up like a spiral spring because the cell was not long enough for him to lie straight in. The Indian is seven feet tall, and the Indian police think the government ought to build a new jail there.—Portland Oregonian.

A Tom-Boy Princess.

The Princess Maud of Wales is said to be known in her family circle almost exclusively as "Harry," because she is so playful and sportsmanlike. But she is also an excellent cook and gardener.

Broke the Rules.

"Mr. Faber," said the news editor to the night local man, "I believe you wrote the story of a presentation of a cane to Ald. Fluents last evening?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, sir, we shall have to dispense with your services hereafter."

"Why, wasn't the piece well written and did it not state all the facts and state them correctly?"

"Very true. But it has always been the custom in this office to head an item of that kind 'Caned!' That you failed of doing. I could overlook your unfortunate mistake were it not that when Sheriff Lockem had a watch given to him week before last you violated another established custom by failing to put the captian 'Watched' over the item. It is the aim of this paper to preserve the landmarks. That is all. I trust you will find another place that will suit you."—Boston Transcript.

A Maine Fish Story.

"Here," said the scientist, wiping his knife on his scaly apron, "is a pickerel that was taken from the water three weeks ago, on one of the coldest days that we have had this winter. It was taken from the hook and thrown upon the ice. Its blood was almost as cold as the ice and consequently, when dragged into the bitter cold air, it flopped just once and was frozen as stiff as a poker. In that condition it has remained ever since."

With a dexterous motion he chopped off the head, fins and tail of the fish, and with one slash of the knife along its side, it was ready for the frying pan. When laid on a stove near by it commenced to thaw out, and as the frost left it, it began to flop and tumble about as if just taken from the water. Finally it fell off the stove on the floor and, to all appearances, died.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Natural Sequence.

New Zealand has not only granted woman-suffrage in parliamentary elections, but one of its leading statesmen—the Grand Old Man of that colony—has actually proposed the establishment of a legislative council consisting exclusively of women.

The following amusing incident, bearing upon the growing political rights and power of New Zealand ladies, and their corresponding duties, occurred the other day in its capital city.

During a performance in the Opera House, Wellington, some ladies who were seated in the stalls had on very large and high hats. A voice from the pit was heard to exclaim, "Now you've got the franchise you ought to take your hats off."

This admonition to the gentle voters caused an explosion of laughter in all parts of the theater.

A Little Musician.

Only 5½ years old, Edna Grace Hain, with her tiny fingers can bring thirty different airs out of a piano. She has learned them all in the last seven months. If a key invisible to her be struck she can instantly sound the corresponding key of another piano. Let the entire keyboard be covered with muslin or cloth, not too heavy to muffle, and she still makes good music by striking keys which she cannot see. Her first stroke on the unseen ivory may be a mistake, but in a moment she hits the right key and then proceeds unerringly. She cannot read music or words, but thoroughly understands the scale, quickly distinguishes half-notes, and keeps good time. If she hears a strange air two or three times she can make her piano reproduce it.—Philadelphia Record.

Dog's Wonderful Smell.

It has often been proved that dogs are able to track their masters through crowded streets where it would be impossible to attribute their accuracy to anything except the sense of smell alone. A naturalist once made some interesting experiments as to this power as exhibited in his own dog. In these tests the naturalist found that his dumb friend could follow in the tracks of his master, though he was far out of sight, and that, too, after no less than eleven persons had followed, stepping exactly in the tracks made by his master, it being the deliberate intention to confuse the senses of the dog is possible. Further experiments proved that the animal tracked the boots instead of the man, for when the naturalist put on new footgear the dog failed entirely.

Steam from Slag.

The enormous amount of heat habitually wasted in cooling molten slag has incited an Australian to work out a scheme for generating steam by this means. The boiler or receptacle for the water has running through it from top to bottom funnel-shaped pipes, something after the style of a candle-mold. The molten slag is poured into these receptacles and communicates its heat to the water. When the slag becomes solid a door at the bottom of each receptacle is opened, the slag is knocked out, and the whole filled again. The apparatus has been tried and 100 pounds pressure of steam raised. If the ideas of the inventor be thoroughly carried out the value of the process will be enormous.

Tobacco Culture.

Tobacco culture is the subject of a recent report of the Florida station. The bulletin contains complete directions, beginning with the preparation of the seed bed, the application of fertilizers, time and manner of sowing the seed, the kind and quality required, the enemies of the tobacco plant, and the remedies to be applied, etc. The aim of the bulletin is to encourage the growing of tobacco crops in Florida by supplying the necessary information to the inexperienced grower. A limited supply of seed will also be sent to each applicant.

Heroines of Fiction.

The Philadelphia Ledger has discovered that of Scott's heroines sixteen are under 20 years of age, three over 20, and only one, Amy Robsart, of "uncertain age." To this the Ledger adds: "But the conspicuous character of the modern novel is a woman, not a girl, who has lived and experienced much, and not, infrequently is married before the story introduces her as its central figure."

Polishing.

An electric shoe-polishing machine is in operation in Brooklyn. Two holes in a box are made to receive the patron's feet; the blacking is dropped automatically on the leather, and then the swish of oval brushes is heard. In a minute and a half both boots are simultaneously polished.

New Method of Making Car Wheels.

An unusual method of making wheels for cars has recently been brought before railroad men. Wherever it is desired to have reliable wheels steel tires are almost universally used, with paper, wrought or cast iron centers. Cast iron centers are the cheapest form of any as regards first cost, but it is rather difficult to form a good connection between the tire and the center. In the new method of manufacture a stock of tires is made up complete. The molds for the center of the wheel are then cut up, leaving a space for placing the tire in the mold so as to form a part of it. The mold is next opened and the tire, heated to a red heat, is placed in position. The mold is then closed and the molten metal for the center poured in. The result is said to be a practically perfect union of the steel and cast iron, forming a solid wheel which has the advantage of a durable steel rim and a cheap body.

Avoiding Pain and Peril.

Defensive measures against the foe are ever adopted by a wise commander. You can be commander of the situation and strike a decisive blow at the start at that dangerous and relentless enemy, rheumatism, if attacked by it, by resorting in time to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks permanently the progress of a malady, among the most obstinate, painful and possibly dangerous, against which medical skill and the resources of materia medica are arrayed. No evidence is more conclusive and convincing than that which proves that the Bitters neutralizes the rheumatic poison and checks its farther development in the system. For malarial and kidney trouble, dyspepsia, want of vitality, nervousness, liver complaint and constipation, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the leading remedy.

A Silly Canary.

A pet canary bird in Fair Haven, Washington, has always had an aversion to his natural dress, and has industriously pulled out every feather he could reach. The result is he has now a smooth, shiny skin, which looks like polished parchment, two or three lonely tail feathers and a trifle of plumage on the head and neck. In summer he is all right, but the cold of winter bothers him. As soon as frost comes he is clad in a warm flannel jacket, which he admires immensely. At night he lies down on a bed of cotton batting, submits quietly to be covered up, and sleeps there contentedly till morning.

A New Arrangement.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 20.—The new traffic arrangement between the Great Northern and Oregon Railway and Navigation Co. is one of the most important of the year. It gives the Great Northern the most direct entrance of any road into Portland and to Willamette Valley points. It also becomes the short line into the Palouse and Walla Walla districts of Washington, the Cœur d'Alene, Moscow, and Snake River districts of Idaho.

A Collapsing Hat.

A New York milliner's recent invention will find a large place waiting for it in the public heart. The new fad is a collapsing hat for ladies, to be worn at theaters and other places of public amusement. By simply pulling ing a string the wearer can fold the hat into an almost invisible shape.

The Farmer's Bank.

His best bank is a fine meadow, a big potato patch, a forty in World's Fair winter wheat, and twenty acres in monster rye. The best meadow is made by sewing Salzer's extra grass mixtures this fall; it yields from 3 to 5 tons magnificent hay per acre. The Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., who are the largest farm and vegetable seed growers in the World—will send you a package of new wheat and rye, and catalogue, upon receipt of 4 cents postage. C

BURNING, itching, scaly, crusty Skin Diseases, such as defy the ordinary blood medicines, are cured completely by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For Scrofula in all its various forms, the worst Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, great eating Ulcers, and every blood-taint and disorder, this is a direct remedy.

It thoroughly purifies and enriches your blood.

Alexander, N. C.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—Your "Golden Medical Discovery" has proved a blessing to me. It was recommended to me by Rev. P. A. Kuykendall. I have been a sufferer with old sores on my legs for four years. I used three bottles of it, and my legs are sound and well and my health is better than it has been for some time. I had the best doctors of this country treat my case and they failed to effect a cure.

Yours respectfully,

J. N. Kuykendall

Mrs. Winslow's SOOTHING SYRUP for Children teething; softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25 cents a bottle.

A • Ripans • Tabule.

Do I know what it is?
Why, to be sure!
Mamma uses them for dyspepsia.
Papa swallows one when he thinks he has eaten a little too much.

Mamma says that
My brother Jack
Always wants one
When he comes home very late at night.

Grandpapa
Takes them for something
That he calls constipation.
He always takes two, and
He says that
They are very good indeed.
They don't taste good, though,
But they can be swallowed without tasting.

Mamma gives the baby
A quarter of one
—for wind on its stomach.

Aunt Jane,
She is an old maid, you know,
Takes them for headache.
She dissolves hers in water
And drinks it.
You just ought to see the Face she makes up:
—but it cures her headache.

I put one under my tongue;
Then I fill my mouth just full of water,
And take one big swallow,
And it is gone
—always.

What do I take them for?
Do you see how red
My cheeks are?
Well! That is what
I take them for,
mamma says.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

PARTY'S PLATFORM.

PRINCIPLES UNDER WHICH DEMOCRACY IS TO WIN ITS VICTORY.

Declarations by the Indiana State Convention on Topics of Engrossing Interest to the People of the Commonwealth—All Issues Clearly Defined.

The Democratic party of Indiana takes just pride in the strength of the record it has made in the legislative and executive departments of this commonwealth by the enactment and enforcement of wise and beneficent laws in the interest of the people and in the fulfillment of its pledges.

State Issues.

It passed the mechanics' lien laws and the law giving laborers a lien upon the product of their labor for wages and materials furnished; the law protecting labor organizations; the law providing for the safety of miners and the proper ventilation of mines; constituting eight hours a day's labor in public employment; prohibiting the blacklisting of employes; prohibiting "pluck me" stores; the employes' liability law; forbidding the employment and importation of Pinkerton detectives; against the importation of alien or foreign labor; it enacted the school book law, saving large sums to the people, breaking down an oppressive monopoly and placing the instruments of education within the reach of the poorest and humblest citizens; it enacted our existing laws purifying the elections, giving an untrammeled ballot to the voter, and by the Australian ballot successfully preventing fraud and the intimidation of employes and others at the polls; it framed and passed our present tax law, thus adding many millions of property to our tax duplicates; it passed the present fee and salary law; it enacted the Barrett improvement law, which has proven a blessing wherever used; it also passed the state board of charities law, which has insured honest, humane and intelligent administration of our public institutions.

All this has been accomplished, almost in every instance, in spite of the determined objection and opposition of the Republican party. By this course of legislation, in fulfillment of pledges to the people, Indiana has been placed at the forefront of all the states in the matter of this and kindred reform legislation, and we pledge ourselves to the maintenance and enforcement of these measures, while the Republican party stands pledged, at the first opportunity, to destroy, either by repeal or amendment, the most important of these wise laws.

The Tax Law.

We congratulate the people of Indiana upon the upholding of the tax law of 1891, under which more than $100,000,000 of corporate property has been added to the tax duplicate. And we especially commend the action of the state officers in charge in prosecuting and enforcing to a successful conclusion the provisions of said law.

Against Protection.

We reaffirm our opposition to the vicious system of class legislation, miscalled protection, and pledge ourselves to continue the battle against it until every species of extortion and robbery fostered by the McKinley act shall be obliterated from our revenue system and the people enjoy all the blessings of commercial liberty. The protective system has built up the great monopolies and trusts which control absolutely so many industries and have done so much to debauch the politics of the country and corrupt the legislative department of the government. We denounce tariff protection of every kind as a fraud and a robbery of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of the few. We maintain that no tariff taxes should be levied except for the purposes of revenue only and that such taxes should be limited to the necessities of the government, when honestly and economically administered.

We denounce the McKinley tariff law enacted by the Fifty-first congress as the culminating atrocity of class legislation. We approve the efforts of President Cleveland and his administration and of the Democratic house of representatives and of the large majority of the Democratic senators, and particularly our distinguished senators from Indiana, Hon. Daniel W. Voorhees and Hon. David Turpie, and our entire Democratic delegation in congress, to redeem the pledges made to the country by the last Democratic national convention, and to execute the will of the American people as expressed so emphatically at the ballot box in November, 1892. We condemn the Republican party for its persistent efforts to prevent the execution of this unmistakably popular verdict, and we especially condemn a small coterie of senators who, masquerading as Democrats, by threats to defeat all tariff legislation have temporarily prevented the Democratic party from carrying out all of its pledges to the people for tariff reform as announced in the Democratic national platform of 1892.

We congratulate the Democratic party and the country upon the fact that, notwithstanding the open opposition of the Republican party and the conduct of a few pretended Democrats, a substantial measure of reform has been enacted; that many important raw materials of our industries have been placed on the free list; that material reduction has been made in the duties on iron ore and coal and that the tariff tax on nearly all classes of manufactured goods, including woolens, and on the necessities of daily life has been very largely reduced.

We approve the action of the house of representatives in following the enactment of this law with the passage of separate acts placing sugar, coal, iron ore and barbed wire on the free list, and we demand that the senate shall concur in these righteous measures at the earliest possible moment. We especially indorse the income tax as a wise and equitable measure designed to place a fair share of the burdens of the government upon the property of the country, for the benefit of which the expenses of the government are so largely incurred.

Taxing Greenbacks.

We indorse the law passed by a Democratic congress authorizing the taxation of greenbacks as other money is taxed as a great measure of reform, and we take pride in the fact that the demand for such reform was first formulated by the Democracy of Indiana, and that it is due to the persistent and intelligent efforts of a Democratic representative from Indiana that this reform has been embodied into law. We favor the prompt enactment of a law by our next legislature for the taxation of that class of money.

We also most heartily indorse the action of the Democratic congress in repealing the odious election law.

Election of Senators.

We are in favor of a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States senators by a direct vote of the people. We are also in favor of such constitutional and other changes as may be necessary in order that congress may assemble as soon after its election as practicable, and to the end that the will of the people, as expressed at the polls, may receive prompt and full legislative expression.

A. P. A. Denounced.

We believe and declare that the policy and principles of what is called the American Protective association are illiberal, unwise, unpatriotic, undemocratic and unamerican. In the spirit of that religious freedom which characterizes our constitutions and laws, and the spirit of that wise toleration and generous statesmanship which seeks to accord to all the rights and privileges of American citizenship, we call upon every man to do battle against such an organization.

Labor.

The Democratic party of Indiana is, as it always has been, the friend to the laboring man, of whom its membership is largely composed. It is in hearty sympathy with every lawful effort to secure for those who earn their livelihood by their daily toil full protection in all their rights as American citizens, to better the condition of their lives, to secure for them full and fair compensation for their labor and to afford them every possible opportunity for moral, social and material advancement. We condemn the efforts that have been made, whether by the professed friends or the avowed enemies of our wage workers, to identify their cause with the infamous conspiracies of lawlessness and anarchy which threatens the very foundations of social order and civilization. We are opposed to every manifestation of violence and mob spirit and stand squarely for the maintenance of law and order upon all occasions and under all circumstances.

Immigration.

We favor the enactment and enforcement of such laws regulating immigration from other countries as shall exclude the pauper and vicious classes, who are unfitted to become American citizens and whose presence in this country will furnish a standing menace to the order and prosperity of our land.

The Republican Panic.

We denounce the unprincipled and cowardly effort of the Republican party to escape the responsibility for the existing depressed condition of the business affairs of the country. This condition is the natural, logical and inevitable result of the infamously corrupt system of taxation known as McKinleyism, combined with vicious financial legislation and the profligated extravagance of the Republican party.

Arbitration.

We favor the establishment of a tribunal of arbitration in which there may be secured a peaceful settlement of all disputes between employers and employes.

Sumptuary Laws.

The Democratic party is, as it ever has been, opposed to all sumptuary laws as contrary to the principles of free government, and favor the largest individual liberty of the citizens consonant with good government.

The Silver Question.

We indorse the repeal of the purchasing clause of that cowardly Republican makeshift, known as the Sherman silver act of 1890. We reaffirm our belief that both gold and silver should be used as the standard money of the country, and that both should be coined without discriminating against either metal, and without charge for mintage. We believe it absolutely necessary to the welfare and prosperity of the great producing masses that silver should be restored to the place it occupied in the currency systems of the world a quarter of a century ago, and we hail with delight the many signs of a revolution in public opinion in the great commercial nations in favor of a restoration of the bimetallic system. We pledge our hearty efforts to secure the adoption of every measure for the complete restoration of silver to its proper place in our monetary system, either through international agreement or by such safeguards of legislation as shall insure the maintenance of the parity of the two metals, and equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in payment of debt, and we demand that all paper currency shall be kept at par and redeemable in such coin.

Hawaii.

We declare that the present national administration has acted wisely and honorably in permitting the people of Hawaii, unawed by our naval or military forces, to manage their own domestic concerns and to place their country in the family of republics.

Cleveland and Matthews.

We heartily indorse the able, fearless and patriotic administration of Grover Cleveland, and especially his course in maintaining law and order.

We heartily indorse the wise and patriotic administration of Governor Matthews, whose conduct as a public servant has called forth the commendation of the people of every state in the Union and placed our state in the foremost rank for good government, and cordially commend the action and conduct of our several state officers.

Concerning Pensions.

We remember with gratitude the patriotic services of the soldiers and sailors of the late war, and recognize the fact that, after the lapse of 30 years, by reason of the hardships, privations and exposures of army life, many are passing away and others becoming more helpless. We therefore demand that congress, in the matter of pensions, shall not only deal generously, but bountifully with these aged veterans.

We also reiterate the declaration of our convention in 1892 that the state should provide by liberal appropriation for the support of a home where our disabled veterans, with their wives, may be supported without sending them to almshouses.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure, and the most dreaded habitual sick headache yields to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cure by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try it once. Large bottles only fifty cents at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. 2

Obituary.

Golda May, daughter of Edward and Esther Smith, was born June 1, 1893, and departed this life Aug. 19, 1894, aged 1 year 2 months and 19 days. She leaves to mourn her early death a father, mother and brother. Little Golda was a patient sufferer for a long time. Its strength was soon exhausted and the home it cheered with its presence is now full of sadness. No one but those who have pressed such rose buds of promise to their lips can know what it means to have death cross their hopes. Nothing is so innocent and beautiful as a child and nothing gets so close to the human heart.

Precious little one we must now say a long last and final farewell, hoping some bright morning to meet thee in the home of the blest.

Lovely babe, how brief thy stay!
Short and hasty was thy day.
Ending soon thy journey here,
Pain and grief no more to hear.

Drummond's Lightning.

Remedy did great work for H. J. Lewis, of Anderson's Mill's, S. C. He had sciatic rheumatism in the left hip and leg, and for six weeks was not able to sit up or walk a step, and suffered untold agonies. After using Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism for two weeks, he wrote that he could walk and that the pain was gone. If you suffer from rheumatism and wish to be cured, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and the two large bottles will be sent to your expess address. Agents wanted. 36

Obituary.

Russel Karl, son of Henry and Ida Kauffman, now deceased, was born Aug. 7, 1892, and departed this life Aug. 24, 1894, aged two years and 17 days.

Little Russel Karl was the joy of a father's heart, and from thee it is hard to part. With a bleeding heart and trembling lips we say good bye for a season, for soon we too shall come and lay ourselves down by thy side.

Russel, thou art gone before us
Where thy lovely spirit has flown.
Tears are wiped away forever
And all sorrows is unknown.

Jesus takes these little lambs, said he,
And lays them in his gentle breast.
Protection they shall find in him;
In him they are ever blest.

First Annual Century Run

Will be made on Friday, Sept. 7, 1894, under the direction of R. W. Cobb, leaving Auburn at 4 a. m., solar time. The course will be over the new telephone road to Ft. Wayne, via Roanoke to Huntington and return. Riders from Angola, Kendallville, Butler and Garrett are invited to join in the run. Rules: Actual period of time is 16 hours. No century will be allowed which is ridden upon a course less than twenty miles in length. The entire distance must be covered awheel or afoot. No travelling by train will be allowed. A time line of twelve hours upon this run, which will be made on schedule time and will be published in due time. All who finish within the limit will become members of the Century Road Club of Northern Indiana, and receive badge or medals without further initiation.

Best for Flux.

Mr. Thomas Bate, editor of the Graphic, Texarkana, Arkansas, has found what he believes to be the best remedy in existence for the flux. His experience is well worth remembering. He says: "Last summer I had a very severe attack of flux. I tried almost every known remedy, none giving relief. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was recommended to me. I purchased a bottle and received almost immediate relief. I continued to use the medicine and was entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending this remedy to any person suffering with such a disease, as in my opinion it is the best medicine in existence." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

Cured the Children.

The success of Mrs. Annie M. Beam, of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, in the treatment of Diarrhœa in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many mothers. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnstown, Pa., after the great flood, on account of my husband being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the diarrhœa very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I knew of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be excelled and cheerfully recommend it." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 35

Indiana Pearls.

All who saw the lovely Wisconsin pearls at the World's fair last year, will be interested in learning that we have them in our own state. A late copy of the Delphi Times says:

For a number of years it has been known that mussel-shell pearls of a small variety existed in the Wabash river, but of such a diminutive size that they were generally accepted as worthless. Some time ago Mr. Blair, of Washington, D. C., came to this section for the purpose of dredging the river, and with a small boat and dredging outfit he started from Peru to Lafayette, a distance of fifty-six miles. During his trip, which occupied three months of Mr. Blair's time, he made a collection of pearls ranging in value from $18 to $20. He also secured a number of smaller ones, which were the pure pearls, the value of all being many hundred dollars. Pearl hunting is very hard, as it is necessary to stand in the water for hours at a time, and only an experienced man is able to do this. Mr. Blair has spent the best part of his life hunting pearls in the various pearl countries in the world, but he says the Wabash contains better pearls than any stream he has ever worked. He will make another trip in a few weeks.

Vastness of Numbers.

Numbers beyond certain limits cease to convey any meaning to the human mind, however well developed it be and apt to grasp the great and the vast. Take the number expressed by the word "million," the sound of which is familiar enough to most of us in a country that, more than any other, abounds in millionaires, but the reality of which in the shape of money is somewhat vague and to the majority of human beings awe inspiring. If a man were to count one million $1 bills it would take him eight days to accomplish this task, devoting eighteen hours of uninterrupted daily work to it and employing the other six for eating his meals and for taking the necessary nocturnal rest.

Still, great as the number of one million really is, we have a more or less adequate conception of it and its multiples to a certain extent. Even one billion—that is, a thousand millions—has within this century assumed a familiar sound, though but few persons are capable of realizing its magnitude. With a billion, number becomes somewhat vague and approaches what in mathematical parlance is called the "indefinitely great." It is easy enough to pronounce the word, not being very long and easy to spell, but its actual magnitude begins to bewilder the mind. If we were to express the distance of the nearest fixed star in that unit by which we are wont to measure terrestrial distance—the mile—the number would convey no meaning to our minds and would leave imagination itself powerless.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shephard, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by Robbins & McCord 3

Costly Metals.

The most costly of all metals, save only gallium, which is worth $3,000 an ounce, is germanium, which is quoted at $1,125 an ounce. Rhodium is worth $112.50 an ounce; ruthenium, $90 an ounce; iridium, $37 50 an ounce; osmium, $26 an ounce, and palladium, $24 an ounce. The last is about equal in value to gold. These metals are of no great commercial importance.

IN THE SWIM.

Fort Wayne Don't Have to Take a Back Seat in the World's Races.

SEVERAL cities of his country, and several cities over the world have been made famous by the phenominal speed of some fast flying horse. Their tracks were at once advertised to the world as the best in the world, and ever after that track was a favorite for famous horses. And the famous horses themselves were heralded to the uttermost parts of the earth, as the earth's fastest and best. They also became the earth's most valuable horse flesh. In this way, town, track and horse stood at the head of the list till some fortunate town, and some plucky horse won the honors from them and held them till another fortunate combination took them in turn. One of the latest of these towns and tracks have been Terre Haute and its track. Now, their glory has waned before the splendor of the records made last week at Ft. Wayne. Nancy Hanks, Flying Jib and Mascot are now, at best only in second place, for on Friday, Aug. 31, Robert J., the pacer, made his mile in 2:03¾, beating Nancy Hanks' time by ¼ of a second. Up to that time she had been at the head of the world's pacers. The trotting mare Alix made her mile again that day in 2:5¼; Fantasy, in 2:07. So Ft. Wayne's track has the highest record in the world for pacers, and stands, all in all, up even with the world's best. She is in the swim.

Obituary.

Charley C. Ober was born in Burbank, Wayne county, O., July 15, 1866, and died at the home of his mother in Newville, Ind., August 24, 1894, aged 28 years, 1 month and 9 days.

Sept. 22, 1892, he was married to Miss Mattie Reader. To this union was born one child, a son, who, with his mother, is left to battle with the stern realities of life without the aid of father and husband. Charley was a genial, good hearted fellow and had many friends who will be pained and surprised to hear of his early departure from this life. Like many of his fellow men, he was acquainted with the sorrows that come to the poor man, yet he ever sought to make home pleasant, and as far as possible to care for his little family, a duty made pleasant by the love he had for them. Thus ends the life of another of our fellows. May the Lord comfort the bereft family. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. S. P. Klotz, assisted by Rev. D.C. Sheldon, of Newville, Ind.

THE WHEEL OF THE FUTURE.

THE WHEEL THAT IS AND IS TO BE.

The League Wheel "Chainless."

People who ride the Chainless and know it to be far superior to the Chain and Sprocket Wheel, LAUGH AT THE IDEA of a person buying anything short of a League Chainless. One can no longer expect to be strictly up to and ahead of date who does not ride this machine. This voices the sentiment of thousands of old chain wheel riders, who will have nothing but the best thing going.

STAID HOME ALL DAY.

That is the Way the Average Auburnite Put in His Time Last Sunday.

READER, did you ever realize what it is to sit down and stay at home all day Sunday? To sit with one foot thrown over one knee for an hour or two, then change and throw the other foot over the other knee as this fellow is doing? It makes a man tired to think of it. Yet that is about what we all did last Sunday. The board of health did it with their little proclamation. And the board did the proper thing. Diphtheria had got started in town, and it is a terrible disease. It may not be as easily taken as small pox, but when you do get it, it is much more dangerous. So the authorities put heads together and decided that the citizens of the incorporated town of Auburn should not go abroad any more than was necessary, and should not congregate in bodies. In other words, should hold no meetings of any sort. So, notices were sent to the pastors of the various churches to withdraw all appointments for regular services, including Sunday schools, Christian Endeavors, Epworth Leagues, class meetings, etc. This order was also posted in the postoffice. It fell like a wet blanket on the town. Now, don't understand us to say that every man, woman and child in Auburn was disappointed, for we are sorry to record the fact that many, especially of the men, and more pointedly, of the young men, do not attend very regularly at any sort of service. To these it made little difference. They could wear their bicycle rigs and ride about as usual. But there are large numbers of our people who have attended divine worship twice a day for years. And then, the little folks! To go to Sunday school looking neat and sweet is their highest ambition—their dearest pleasure. There was many a sad little face, and many little pouts and "Oh, dears!" but it had to be done. Sunday morning came in warm and still and the lazy ones that wait for the early church bells to wake them, waited in vain—then turned over and slept again. For like Robinson Crusoe's island

> The sound of the church-going bell,
> These valleys and rocks heard;
> Never sighed at the sound of a knell,
> Nor smiled when the Sabbath appeared.

But the bright sunshine would keep struggling in through the curtains and now and then a swift wheeled cycler went whizzing by. And one family after another wakened and entered on the queer, new sort of Sunday. In many an Auburn home there was a little Sunday school to satisfy the little ones. Then came the books and papers, and even the playthings. And so the unusual day droned along. And the morning and the evening were the seventh day," or the first, just as you choose. But it served its purpose, this enforced staying at home. It impressed people, as nothing else would, of the serious character of the evil that threatened us. And so we all began to think about obeying the order left Saturday at every residence. Monday the odd places were cleaned up. Foul places, where found, were disinfected, and the sanitary condition of the town looked after. Everyone took the matter into mind and did what he thought best. But it is an invention of the enemy, that report that Auburn's citizens are all packed away in boxes, dry-salted with asofeteda. But what is true, and what is better, is that everyone is ready for the plague, and it will have a poor show here. If a child gets a sore throat he is at once cared for, whether he has diphtheria or merely a cold. No more deaths have occurred since the two in J. J. VanAuken's family. On Friday, little George Baxter, son of Mr. aun Mrs. John W. Baxter, was attacked with diphtheria, and at once he was separated from others and placed under the doctor's care. At about the same time a few others were reported, but it proved to be something else.

DeKalb W. C. T. U.

The annual convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the Baptist church in Auburn, Wednesday, Sept. 26. Good speakers and singers will be present to assist, Mrs. Ehlers and Mrs. W. B. Campbell of this place, will deliver addresses. Among the speakers are Laura Keeran, Mrs. Henry, Mrs. McCord, Mrs. Lewis, of Auburn, Mrs. Kagey, Mrs. Conrad and Mrs. Stafford, of St. Joe, Mrs. Bogert and Mrs. Wright, of Garrett, and Mrs. Shoner, of Waterloo, and Mrs. Cuppy will sing

GETTING BETTER.

This is the Cheerful Word the Doctors Give You When You Ask About the Diphtheria Patients.

FEELING much better, thank you, is what the little sick ones all tell you, as in a spirit of friendly interest you call at what was a week ago the "sick room." Some of them are entirely recovered, and about half of the cases that were reported as diphtheria turn out to be some other form of sore throat, like tonsilitis and other similar troubles, that are not particularly dangerous or hard to handle. In fact, many of the wild stories that got out, had no foundation whatever, and we do not see how even the imagination could have conjured up some of the yarns that were spun over the county. One man came in town Monday and expected to find everyone locked in their houses. A report got out somewhere south of here that twenty-seven children were locked up in a pest house to the great distress of their parents. It even went so far as to say that one man had offered the board of health $5 if his boy could be taken "out of soak." Our own citizens were not free from the weakness of starting wild rumors. If a healthy little boy or girl got a touch of the most ordinary sore throat or had a little fever, or felt cross and fretful, some of the neighbors would surmise it was the fatal disease, and spread the story of another case.

Fires in Minnesota.

Rumors of terrible fires, with loss of life, began coming in Sunday and the morning dailies of Monday showed them only too true. Forest fires have been raging more or less for some time in the northwestern parts of Wisconsin and the northeastern counties of Minnesota. In this extremely dry weather, a fire once started in a pine forest cannot be stopped by any human means. Only a rain will check it. About 2 p. m. Saturday, the southbound train from Duluth over the St. Paul and Duluth road, on reaching the village of Mission Creek, found it burning, and saw it would not be safe to proceed, as the woods, fields, bridges and ties were on fire So they started to back up to the last town—Hinckley. On reaching that place, they found the fire ahead or them, and while standing there a minute, it caught the train, and they had to pull out. Many Hinckley people, frightened out of their wits and driven from burning homes, had boarded the train, and this added to the trouble. Soon, the flames spread from one car to another, and the scorched and frightened people began to jump from the train, and many of those who escaped alive, plunged into such streams as they could reach. When the train had got back to Skunk Lake, it could go no further. The scorched and frightened passengers jumped into the lake, and trainmen found water to save the burning coaches. There is great loss of life at all the villages destroyed. Many persons were so frightened at the destruction by the flames, that they ran into the burning woods and perished. After the fire had abated, bodies were found all through woods and fields, as well as in town. No such wholesale destruction by fire has ever been known in this country. Among the towns injured or destroyed, are, Hinckley, Sandstone, Sandstone Junction, Pokegama, Skunk Lake, Barronett, Granite City, and several others, besides the destruction brought on the surrounding country. The history of the disaster to one town is the history of all, and the same may be said of the villages destroyed on the Wisconsin side. It is feared that nearly 500 lives have been lost.

Died.

August 30, 1894, Jay J. VanAuken, Jr., at the age of 11 years, 7 monts and 27 days. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. VanAuken, and died of the same dread disease, diphtheria, as his little sister Minerva, whose death we noted last week. Their deaths coming but about twenty-four hours apart, were a sad blow to the stricken family. The burial, also, was just twenty-four hours later, at 4 p. m. of Thursday. Rev. J. D. Brosy delivered a prayer and brief services both at the house and at the grave, and the little boy was laid to rest beside the little sister, in Woodlawn.

FIERCE FOREST FIRES

CAUSE AN APPALLING LOSS OF LIFE AND PROPERTY.

Towns Completely Destroyed and a Great Tract of Country Burned Over—Mother and Child Killed—The Arkansas Election—Japanese Lose 5,000 Men.

PERISH BY HUNDREDS.

Terrible Loss of Life in the Northern Forest Fires.

Chicago special: Reports from the portions of Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin in which the forest fires are now raging show that the condition of affairs there is more than terrible. The loss of property at a low estimate, has already reached $12,000,000, not including the standing timber that has been destroyed. But even worse is the loss of life which, it is feared, will reach as high as 1,000. Nearly 400 cases of persons having perished have already been received, while the reports as they continue to come in are increasing the list. The best information is that about twenty towns have already been destroyed, driving thousands of families from their homes in the face of the flames.

THE LOSS OF LIFE.

Up to last reports the estimates of the lives lost in the fires at different points in the two States are as given in the following list, and it is feared the list is far below the actual destruction of human life:

Hinckley, Minn	300
Sandstone, Minn	46
Sandstone Junction	25
Pokegama, Minn	25
Skunk Lake, Minn	29
Shell Lake, Minn	1
Miscellaneous points	40
Total	466

LIST OF TOWNS DESTROYED

The following towns are reported either wholly or partially destroyed; Bashaw, Burnet County, Wis.; Barronett, Barron County, Wis.; Benoit, Wis.; Ewen, Mich.; Fifield, Pine County, Wis.; Granite Lake, Barron County, Wis.; Grantsburg, Burnett County, Wis.; Glidden, Ashland County, Wis.; Hinkley, Pine County, Minn.; Mission Creek, Pine County, Minn.; Marengo, Ashland County, Wis.; Milaca, Pine County, Minn.; Muscado, Grant County, Wis.; Shell Lake, Washburn County, Wis.; South Range, Douglas County, Wis.; Sidnaw, Houghton County, Mich.; Sandstone, Minn.; Trout Creek, Mich.

THE LOSSES.

The losses at Hinckley and Barronet were each over $1,000,000, while the losses at the other towns reported destroyed range from $100,000 to $500,000, according to latest advices. The loss in Washburn was estimated at $300,000.

WELCOME RAIN.

"Heavy rains that are now falling all over the northwest will put out the forest fires in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan, and practically put an end to all such happenings this year." That statement was made Tuesday morning by Professor Moore, the weather prognosticator, after a careful study of his maps and reports received from the signal stations in and about the district where people and their homes have been burned by the hundreds during the last few days.

Mother and Child Killed.

Fulton, (Ill.) special: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McEnery and four children were fishing at Johnson creek, about four miles north of this city. They were on the bridge over the stream. Mrs. McEnery started to cross the bridge with the children. Her daughter warned her not to cross, as there was a passenger train due about that time. She succeeded, however, in getting all the children but one when she was struck by the engine and herself and child were killed.

Switchman Killed at Newark.

James W. Dial, foreman of a gang of night switchmen, met almost instant death in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad shop yards at Newark, Ohio. He was on a cut of cars, clinging to a car ladder, when the car sidewiped another cut. He was rolled between the cars and so badly injured that he expired in forty minutes. He was aged 28 and leaves a young wife and three small children.

Japs Lose 5,000 Men.

Tien Tsin special: An imperial edict has been issued rewarding Gen. Yeh and 700 Chinese officers for their victory over the Japanese at Ping Yang on August 17. Gen. Yeh reports that the Japanese lost 5,000 men in the engagement at Ping Yang during the days when the Chinese were in pursuit of the enemy, while the casualties of the Chinese were small.

Nihilist Press Seized.

St. Petersburg special: The police at Kalooga, capital of the government of that name, ninety-five miles southwest of Moscow, have discovered a press that was being used by the Nihilists for the publication of literature for dissemination throughout the Empire. Many persons have been arrested on the charge of being interested in the press.

Down in Arkansas.

The Arkansas election was very quiet. The Democratic State ticket, headed by Hon. James P. Clark, has been elected by about 15,000 to 20,000 majority.

Lodi Bank Burglarized.

Four burglars broke into the Lodi Bank, at Lodi, Ohio. They succeeded in getting into the outer vault and secured $400 worth of jewelry and a small amount of loose change. They escaped with two stolen rigs and were tracked within a few miles of Wooster.

Tortured an Aged Couple.

Masked robbers tortured an aged couple near Warren, Ohio, and secured seventy cents. The old people may die of their injuries.

State of Trade.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says,

"The activity which came with exhausted stocks and the pressure of delayed fall demands, and was increased by the removal of uncertainty about the tariff, has continued with heavy entries of foreign goods since the bill became a law. But the people who know best are saying, 'Improvement will come,' rather than 'Improvement has come.' The gain is not yet what has been expected, and business, if good in comparison with last year, is still poor in comparison with years preceding. Presumably there has not been time to feel the full effects of the change, and a gradual gain will be more healthy and encouraging than a spasmodic rise, but the expansion of commercial loans has suddenly ceased, prices of manufactured products show weakness rather than strength, and there has been a reaction in the stock market, prices of railway stocks averaging 32 cents, and of trust stocks $2.11 per share lower than a week ago.

SHANGHAI DISPATCHES.

Bombardment of Port Arthur by the Japanese.

Shanghai Special: The British gunboat Red Pole has sailed from Che Foo for Port Arthur. Junks arriving at Che Foo from New Chand report that a large number of bodies of Japanese are floating in the water at the mouth of the Tatung river. Several hundred flour boats which were moored stem and stern in the Canton river, were set on fire and burned. Those on board these boats were unable to escape and 1,000 were burned to death.

A Che Foo dispatch states that the Japanese warships, conveying a number of transports, landed troops at Laiau-Tie-Shan on August 30. These troops were marched at once upon Port Arthur, Japanese warships in the meantime bombarding the fort at that place. The object of the Japanese is to destroy the decks and forts at Port Arthur in order to prevent disabled Chinese vessels from sheltering there for repairs. The fight is still in progress.

Samoans on the Warpath.

The steamer Marihosa has arrived at San Francisco from Sydney, Auckland, Apia and Honolulu, and brings news of further fighting among the natives of Samoa and the forcible interference of the British and German warships at Apia. The details are in the following special correspondence to the Associated Press from Apia, Samoa: Ships of Great Britain and Germany have at last taken action with a view to ending the native disturbances which have heretofore appeared interminable. Two skirmishes have taken place between the warring tribes and resulting in the killing of eight or ten natives and wounding many more. Besides, the natives had become short of food, not having planted or looked after their crops, and they had taken to stealing from foreigners throughout the island. Their mode of living produced a great deal of illness, so that in the interests of common humanity interference by the powers became absolutely necessary.

One Life Sacrificed.

John Briggs, who was a motorman on an electric car, lost control of it while passing Desplaines avenue in Harlem, a suburb of Chicago. The car dashed along the tracks on the avenue until the crossing of the Northern Pacific Railroad was reached. A train came toward the car at a high rate of speed. The engineer thought the car would stop and made no effort to check the speed of his train. The car and train came into collision. The car was splintered and tossed across the tracks. Briggs was thrown from the car to the ground and suffered a fracture of the skull, from which he died at the county hospital. Of the six passengers all were hurled from their seats to the ground, but the only seriously injured is James Key, colored. He was taken to his home and may die from his injuries. The engineer and fireman of the train were arrested.

Race Riot.

Columbus (S. C.) special: Gov. Tillman received information that a race riot is imminent at Harlan City, in Orangeburg County. He ordered the Santee rifles, of that county, to put themselves at the disposal of Trial Justice O. M. Whetzell. The negroes in that section have formed a combination not to pick cotton for less than 50 cents a hundred for white farmers, and 40 cents for colored farmers. An old negro who violated this agreement picked for a white man at 40 cents and was taken out of his house by a mob of negroes last night and severely beaten. Several negroes were arrested for the crime, and this incensed the negroes. Owing to poor telegraphic facilities nothing further could be learned. The presence of a military company would quickly put down trouble, however, without bloodshed.

Ambuscaded by Indians.

San Diego special: Details of another ambuscade of Yaqui Indians on Mexican troops have been received. On Aug. 16 forty-five men of the Fourteenth battalion left a place called Los Pilares for Cruz De Piedre, and from there started on the 17th for Rio Yaqui, near the outpost of Los Guasimas. They were ambuscaded in a thickly wooded part of the road by a party of about 100 Indians, who had divided themselves on each side of the road. A battle followed lasting more than an hour, the Indians being finally repulsed. Twelve men were killed, six wounded, the wife of a sergeant killed, and a little child of 8 and a boy of 9 were wounded slightly. Four Indians were killed and twenty-seven slightly wounded and taken prisoners. Capt. Gomez will be court-martialed at Torin.

Complications in Peru.

Official reports to the State Department indicate a serious complication in Peru. It has been found necessary to suspend several articles of the constitution including the writ of habeas corpus, and the heir of the Republic is practically clothed with dictatorial powers. The provision to allow all persons to meet peacefully in public as in private is suspended, also the provision which prevented sending a person from the Republic or his residence without executive countenance. The Peruvian Government has also increased duty on all imports from 25 to 30 per cent.

Modern Miracle.

Quebec special: A large party of Michigan pilgrims arrived a few days ago at this place, by boat, and immediately proceeded to the Shrine of St. Anne DeBauher. Father Theodore, who is in charge of the party, reports a miracle which took place during the celebration of the holy mass. A boy, whose name could not be learned, was suffering from paralysis of the arm. He prayed with great fevor and suddenly moved his arm and hands. The Detroit pilgrims visited the principal points in town, the historic monuments, and the Plains of Abraham.

Knights of Pythias.

The Supreme Lodge of Knights of Pythias in session at Washington elected officers to serve until the next biennial session. They are as follows: Supreme Chancellor, Walter B Richie of Ohio; Supreme Vice Chancellor, Philip Colgrove of Michigan; Supreme Prelate, Albert Steinhart of Greenville, Ala; Master of Exchequer, Thomas G. Sample of Allegheny City, Pa.; Supreme Keeper of Record and seal, R. L. C. White of Nashville, Tenn., Supreme Master at Arms, A. B. Gardiner of New York; Supreme Inner Guard, James Moulton of New Brunswick; Suprme Outer Guard, John W. Thompson of Washington, D. C.; President of the Board of Control, John A. Hinsey of Chicago.

A New Party.

About three hundred representatives of the religious societies of Indiana met at Indianapolis and organized the Good Citizenship League of Indiana. Eli Ritter, a prominent prohibitionist, was chosen permanent chairman. The new league is non-sectarian, is independent of all parties and promises to cut a wide swath in the politics of the State. The liquor traffic furnishes the keynote for the address to the public. The members of the league pledge themselves to support no one for office who is friendly to the saloon or the saloon element in politics.

Soap on the Track.

Asheville (N. C.) special: A trolley car on the Asheville and Sulphur Springs Street Railway became unmanageable and, running down a heavy grade, flew the track at a curve. The car was full of passengers, many of whom were injured. They were summer visitors. None of them will die. Investigation shows that soap had been sprinkled on the rail at the point where control of the car was lost.

Ran Into Cattle.

Grand Rapids special: The Chicago and West Michigan flyer ran into a herd of cattle near Brookings, ditching the engine, baggage car and one day coach. Fireman John Kohe, of this city, was instantly killed and two ladies slightly injured. Engineer John S. Patterson saved himself by jumping, after reversing the lever. Several cattle were maimed and will have to be killed.

Murdered for Money.

James Gregory, a wealthy bachelor, was called to his door and shot through the heart by an unknown assailant. The only other person in the house was a sick aunt, whom he was attending. The woman arose from her bed and frightened the murderer away. The murder occurred at Shanghai, twelve miles west of Kokomo, Ind. The murderer will be lynched if captured.

Bad Explosion.

Elbow Lake (Minn.) special: A threshing engine exploded in Pomme De Terre Township, killing three men. The dead are: Hans K. Haanig, Knute Haanig, Tolef Anderson. The first two are father and son, owners of the engine. H. T. Hawell, a waterhauler, was terribly scalded, but will probably recover. The engine was an old one and carried too much steam.

Gov. Waite Discharged.

Denver (Col.) special: In the case of Gov. Waite and Messrs. Dwyer, Mullens, and Armstrong, charged with tampering with the mails in opening or causing to be opened, a letter addressed to another person, United States Commissioner Hinsdale discharged the Governor and held the others to the grand jury in bonds of $500 each.

Printing Office Clerks Discharged.

There was a wholesale discharge of employes in the government printing office last week, over five hundred being left out. Several Indiana men were on the list, among them A. G. Defrees of Indianapolis, son of ex-Public Printer John D. Defrees. He was one of the oldest employes in the office.

Natural Gas Explosion.

Indianapolis special: An explosion of natural gas took place at Indianapolis, and the West Washington Street Railway Power House was demolished. Loss, $20,000. Engineer Egan and Fireman J. H. Gallagher were struck by flying missiles and painfully but not fatally injured.

Dutch Forces Defeated.

The Hague special: The Official Journal publishes a dispatch giving an account of the disaster of the Dutch forces on the Island of Lombok at the hands of the troops of the Rajah of Lombok, which shows that the Dutch losses aggregated over 500 men killed, wounded, and missing.

A Lady Scalped in a Factory.

Mrs. George League, an employe of the Martz Canning Factory at Tipton, Ind., was completely scalped. Her hair caught on the line shaft and the entire scalp was instantly jerked off. The physicians say she will die.

An Indiana Village Swept by Flames.

The town of Burdick, Ind., was nearly destroyed by fire. Sackman's general store, residence, granary and three other residences and barns were destroyed. Loss about $15,000, with small insurance.

Ex-Vice President Morton.

Rhine Cliff (N. Y.) Special: Ex-Vice President Levi P. Morton has issued a statement which says that his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination is in the hands of the delegates of the convention.

Leesburg Swept by Flames.

The business portion of Leesburg, a small village north of Warsaw, was visited by fire. A grocery store, saloon and five residences were burned.

BY A QUARTER SECOND

ROBERT J. REDUCES THE RECORD OF THE WORLD.

Paced a Mile at Fort Wayne in 2:03 3-4 and Thereby Dethrones Mascot, Flying Jib, and Nancy Hanks—Alix Equals Her Record of 2:05 1-4.

The Fort Wayne, Ind., Driving Club's mile track to-day holds the record for the fastest mile ever made by a horse in harness, it holds the fastest mile ever made by a 4-year-old mare, and it holds the world's record for the greatest card of events and one day achievements in the history of the turf.

Robert J, C. J. Hamlin's wonderful pacer, achieved imperial honors, dethroning Nancy Hanks and smashing her 2:04 record. He was sent against his record of 2:04¼ at the Driving Club Park, and finished the mile in 2:03¾, the greatest record in the history of light harness racing, and one that crowns him king of the turf. Such phenomonal speed was never before seen on a track, and the great horse that did it is the theme of every tongue.

ROBERT J.

At 4:30 the pacer was brought out for the start with Ed. Geers up. He had previously been well worked out by Geers and when he came to the post was fit for the effort of his life. Starter Frank Walker called to the stand as special time judges Messrs. S. A. Browne, Kalamazoo, Mich.; A. L. Thomas, Taylorville, Ill., and W. R. Steele, Nashville, Tenn. After going to the quarter in a trial spurt, Geers took Robert J up the stretch where a swift running mate in harness was ready to pace him.

All was ready and Geers started down to the post. He came at a tremendous clip and nodded for the word. Starter Walker shouted "Go" and like a flash, Robert J. shot away at a pace that troubled his mate to pattern. His movement was perfect and he was going at a world-beating gait.

The quarter was reached in 30¾ and the great horse was moving like a machine. Not a skip or a break did he make as he sped along the back stretch to the half, passing it in 1:01¾, a clip that made grizzled veterans of the turf hold their breath as they gazed upon the marvelous performance and wondered at the horse that was doing it. Around the turn he came with his mighty stride, keeping well away from his mate and never losing an inch of his pace. The three-quarters was turned in 1:33¾, and Robert J came into the home stretch. Every neck in the great crowd was craned to get a look at the swiftly moving pacer and breathless silence prevailed.

Everybody seemed to realize instinctively that Robert J. was doing something that no horse ever before accomplished, and each seemed to feel that a word or sound might circumvent the achievement.

The peerless racer came to the post at a pace that was simply astounding. There was not a fault in his motion. His feet swung and beat with the rythm of a machine, and he spurned the turf from under him with a speed and strength that surpassed any other effort of the mile. Up nearer the wire he came, Geers urging him, and the noble horse responded loyally to the demand upon his powers. The wire was reached, and Robert J had given a new record and achieved an honor no other horse had ever won. He had made a mile in better than 2:04, and Nancy Hanks, Flying Jib, and Mascot were deprived of their laurels.

The time was announced and for the first time in all the world 2:03¾ was hung out. There was no mistake. A hundred watches had caught the time.

A mighty cheer went up and the crowd was mad with enthusiasm, the ladies outdoing the men in their exultant demonstrations.

As Ed Geers drove back with the greatest horse in the world the premier pacer and his driver were given an ovation. Geers received the honor with no less modesty than his horse.

Robert J., before a pony, is now a king. He is now a giant among horses and Geers to-day is above all his fraternity. He has at one stroke wrested the 2:04 crown from Nancy Hanks, Mascot, and Flying Jib and placed it upon one brow. With grace did the new king receive it; with honor will he wear it. Mr. Hamlin sat in the judges' stand.

Alix, the "sweet little" mare, was held the watch on Robert J. acted in similar capacity for Alix. The little mare was given an ovation and so was Andy McDowell.

Another record-breaking performance awaited the crowd. Geers soon came back with the 4-year-old champion mare Fantasy, 2:07¼. She was seeking new records, and success was with the Village Farm—it was their day. Cheerful was on duty again and the pair were to the quartes in 0:32¼, well together at the half in 1:03¼, and on came the best 4-year-old of the gentler sex. She was at the three-quarters in 1:35¼, and well did she do the last end of it. No faint heart was there, no weak spot did she show, but also sent against her record of 2:05¼. She did not get a new mark, but she repeated the old one, and the performance was phenomenal. At 3:30 Andy McDowell drove her out. After a preliminary trial she was given the word and sped like the wind from the post. The first quarter was finished in :31¼, the half mile in 1:02¼, the three quarters in 1:34¼, and the mile in 2:05¼. Several watches caught her in 2:05 flat, but the same special judges who like the queen she is was past the mile in 2:07.

There was a crowd present that gave an ovation, the people were enthused with good nature and were brimful of enjoyment and not one but felt proud that he was one to compose the only crowd that had ever witnessed such performances as did all who came to the Fort Wayne Driving Park in the afternoon. The enthusiastic young men who own and control these grounds feel proud of owning the fastest track on earth.

Sanitary Mouthpieces for Telephones.

A special mouthpiece for public telephones has been introduced in Germany, with the object of avoiding the spread of disease carried by the condensed moisture of the breath. A pad or a large number of disks of paper, with a hole in the middle, is inserted in the mouthpiece, and the upper disk of paper is torn off after every conversation.—Electricity.

WHEN you want to see the crooked made straight, look at a railroad map.

Leiteral Obedience.

The reception of a certain Prussian general's wife were for some reason uncongenial to the youths under his command, says Harper's Young People, and unfrequented by them. The general, a strict martinet, was imprudent enough to reproach them with their shortcomings in this matter and to demand a change in their manners. At his very next ball, when all the guests were assembled, the tramp, tramp of marching feet was heard upon the staircase, the door was thrown open, and there marched into the room a whole corps of cadets, who, with their young officer at their head, halted and stood at attention. "What's the meaning of this?" shouted the general. "The first corps of cadets, to dancing command!" replied the youth, saluting as though on parade. "Take them away!" screamed the general, beside himself with rage. "Right about face, march!" was the calm and unmoved answer, and the cadets marched out in the same order as they had entered.

Growth of Egypt's Cotton Trade.

In 1884 Egypt began to ship cotton to this country, the amount that year being 4,553 bales. Since then there has been a steady annual increase, and last year 40,000 bales were received, most of which was used in the New England mills. The Egyptian crop in 1894 is estimated at over 1,000,000 bales, and the probable success of plans for storing the waters of the Nile for irrigating purposes will double the yield next year.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Foot Bicycles.

An ingenious inventor has provided himself with a pair of bicycles for his feet. The wheels are about four inches in diameter and are strapped to him like skates. They have rubber tires and glide over the pavement with ease. They are very superior to the common roller skates, and the owner moves along almost as fast as the bicylist.

IT is a great new navy that this country has built and is building. We have ships now that can carry the flag anywhere, and command respect for the flag everywhere.

VICTORIES FOR CHINA

JAPANESE TROOPS DEFEATED IN SEVERAL BATTLES.

Celestials in Overwhelming Force, Aided by Coreans, Put the Mikado's Troops to Rout—Such Are the Reports Published by the Native Papers of Shanghai.

Slain by Thousands.

JOHN CHINAMAN seems to have been wiping up the earth with the dead bodies of Japanese warriors. At least that is John's story. The Shanghai papers say that 5,000 Chinese troops of all arms attacked the Japanese forces which had been detailed to guard the Ping-Nang passes in the northwest of Corea, and eventually succeeded in driving the Japanese from their positions. It is added that a large number of Coreans flocked to the Chinese standard, begging for arms and asking for permission to form the advance guard of the Chinese forces moving against the Japanese. The Chinese were re-enforced by 4,000 troops from Yi-Chow and on the day following they attacked the Japanese lines at Chung-Ho with the result that the Japanese retreated. The Chinese army was, the report says, further re-enforced by 13,000 fresh troops, and attacked the Japanese, who are said to have lost 4,000 men and their heavy baggage.

CHINESE CONSUL AT NEW YORK AND WIFE.

The Chinese advanced to Huang-Chow, and passing too near the Tatung River, where thirteen Japanese warships lay, were attacked by the Japanese, who opened fire upon them, inflicting a loss of several hundred men upon the Chinese. At ebb tide on the same day, the native reports add, three of the Japanese warships found themselves aground, and were afterward severely damaged by the fire of the Chinese artillery. The bulk of the Japanese forces, it is further asserted, retreated southward, pursued by the Chinese cavalry until night stopped the latter's advance. General Yeh, the Chinese commander, then made a detour and attacked the Japanese in the rear, completely routing them and capturing Huang-Chow.

HOMES OF THE NATION.

Nearly One-Half the Families Own the Places Where They Live.

The census office has given to the public the principal results of the investigation of farm and home proprietorship in all of the States and territories. This is the first investigation of the kind ever conducted in any country. Of the 12,690,152 families in the whole country, almost 48 per cent. own their own farms and homes and the rest hire. Of the families owning farms and homes, almost 28 per cent. have incumbrances and over 72 per cent. have no incumbrance. The number of resident owners of land in the United States is 6,066,417, to which must be added any land owners who may be living in tenant families. The farm families number 4,676,179, of whom 66 per cent. own their farms and others hire. Of the owning families over 28 per cent. have incumbrance on their farms. In 1880 25.56 per cent. of the farms were hired. In the cities that contain over 100,000 population there are 1,948,734 home families, of whom almost 23 per cent. own and 77 per cent. hire, while of the owning families 38 per cent. own subject to incumbrance. Among the cities having 100,000 population and over New York has the highest percentage of home tenancy, nearly 93.67. The smallest percentage—5—represents Rochester, N. Y.

Bringing the urban population into contrast with the nonurban population, almost 44 per cent., or 4,224,560 home families living outside of cities and towns of 8,000 people, own their homes and 56 per cent. hire. Of the owning families, 77 per cent. own without incumbrance. The value of the 1,696,890 incumbered farms and homes is $6,587,298,038, and the incumbrances aggregate $2,452,949,563, or 37.50 per cent. of the value. Of the incumbrance on farms and homes, over 22 per cent. bears interest at rates less than 6 per cent.; 34 per cent. at the rate of 6 per cent.; 33 per cent. at rates greater than 6 per cent.; and 11 per cent. at rates greater than 8 per cent. The average of value of each owned and incumbered farm in the United States is $3,444; of each incumbered home, $3,250, and the average incumbrance on each of the farms is $1,224; on each incumbered home, $1,203. The 886,957 farms subject to incumbrance are worth $3,054,923,165, and the incumbrance is $1,085,995,960, or 35.55 per cent. of the value. The 809,933 homes subject to incumbrance are valued at $2,632,374,904, and the incumbrance is $1,004,953,603, or 38.77 per cent. of the value.

The cities of 8,000 to 100,000 population have 214,613 incumbered homes occupied by owners, worth $739,846,087, with incumbrances amounting to $299,611,974, which is 39.55 per cent. of the value. In the cities of 100,000 population and over the value of the 168,159 incumbered homes occupied by owners is $934,191,811, and these homes are incumbered for $399,029,833, or 42.07 per cent. of their value.

In the country outside of cities and towns of 8,000 people and over, the value of the 427,161 incumbered homes occupied by owners is $958,337,006 and the incumbrance is $361,311,706, or 37.70 per cent. of the value. In the cities having at least 100,000 population, $5,555 represents the average value of each owned and incumbered home.

Over 74 per cent. of the incumbrance on owned farms was incurred in buying real estate and making improvements, and over 83 per cent. of the incumbrance was for the purpose of buying and improving real estate, investing in business, etc. Over 81 per cent. of the incumbrance on homes was incurred to secure purchase money and to make improvements.

PECK WILL NOT INTERFERE.

Refuses to Call Troops to Enforce Sanitary Laws in Milwaukee.

Gov. Peck, of Wisconsin, promptly ended the movement to have the State troops called out to enforce sanitary regulations in Milwaukee. The Governor took the ground that the municipal authorities had not exhausted their powers in trying to enforce the laws relative to small-pox, and that until the police and the Sheriff's forces had been used to the extent of their powers he could not call out the militia to perform guard duty or enforce a quarantine. The Governor came to this decision after a consultation with Chief of Police Janssen, who assured him that the police stood ready to enforce the laws whenever appealed to by the health officers, and that in every case where the police had made an effort to see that patients were taken to the hospital they had been successful. The Governor also learned that the Sheriff had not been called upon at all, excepting in a general way. The Governor then appeared before the State Board of Health, in session at the Pfister Hotel, and made known his decision. The entire police force will be used if necessary, and the policemen will be ordered to use their clubs and make numerous arrests of rioters. In case this force is not sufficient the Sheriff will be called upon, and special deputies sworn in. It will be the policy to quarantine infected houses wherever possible, and not transport to the isolation hospital excepting where the quarantine would be impossible. There are now over 225 cases in the city.

THE NEW GRAY GABLES.

President Cleveland's Pleasant Summer Resort.

President Cleveland is once more with his family and settled down for a short vacation at Gray Gables. This summer home of the Cleveland's on Buzzard's Bay, though unpretentious, is a very pleasant place during the warm weather, and is one the President and his family visit every year with increased delight. Here the Chief Executive with his wife and children can obtain rest and quiet and a cessation of the many things which make official life so annoying in Washington.

THE RECONSTRUCTED GRAY GABLES.

During the past year additions have been made to Gray Gables which have much improved the place. As it now appears, the house has nine chambers, which give the Cleveland family all the room they need and also allow them to entertain guests. The rooms are plainly furnished, and several of them have fine large fire-places where huge logs can be piled, affording not only heat but the home-like feeling that open fires only seem able to give.

Perhaps the pleasantest room in the house is the sitting-room, a picture of which is here given. This is the general meeting place for the Clevelands, their children and their friends. It is a remarkably attractive room and has an atmosphere of comfort which it would be hard to find surpassed anywhere.

THE SITTING-ROOM AT GRAY GABLES.

A view is also presented of the exterior of Gray Gables from which some idea of the house may be formed. The grounds have been laid out lately with greater care than hitherto and they now prove a most attractive feature of the place. On the whole Gray Gables may be considered an almost ideal summer home.

NOW SEEKS INDEMNITY.

An American Citizen Who Claims He Was Unjustly Imprisoned in Russia.

Nicholas N. Fredriksson is an American citizen who claims that he was unjustly arrested and imprisoned in Russia. He will endeavor to have the State Department at Washington demand indemnity from the Russian government. Fredriksson is an architect and a mechanical engineer. He was born in Persia, but years ago took the oath of allegiance to the United States, and received his education in Chicago and at California College, East Oakland. Last year he went to Russia with his wife to build a factory for Gen. Rehainder, a noted Russian. At Kursk he was arrested by a gendarme, who said he looked like a noted criminal. His passports were all right, but he was thrown into prison, and dragged from one to another for almost a year. By bribing a gendarme, he says, he finally escaped. He claims that he was half-starved and treated with shocking brutality.

UNITED AT LAST

James Wyatt paced his room in the darkening shadows, deep in thought. He had sent a poisoned barb to the heart of the man he hated, and he was glad. There was not a petty slight of days gone by, not a small insolence, for which he had not paid himself handsomely by to-night's work; but it was not to avenge the millionaire's petty slights and small insolences, not to uplift the wounded crest of his own self-esteem, viper-like, that he had stung his enemy. His hatred of Gilbert Sinclair had a deeper root than wounded pride. Disappointed love was its source. But for Gilbert Sinclair he might have been loved by the one woman whose regard he valued. Clara Walsingham's constancy to her old lover was the offense that made Gilbert loathsome to his quondam friend, and it was to gratify his own jealousy that he had aroused the demon of jealousy in his rival's breast.

"He shall know the flavor of the anguish he has caused me," thought Wyatt, "if his coarse soul can suffer as I have suffered for a woman's sake. Whether his wife is guilty or innocent, matters nothing to me. The pain will be his. If he were man enough to blow his brains out, now, there might be a chance for me with Clara. So long as he lives she will cling to the hope of winning him back. Where is she hiding, I wonder, and what is her scheme of life, while I am wearing my life out for her sake?"

Mr. Wyatt had not seen Mrs. Walsingham since that interview in which she had refused to keep faith with him, flinging her promise to the winds. He had gone to Half-Moon street on the following Saturday evening, determined to make peace with her at any sacrifice of his own dignity, with the slavish pertinacity of a man who passionately loves. He had driven up to the door, expecting to see the lighted windows shining out on the wintry street, to hear Herr Klavierschlager pounding the Erard, and the hum and twitter of many voices, as he went up the narrow flower-scented staircase; but to his surprise the windows were all dark, and a sleepy little maid-servant came to the door with a sputtering tallow candle, and informed him that Mrs. Walsingham had gone abroad, the maid-servant knew not whither.

"Was there no direction left for forwarding letters?" asked Mr. Wyatt.

"No, sir, not as I knows of. The lagent, p'raps, wot has the lettin' of the 'ous might know."

Mr. Wyatt went to the solicitor, who politely refused to give his client's address.

"Perhaps she has gone into a convent," thought James Wyatt, at his wits' end, and this disappointment added not a little to the bitterness of his feelings toward that profitable client of his, Gilbert Sinclair.

* * * * * * *

Staples, the butler, came in with the lamps, shut the solid oak shutters, cleared the tables, and brought his master a cup of coffee, all in an orderly and respectable manner that was well worth his sixty pounds a year. Mr. Wyatt was a man who would not have kept a bad servant a week, and never parted with a good one.

The postman's knock sounded on the ponderous door while Mr. Wyatt was sipping his coffee, and Staples came in with several letters on a silver waiter.

James Wyatt spread them out before him thoughtfully, as if they were cards and he were calculating their value. Handsome, creamy envelopes, thick and aristocratic, with armorial bearings on the seals; others blue and business-like, and unpretendingly inexpressive. One narrow little envelope, thin, green, and shiny—this was the first he opened.

The letter it contained was written in a small, scratching hand, unmistakably foreign, little curly tails to all the d's, a general scragginess in the y's, a paucity of capitals.

"Why do you not let me see you, or write to me? Is it not that it is cruel, after so much of promises? You leave me to languish, without hope. Dream you that I shall content to be a servant for always, after what you have promised? But do not believe it. I have too much spirit. It must that I talk to you of all that at leisure, the eyes in eyes, that I may see you if you are true, if you have good intentions to my regard. Write me, and very quickly, my friend, it must that I have of your news. Always your MELANIE."

"This comes of an innocent flirtation—pour passer le temps—in a stupid country-house," said Mr. Wyatt, crumpling the letter savagely. "This girl will worry my life out. I was a fool to amuse myself with such a dangerous little viper. And if I were to be frank with her, and tell her to go about her business, she might make matters unpleasant for me. The law comes down rather heavily on anything in the shape of conspiracy, and that little affair at Schoenesthal might be made to assume that complexion. And the law never comes down so heavily as when it gets its hoof on a man who has plenty to lose. Your British jury, too, has no liking for a man who turns his superfluous capital to good account by lending it to fools. No, I must keep that Schoenesthal business out of the law courts at any cost. Melanie must be pensioned, and sent back to her native valley, or her native slum—for I should think such an artful young person must have been born in some festering city alley rather than among vineyards or orchards."

Mr. Wyatt went to his writing-table, and answered Mlle. Duport's letter without delay—briefly and cautiously.

CHAPTER XXIV.

GILBERT ASKS A QUESTION.

If Lord Clanyarde had been within easy reach, Gilbert Sinclair would have gone straightway to upbraid him with his treachery in bringing Sir Cyprian to Davenant disguised and in a false name; but Lord Clanyarde, finding himself at 50 years of age entirely unfettered by domestic incumbrances, was indulging his natural frivolity among more agreeable people than his serious and business-like fellow-countrymen. Lord Clanyarde was eating ices and playing dominos under the colonnades of Venice, with thoughts of moving to Tyrolean mountains when the weather grew too warm in the fair sea-girt city.

So Gilbert, not being able to get at Lord Glanyarde, nursed his wrath to keep it warm, and went straight home to Davenant Park, where Constance was leading her calm and happy life, seeing hardly anything of what the world calls "society," but surrounded by the people she had known since her childhood—the good old rector, who had christened her, the devoted little doctor, who had watched her so patiently when her dull eyes had hardly recognized his familiar face; the school-mistress, the old pupils, the gray old gardeners, and sunburned game-keepers; the gaffers and goodies who had been old when she was a baby, and seemed hardly any older for the twenty years that had passed over their heads since then. Cheeks a little more shriveled, perhaps, brows more deeply wrinkled, shoulders a trifle more bent, but exactly the same appreciation of tea and tobacco, half crowns and new neckerchiefs, the Psalms and the rector's sermons.

Never had spring seemed to her so beautiful as it seemed this year, when she led her little girl through the woods and showed her the newly awakened flowers, and told her the names of the birds that poured out such gushing songs of gladness in the warm bright noon. The child's lips began to shape isolated words—mam, mam, and birdie, fowers for flowers—divine language to the mother's ear. Never was a child happier or more fondly loved, Martha Briggs, nothing doubting, hugged this little waif to her honest heart; and even Melanie, who had a curious inward revulsion from the child, had to pretend a most enthusiastic devotion and deepest gratitude to Providence for the little one's restoration. Once, inspired by some familiar spirit of evil, she could not resist dropping a little poison into her mistress' cup of joy.

"Do you feel quite sure there has been no mistake, ma'am:" she asked. "I sometimes fancy our darling could not have been saved. I saw her carried away by the current, carried past me like a straw, and it has never been quite explained how she was rescued."

Constance looked at her with eyes on fire with indignation.

"Am I sure that this is my child?" she cried, clasping the baby to her breast. "Am I sure of my own name, of my life? If all the rest of life were a dream or a shadow, I should know that Christabel was real and true. Who can deceive a mother?"

"You were so ill when the little girl was brought home," suggested Melanie, with an air of conscientious doubt.

"Not too ill to remember my Christabel. We knew each other, did we not, darling? Our lips clung together as if we had never been parted. Not know my own child, indeed! Never dare to make such a suggestion again, Melanie."

After this Mlle. Duport was discreetly silent on the subject of this present Christabel's identity with the Christabel of the past; but the time was to come when Constance Sinclair's faith was to receive a ruder shock.

Gilbert went home that evening after the Two Thousand savage, with his mind full of scorpions. Goblin's success was nothing to him. He hardly remembered that one of his horses had won a race for the first time since he had kept horses. He had counted on James Wyatt's fidelity just as he had counted on his horse or dog—a creature bought with his money, fed and housed by him. Wyatt had profited by him; Wyatt was bound to stand by him: and as to those various slights which he had put upon his confidential adviser at divers times, almost unconsciously, it had never occurred to him that there could be any galling wound left by such small stings, the venom whereof was to react upon himself.

If he had heaped favors upon the man, if he had been the most unselfish and devoted of friends, he could not have felt James Wyatt's treachery more keenly. He was angry with himself for having been so easy a dupe, for having given any man power to get the better of him.

"The whole thing is a planned revenge," he thought. "Wyatt knew how it would gall me to see Sir Cyprian back at Davenant."

And Wyatt had flung a fire-brand into that revelation about the pretended German doctor. Could it be, Gilbert asked himself, or was it a malicious invention of Wyatt's? Would Lord Clanyarde have lent himself to such a deception? Even Lord Clanyarde might have been hoodwinked by his daughter's lover.

"I won't accuse her, not yet a while," he said to himself. "It will be better to keep quiet and watch. I have been too often away. I have given her too much license. That innocent face of hers would deceive Satan himself. And I have allowed myself to think that there was no guile in her; that, although she has never loved me, she has never wronged me. Hard to find, after all, that I have judged her too leniently."

It was after midnight when Mr. Sinclair arrived at Davenant, and he had to ring up one of the servants to let him in, his return being altogether unlooked for. He did not see Constance until the next day, and by this time had regained the mastery of himself. The position of affairs between husband and wife since Mrs. Sinclair's recovery had been a kind of armed neutrality. Gilbert had never alluded to that awful day on which he had raised his hand against his wife, nor had Constance. Doubtful whether she remembered that unhappy occurrence, and deeply ashamed of the brutality into which passion had betrayed him, Mr. Sinclair wisely kept his own counsel. To apologize might be to make a revelation. His remorse showed itself by increased civility to his wife, and a new deference to her feelings, for which she was duly grateful. Gentle, submissive always, she gave her husband no cause of offense, save that one rankling sore which had begun to gall him directly the triumphant sense of possession had lost its power to satisfy—the consciousness that he had never won her heart. The smoldering fire needed but a spark of jealousy to raise a fatal flame.

Constance expressed herself much pleased at Goblin's success, when Gilbert announced the fact, with very little elation, on the day after the race. They were dining together tete-a-tete in the spacious paneled room, which seemed so much too big for them. These ceremonious late dinners were Constance's aversion. In her husband's absence she dined early with Christabel, and spent the long afternoons walking or driving, and came home at twilight to a social tea-party with Martha Briggs and the baby.

"I didn't think you cared about racehorses," said Gilbert, as if doubting the sincerity of his wife's congratulations.

"Not in the abstract; they are such far-off creatures. One never gets on intimate terms with them. They are like the strange animals which the Emperor Commodus brought to Rome—articles of luxury. But I am very glad your horse has won, Gilbert, on your account."

"Yes, it's a great triumph for me. If I can win the Derby I shall be satisfied. Racing is confoundedly expensive, and I've had quite enough of it. I think I shall sell Goblin and the whole stud after Epsom, and the new stables into the bargain, and then I shall improve that great barrack of a place in the North and settle down. I'm sick of this part of the world. It's too d——d civilized," added Mr. Sinclair, forcibly.

"Do you mean that you would leave Davenant?" asked Constance, with astonishment.

"Yes. I ought to have told you, by the way—Davenant ceases to be mine after mid-summer-day. I've sold it."

"Sold Davenant!"

"Yes. I have never really cared for the place, and I had a good offer for it while you were ill. Things were not looking very well in the North just then, and I was in want of money. I dare say you'll be pleased when you hear who is the purchaser," said Gilbert, with an uncomfortable smile.

Constance seemed hardly to hear the latter part of his speech.

"To think that you should have sold Davenant—the dear old place!"

"I thought you did not care for it."

"Not just at first, perhaps. It seemed too big for me. I liked shabby old Marchbrook better. But I have been so happy here lately, and it is so nice to live among people one has known all one's life."

"Yes, old associations are sweetest," sneered Gilbert, the demon jealousy getting the upper hand.

"But, after all, the place itself matters very little," said Constance, anxious to avoid anything that might seem like upbraiding—no wife so conscientious in the discharge of her duty as a good woman who does not love her husband. "I should be just as happy in any cottage in the neighborhood."

"Especially if you had old an friend settled here," said Gilbert. "You haven't asked me the name of my successor; but perhaps you know."

"How should I know?"

"You might have means of obtaining information."

"Who is the person, Gilbert?"

"Sir Cyprian Davenant."

He watched her closely. Was the announcement a surprise, or did she know all about it, and was that look of grave astonishment a touch of social comedy?

She looked at him earnestly for a minute, and grew somewhat paler, he thought, as if the very sound of his rival's name were a shock to her.

"Indeed! he has bought the old place again!" she said, quietly. "That seems only right. But I thought he had gone back to Africa."

"Did you really?" with a somewhat ironical elevation of his eyebrows. "Well, I thought so, too. But it seems he is still in England. Oh, by the by, do you remember that German doctor, who came to see you when you were ill?"

There was a purpose in the abruptness of this question. He wanted to take her off her guard; if possible startle her into betraying herself. If there were any truth in Wyatt's assertions, this question must be a startling one.

Her calm look told him nothing. She was either innocent of all guile or the most consummate hypocrite.

"Yes, I can faintly remember. I can just recall that night like a dream. Papa and you coming into my room, and a curious-looking old man with a kind voice—a voice that went to my heart, somehow."

Gilbert started and frowned.

"Yes, I remember It seems like a picture as I look back: your anxious looks, the fire-light shining on your faces. He asked me to sing, did he not? Yes, and the song made me cry. Oh, such blessed tears—they took a load off my mind. It was like the loosening of a band of iron round my head. And he spoke to me about Christabel, and told me to hope. Dear old man, I have reason to remember him."

"Has he never been here since?"

"Never. How should he come, unless you or papa brought him?"

"No, to be sure. And you have no curiosity about him—no desire to see him again?"

"Why should I be curious or anxious? He did not deceive me with false hope. My darling was restored by him."

"And you thank him for that?"

"I thank God for having saved my child. I thank that good old Doctor for being the first to tell me to hope."

This much and no more could Gilbert's closest questioning extort from his wife. What was he to think—that Wyatt was fooling him, or that Constance was past mistress in dissimulation? He did not know what to think, and was miserable accordingly.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Steel Pipes for Sewers.

An engineer suggests that sewers of riveted steel pipe, coated with pure asphalt or other suitable compound, are in every way adapted to their purpose. It is claimed that for large sewers this pipe is cheaper than brick, lasts longer, and will not cave in. The editor of a leading engineering news journal, by way of comment on this suggestion, says that before any city adopts steel pipes for sewers it must settle the question whether the sewage carries a sufficient amount of acid or alkaline matter to cause corrosion, and whether the steel could be so protected as to prevent corrosion. Another question to be considered would be the relative cost of steel and iron pipe. Both steel and iron can now be bought at marvelously low figures, and the difference in their cost is less than ever before. Most sewer work is done in streets that are fairly accessible, and this fact in a great measure lessens the urgency of using steel pipes on the score of lightness and greater ease of handling. Furthermore, the advantage of cast iron is that it resists corrosion better, and furnishes a greater thickness of metal which must rust away before leakage will occur.

Droll Stephen Grant.

Stephen Grant was an erratic genius, whose jests and extravagant sayings were enjoyed by his contemporaries. Mr. Bell, in his "Bench and Bar of New Hampshire," gives the following specimen of his droll way of putting things. He was a "rolling stone" in his profession, the law, and once went to Wentworth to live, but did not stay there long. Being asked his reason for leaving the place so soon, he replied:

"There's not room enough there. The hills come down all round so close together that there is no space to turn round in. A little shoemaker moved in and began business there, but when he tried to pull out his wax he hit both elbows against the hills."—Youth's Companion.

PRESIDENT ALLOWS TARIFF BILL TO BECOME LAW.

Though He Could Not Consistantly Indorse It, He Believes It Improves Existing Conditions—Doest Not Go Far Enough—His Letter.

New Tariff in Force.

At 12 o'clock Monday night the McKinley tariff law, which had been in operation since Oct. 30, 1890, practically four years, died on the statue books and the new Democratic tariff bill passed by the LIIId Congress became a law without the signature of President Cleveland. The constitutional period of ten days allowed the President to consider the bill expired with the midnight hour and, according to the terms of the constitution, the President having failed to return the bill to Congress with or without his approval, it became a law.

The placing of the bill upon the statute books ended one of the longest and most remarkable struggles in the parliamentary history of the Government. It was practically a year ago that the compilation of the new tariff was commenced. The extraordinary session of Congress was called Aug. 7, 1893, for the purpose of repealing the Sherman silver-purchasing law. Two weeks later the Ways and Means Committee of the House, with Mr. Wilson, of West Virginia, as chairman, was appointed, and almost immediately the work of framing the Democratic tariff-reform measure began. Months were spent in its preparation, and it was not reported until after the holidays during the regular session beginning in December. For three weeks it was debated in the House, passing that body January 29. Seventeen House Democrats voted against it. The bill went to the Senate, and, after being considered until March 20, was reported, greatly changed from the House bill. The debate which began in the Senate April 2 lasted until July 3, when the bill passed by a vote of 39 to 34. The crisis occurred when the bill reached conference. On Aug. 13 the House yielded, and accepted the Senate bill in toto. Two days afterward, Wednesday, Aug. 15, it went to the President, and Monday night, at the expiration of the constitutional ten days (Sundays not counted), it became a law without Mr. Cleveland's approval.

The Secretary instructed customs collectors that goods placed in bonded warehouses under the McKinley law and made free of duty under the new tariff act are entitled to free entry, and need not be exported and reimported in order to get the benefits of the new act. This is of especial interest to the wool trade, a large amount of wool being stored now in bonded warehouses. In this, as in all other mooted questions, the Secretary will follow the intent of Congress and let aggrieved parties appeal to the courts if they care to contest on technical grounds. In accordance with this determination he undoubtedly will hold that diamonds are dutiable, notwithstanding the erroneous punctuation of the free list.

Why He Didn't Sign.

While President Cleveland did not sign the new tariff law he was prevailed on by party chieftains to write a letter which is to voice his feelings. The letter, which was addressed to Gen. Catchings of the Rules Committee of the House, was of course meant for publication. To address it to Gen. Catchings was a mere convenience and a copy went to the press association by the same hand which bore the original missive to Catchings.

The President objects to the bill for the reason that he regards it as not being in line with honest tariff reform, and because it contains inconsistencies that should not be found in any tariff law. He speaks of the vicissitudes of the bill during its progress through the two houses, and to the bad treatment it received from pretended friends, and expresses the opinion that notwithstanding these it is a vast improvement on existing conditions. "It is not only a barrier," says the President, "against a return to mad protection, but furnishes vantage ground from which must be waged aggressive operations against protected monopoly and government favoritism." Following is the missive:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Hon. T. C. Catchings:

MY DEAR SIR—Since the conversation I had with you and Mr. Clark, of Alabama, a few days ago in regard to my action upon the tariff bill now before me, I have given the subject further and most serious consideration. The result is I am more settled than ever in the determination to allow the bill to become a law without my signature.

When the formulation of legislation which it was hoped would embody Democratic ideas of tariff reform was lately entered upon by the Congress nothing was further from my anticipation than a result which I could not promptly and enthusiastically indorse.

It is therefore with a feeling of the utmost disappointment that I submit to a denial of this privilege.

I do not claim to be better than the masses of my party nor do I wish to avoid any responsibility which on account of the passage of this law I ought to bear as a member of the Democratic organization, neither will I permit myself to be separated from my party to such an extent as might be implied by my veto of tariff legislation which, though disappointing, is still chargeable to Democratic effort. But there are provisions in this bill which are not in line with honest tariff reform, and it contains inconsistencies and crudities which ought not to appear in tariff laws or laws of any kind. Besides these were, as you and I well know, incidents accompanying the passage of the bill through Congress which made every sincere reformer unhappy, while influences surrounded it in its latter stages and interfered with its final construction which ought not to be recognized or tolerated in Democratic tariff reform councils.

And yet, notwithstanding all its vicissitudes and all the bad treatment it received at the hands of pretended friends, it presents a vast improvement to existing conditions. It will certainly lighten many tariff burdens that now rest heavily upon the people. It is not only a barrier against the return of mad protection, but it furnishes a vantage ground from which must be waged further aggressive operations against protected monopoly and governmental favoritism.

I take my place with the rank and file of the Democratic party who believe in tariff reform and who know what it is; who refuse to accept the results embodied in this bill as the close of the war; who are not blinded to the fact that the livery of Democratic tariff reform has been stolen and worn in the service of Republican protection, and who have marked the places where the deadly blight of treason has blasted the councils of the brave in their hour of might.

The trusts and combinations—the communism of pelf—whose machinations have prevented us from reaching the success we deserve, should not be forgotten or forgiven. We shall recover from our astonishment at their exhibition of power, and if then the question is forced upon us whether they shall submit to the free legislative will of the people's representatives or shall dictate the laws which the people must obey, we will accept and settle that issue as one involving the integrity and safety of American institutions.

I love the principles of true Democracy because they are founded in patriotism and upon justice and fairness toward all interests. I am proud of my party organization because it is conservatively sturdy and persistent in the enforcement of its principles. Therefore I do not despair of the efforts made by the House of Representatives to supplement the bill already passed by further legislation and to have engrafted upon it such modifications as will more nearly meet Democratic hopes and aspirations.

I can't be mistaken as to the necessity of free raw materials as the foundation of logical and sensible tariff reform. The extent to which this is recognized in the legislation already secured is one of its encouraging and redeeming features, but it is vexatious to recall that while free coal and iron ore have been denied, a letter of the Secretary of the Treasury discloses the fact that both might have been made free by the annual surrender of only about $700,000 of unnecessary revenue.

I am sure that there is a common habit of underestimating the importance of free raw materials in tariff legislation, and of regarding them as only related to concessions to be made to our manufacturers. The truth is, their influence is so far-reaching that, if disregarded, a complete and beneficent scheme of tariff reform cannot be successfully inaugurated.

When we give to our manufacturers free raw materials we unshackle American enterprise and ingenuity, and these will open the doors of foreign markets to the reception of our wares and give opportunity for the continuous and remunerative employment of American labor.

With materials cheapened by their freedom from tariff charges the cost of their product must be correspondingly cheapened. Thereupon justice and fairness to the consumer would demand that the manufacturers be obliged to submit to such a readjustment and modification of the tariff upon their finished goods as would secure to the people the benefit of the reduced cost of their manufacture and shield the consumer against the exactions of inordinate profits.

It will thus be seen that free raw materials and a just and fearless regulation and reduction of the tariff to meet the changed conditions would carry to every humble home in the land the blessings of increased comfort and cheaper living.

The millions of our countrymen who have fought bravely and well for tariff reform should be exhorted to continue the struggle, boldly challenging to open warfare and constantly guarding against treachery and half-heartedness in their camp.

Tariff reform will not be settled until it is honestly and fairly settled in the interest and to the benefit of a patient and long-suffering people. Yours very truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

SENATORS TO STEP DOWN.

Quite a Number of Terms Expired with the LIIId Congress.

The respective terms of the following United States Senators expire next March and the Legislatures which choose their successors are to be elected this fall:

DEMOCRATS—James H. Berry (Ark.), William Lindsay (Ky.), Matthew C. Butler (S. C.), John Martin (Kan.), Donelson Caffery (La.), John R. McPherson (N. J.), J. N. Camden (W. Va.), Matt W. Ransom (N. C.), Richard Coke (Texas), Patrick Walsh (Ga.), Isham G. Harris (Tenn.).

REPUBLICANS—Joseph M. Carey (Wyoming), James McMillan (Mich.), Wm. E. Chandler (N. H.), R. F. Pettigrew (S. D.), Shelby M. Cullom (Ill.), Thomas C. Power (Mont.), William P. Frye (Maine), George L. Shoup (Idaho), Anthony Higgins (Del.), W. D. Washburn (Minn.), Geo. F. Hoar (Mass.), Edward O. Wolcott (Col.), C. F. Manderson (Nebraska).

The terms of Nathan F. Dixon, Rhode Island; James F. Wilson, Iowa, and Joseph Dolph, of Oregon, Republicans, and Eppa Hunton of Virginia, A. J. McLaurin of Missisippi, and John T. Morgan of Alabama also expire next year. Rhode Island has already elected Senator Dixon's successor, George Peabody Wetmore. Iowa has elected Wilson's successor, ex-Gov. Gear. Ex-Senator Walthall had already been elected for the next term from Missisippi before he resigned and gave place for the appointment of MacLaurin to his unexpired term. Eppa Hunton's successor from Virginia will be Senator Martin, having been already chosen. In Alabama and Oregon the Legislatures have already been elected and Senators Morgan and Dolph are practically assured of being chosen their own successors.

Beside these Senators, N. C. Blanchard of Louisiana, and Thomas J. Jarvis, of North Carolina, Democrats, and George C. Perkins of California and John Patton, Jr., of Michigan, Republicans, were chosen by governors to fill vacancies, and the Legislatures to be elected this fall will choose their successors for the remainder of their respective terms. Montana, Washington, and Wyoming have had only one Senator each during the present Congress and the vacancies caused thereby are to be filled by the Legislatures elected this fall in those States.

BORN IN SLAVERY.

The President of the National Negro Democratic League.

C. H. J. Taylor is President of the National Negro Democratic League, which held its annual meeting at Indianapolis recently. Twenty States were represented in the meeting. C. H. J. Taylor, of Washington, was re-elected President of the League. Mr. Taylor was born in slavery at Marion, Ala., 38 years ago, got his education in the public schools and "picked up" the law, but he did it so thoroughly that he was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States. In 1882 he went west and held some public offices in Indiana and Missouri. President Cleveland sent him to Liberia as Minister resident and Consul General, but he did not like Africa and returned to the United States in a few months. He is a Democrat and his home is at Kansas City, where, in addition to his activity in politics and law, he owns and edits a weekly paper, the American Citizen.

EDUCATED AT HARVARD.

Kentaro Keneko, Japan's New Minister to the United States.

Kentara Keneko, Japan's new Minister to the United States, was educated at Harvard College. In 1871 when Prince Komatsu visited Chicago, just after the great fire, Keneko was one of the brightest members of the royal Jap's suit. Soon after Keneko took the collegiate course at Harvard, and was graduated with honors. He subsequently studied for several years in London, and on the continent of Europe. In 1891 he reappeared in Chicago with a commission from his Government to report upon the prospects of the approaching World's Columbian Exposition, and the elaborate exhibits from Japan were largely due to his efforts. He has filled the important posts of Secretary of the House of Peers, the Senate of Japan, and Assistant Minister of Agriculture and Commerce.

W. S. COLLINS. W. S. Collins, of Saginaw, Speaks. W. S. COLLINS.

"I am 23. At 15 I learned a bad habit which I continued till 18. I then became "one of the boys" and led a gay life. Exposure produced Syphilis. I became nervous and despondent; no ambition; memory poor; eyes red, sunken and blue; pimples on face; hair loose, bone pains; weak back; varicocele; dreams and losses at night; weak parts; deposit in urine, etc. I spent hundreds of dollars without help, and was contemplating suicide when a friend recommended Drs. Kennedy & Kergan's New Method Treatment. Thank God I tried it. In two months I was cured. This was six years ago, and never had a return. Was married two years ago and all happy. Boys, try Drs. Kennedy & Kergan before giving up hope."

READ Gov. Matthews' speech in to-day's COURIER. Then cut it out and keep it for reference.

IT IS now believed that Ex-vice-president Morton, will try his hand at the presidency next time.

SAMUEL J. KIRKWOOD, the "war governor" of Iowa, died Saturday morning, at his home, in Iowa City.

FRANKLIN McVEAGH, the democratic candidate for U. S. senator in Illinois made the "keynote speech," the opening of the campaign Saturday.

IT IS ridiculous to say Auburn never had a crowd as big as Coxey's. But it was big enough to make law abiding, self-respecting people ashamed.

TERRIBLE flood at Uvalde, in Texas, last week. A sudden rain, and a sudden and almost unaccountable rise in the river Leona, caught the people of the lower town asleep. A number were drowned.

GEN. N. P. BANKS died Saturday at his home in Waltham, Mass. He was the first republican speaker of the House of representatives, being elected in 1855 after a long contest and 133 ballots. He was a general in the war, but not a success.

CAPT. W. R. MYERS, democratic candidate for secretary of state, and Hon. W. D. Owen, the republican candidate, will have one joint discussion in each congressional district, making thirteen in all. Owen will speak at Garrett next Wednesday, but we have not heard whether Myers will meet him there or at some other point.

PUBLIC debt decreased in the month of August nearly two millions. Even a second rate democratic law, will loosen the shackles of trade. This is as it should be. More of revenue and less "protection." The debt had been increasing each month under the McKinley law.

MILWAUKEE had cases of small pox. The board of health took measures to have the patients taken to hospitals, so the disease would not spread. Several agitators including some leading A. P. A. folks advised the people to shoot, rather than allow a member of the family to be removed. This lawless element, is an assistant to the republican party, as Coxey and Debs, are to the populists.

EX-GOVERNOR FIFER, of Illinois, at the state encampment of G. A. R. last week, said: To-day, the country is the most prosperous on earth. It has done well by its defenders, and why should by it not? They told us when they asked us to Lee back from Gettysburg that they would take care of us in our old age, and they are doing it." This is true, and is comforting to hear, as coming from a republican. But how different it is, from the talk of republican editors hereabouts. To read what they publish, one would think every pension is being abolished.

FREE KELLEY was nominated for congress by the populists and Coxeyites at Kendallville last week. As might be expected, he made a speech, and as is always the case, when a man can no longer run a party, he leaves it, and then says "the party left me." Better be truthful. He has left the party, for the party's good, not his own. The party has had him on its hands since before the war, and time and again have, the democrats of this section and county rolled up their sleeves, spent their time and money to do him honor. Now, having got out of the party all he can, he leaves it, without as much as a "thank you" to the hundreds of democrats who have made sacrifices to serve him. Let him go. The party has been unfortunate in having honored quite a number of others, who have proved just as ungrateful as he, and have shown their ungratefulness in the same way. But a party that has carried the load, can travel without it.

Congressional Convention.

At a meeting composed of the Chairmen of the Democratic Central Committees of the several Counties of the 12th Congressional District and the district committeeman, held at Ft. Wayne on the 3rd day of September, 1894, it was determined that the Convention for the nomination of a democratic candidate for Congress to represent the 12th district should be held at the Saengerbund Hall in the city of Ft. Wayne on the 11th day of September, 1894, at 2 o'clock p. m. All delegates heretofore elected, or such as may be hereafter elected to said Convention are requested to take notice and be present at the Convention at the time and place above without further notification. Democrats generally are also invited to be present. Democratic newspapers of the district are respectfully requested to publish this notice in their issues for the present week.

ALLEN ZOLLARS,
District Committeeman

CONGRESSIONAL.

We publish this week the official call of Judge Zollars for the congressional convention, which is to meet at Ft. Wayne next Wednesday. In looking over this district every true democrat will realize with regret the unfortunate conditions that confront the democratic voters. Our present member, Mr. McNagny, has so conducted himself and the legitimate business that falls on a member of congress, as to alienate a great majority of the leading democrats in every county in the district. We say this advisedly, for we have consulted freely with many, and while we have found scores who are bitterly opposed to him, we cannot name one leading democrat who is enthusiastically for him. Yet it has always been our rule to give a member two terms, and this being the case, no other candidate feels like coming into the race against him. Almost any such man could be elected. But we do not believe Mr. McNagny could be. As we have said, he has too many enemies and too few friends. A well known Allen county democrat is on record as saying a few days ago that McNagny, at the best, could not go out of Allen county with more than 1,000 majority. It is now certain that his own county, Whitley, is in the doubtful list, and there is not another county in the district that he will carry. Leaving out DeKalb and Noble, both of which he will lose, we have Steuben with 900 against him, and Lagrange with at least 800. In these four counties there will be at least 2,000 against him. Does the most sanguine believe that Allen county can overcome this and elect him? This is a serious condition of things, but we must face it. We cannot evade these facts if we would. And he has himself brought these conditions on himself and on the party. He has dealt dishonestly with the party in nearly every locality, and in a number of cases, has squarely lied to and insulted the best men in the party. Why he did these things in this way is difficult to tell. But a man who deals thus falsely with those who have honored him, cannot be retired too soon. Self-respecting democrats declare they will not support such a man, and the consequent lukewarmness endangers all our local tickets. Our plain duty as loyal democrats is to go to the convention and nominate a new man. Anyone would be stronger and would be triumphantly elected.

TRUE BALLOT REFORM.

Indiana Democracy's Record in This Respect.

How the Legislation of 1889 Was Brought About.

Shameless Abuses of the Old System. Dorsey's Two Dollar Notes and Dudley's "Blocks-of-Five"—Vote Buying as a Fine Art—Republican Game Blocked. Australian Ballot Knocks It Out—Enduring Glory of the Democratic Party.

It is a remarkable fact in the history of the American commonwealths that, while progressing so rapidly in other respects, they have always been singularly backward in matters relating to the exercise of the suffrage. For a free people, who govern themselves by the ballot, the first and most essential requisite would seem to be laws regulating the principles and methods of voting. The ballot is the recorded opinion of the masses. In no other way can the will of the majority be ascertained and the government set in motion. The first step, therefore, in a republic controlled by suffrage would naturally be a law clearly ascertaining the right and providing the means for a fair and honest vote of the enfranchised citizen. Yet it is not too much to say that scarcely a state in the Union, during the first hundred years of the country's history, had a scientific or even decent ballot law. The codes prevailing in most of the states were crude, imperfect, unsatisfactory in operation and often little short of barbarous. The so-called ballot laws led to endless confusion in practice and were fruitful breeders of corruption and oppression. They seemed especially adapted to invite that most insidious and dangerous crime against the life of a republic, the purchase of votes. While nominally secret, the ballot was really open, and the voter was subject to that espionage, intimidation and tampering which is fatal to a fair ascertainment of the popular will. The arrangements for counting and announcing the result were little better than the method of voting. Every facility was afforded the dishonest election officer to play his game of chicane, while the voter outside was left a prey to unprincipled party "workers" and the schemes of designing politicians.

How to remedy this crying abuse was long a subject of earnest thought on the part of many American legislators. Various schemes were devised, but none were satisfactory in operation. The so-called reforms proved inadequate to reach the seat of the evil; the relief was but temporary, and one by one they were abandoned as wholly inadequate to the emergency. At length, unable to invent for themselves, the ballot reformers were forced to go across the world for a hint of the needed law. It was left for the people of the former penal colony of Australia to solve the vexed problem. They invented what has since been widely famed as the Australian ballot law. While not perfect, nor a complete remedy for all abuses, the Australian system is undoubtedly the best yet devised for the purpose. While simple in operation, the results under honest administration are so fair as to satisfy the most exacting. Indiana was among the first of the states of the American Union to adopt this new system. When the Democratic party took charge of the legislature in 1889 one of the first measures introduced was a bill to reform the ballot, modeled on the Australian law. The Republican party opposed it bitterly. Under the old system that party had enjoyed a great advantage. The loose methods and imperfect details afforded facilities for the practice of those abuses in which the Republican party had become an adept and an artist. Under the old laws that shameless traffic in votes, which for years made the name of Indiana a byword and a reproach, had been brought by the Republican party to such a degree of perfection that honest elections were an impossibility under these laws. Dorsey's two-dollar-bill campaign of 1880 converted the whole state into a market for the purchase and sale of votes. Under these laws in 1888 Dudley reduced the "blocks of five" system to a fine art. Our elections for years were roaring farces, when not bloody tragedies, and free government was practically overthrown by the poisoning of its basic principle at the fountain source.

From all these evils the state was rescued by the Democratic ballot law, which first went into operation at the fall election in 1890. Then, for the first time probably since the war, Indiana had an election that was absolutely honest and fair. The humblest citizen was able to vote in perfect secrecy, undeterred by the pestiferous "ticket handler" on the one hand or the partisan intimidator on the other. Crowds of hoodlums no longer assembled around the polls to abash or influence the honest voter. The trade of the vote buyer was abolished and the occupation of the whipper-in was gone. Under the new law it was found practically impossible to bring the power of money to bear to influence votes. Nor can the wealthy employer control his workingmen as formerly, as under the Australian system it is impossible to ascertain how any man casts his ballot. These and other evils were removed, and it is not too much to say that Indiana now enjoys an electoral system that is substantially perfect. Elections being honest and the count fair, the people acquiesce peacefully and cheerfully in the will of the majority as ascertained at the polls. No longer is the bitter complaint heard that "the state was bought" or "the count was not honest," which cries constituted the aftermath of every general election held in the state from the 60's to the 90's. It is the enduring glory of the Democratic party that it placed this great law on the statute book and thereby rescued the state from the incalculable evils incident to a corrupted suffrage. Not only was it the greatest of reforms itself, but it was the fruitful parent of other great reforms which depend for realization upon an honest system of voting. Had the Democratic party done no more in all its later career, the passage of the Australian ballot law would alone entitle it to the lasting gratitude of the people of Indiana.

Coxeyism is all Wrong.

Several of our populist friends have found it to their taste to criticise the editor of this paper for his comments on "Gen" Coxey's speech last week. We have nothing to take back. Coxey is a dangerous example of what a demagogue can do, if he has a chance. When he said in his speech, that Christ was a Coxeyite, or words to that effect, he became not only irreverent but blasphemous. How people with Christian principles can follow Coxey, is more than we can see.

COXEY AND HIS TRAMPS COME PREPARED.

Set your Donations of Grub on the Doorstep. A Great Feast expected, for they will come prepared. Their clothes are stout, for they have on a pair of our Never-Rip Overalls that will bear the pressure of an Enormous Feast. They will look more like MILLIONAIRES than Trumps, for they will be fitted out complete in our Combination Suit of Coat and Pants, warranted not to rip and the BUTTONS CANNOT COME OFF—all for $2.00. Don't begrudge them these nice clothes, for you can have a full suit at the same price. An Elegant Shirt for 50 cents, fit for a King. Come and see them. Our line of Men's Socks is simply Immense. Our guarantee goes with every pair that you can wear them four weeks without washing and they will not lose their strength or flavor. Come and see them. Any size or color. LOOK OUT! for our advertisement for September, for we have a Carload of Clothing and Gents' Furnishings coming.

How Miracles Are Worked.

BY GEORGE F. ORMSBY.

From Home and Country (New York) for September.

Are "miracles" among the forgotten wonders of the lost arts?

"Why marvel ye at this?" asked Peter in Acts iii. 12, and then declared that it was no temporary might given to a mortal apostle that empowered the "lame" man to "leap and praise," but the unchanging gift of the unchanging God—an ever-present aid to those who, "in the name of Jesus of Nazareth" command with the impetus of faith, "Rise up and walk!"

The plodding chroniclers of the Bible were evidently simple and painstaking. One of the most interesting proofs of their laborious exactness is to be detected by a scrutiny of the narrative of the Witch of Endor (I. Sam. 28), related first, doubtless, by the wondering "two men" who "went with Saul." Hypnotism was not known by its present name in those days, but, as nature's laws do not vary, it existed then.

It was the night before the battle with the gathered hosts of the Philistines, when, moody and awed, the Israelite king "disguised himself" and sought a supposed conjuror at Endor. The ominous silence of "dreams, Urim, and prophets" had produced a unique disturbance in his mind. The threats of the dead Samuel, timorously recalled under the menacing dark shadow of the overwhelming army, encamped on Shunim's heights—apprehensions that death was near—produced in the superstitious monarch a state of fearful expectancy very favorable to hypnosis.

"Divine unto me," he entreated the women, "by the familiar spirit, and bring him up whom I shall name unto thee."

The description which follows tallies precisely with the incidents peculiar to a case of hypnotism. It has striking, eccentric differences from a ghost-story, as such would naturally be told.

Town Ordinance.

An ordinance to compel the grading and planking or paving of certain side walks.

Whereas: It is the opinion of the Board of Trustees of the incorporated town of Auburn, DeKalb county, state of Indiana, that public convenience requires that the sidewalks on the east side of Railroad street in said town should be paved or planked from the intersection of said street with Seventh street on the north, and the public school grounds on the south; therefore, be it ordained by the Board of Trustees of said town that the side walks along the west ends and sides of lot numbered eight (8) in Ashley's first addition and lots numbered nine (9) and twenty-six (26) in Ashley's second addition and lots numbered twenty-seven (27), forty-four (44) and forty-five (45) in Brant & Ashley's addition all in said town of Auburn, shall be planked, or paved by the owners thereof, respectively.

SECTION 2.

Such planking or paving shall be so placed or constructed that the surface thereof shall be on the true grade and the inner side or edge there of one foot (1 ft.) from the sides or ends of said lots respectively, and to be four (4) feet wide.

To plank said side walks there shall be used three (3) stringers, laid lengthwise with said street, of durable timber, not less than five (5) inches wide and three (3) inches thick. The plank must be of sound and durable timber, not less than one and one-fourth (1¼) inches thick, no more than six (6) inches wide, to be nailed crosswise on said stringers with three ten (10) penny nails at each bearing; said stringers within four (4) inches of each end of each plank, so that the end of no plank shall protrude more than two [2] inches over the outside stringer.

SECTION 3.

All of said side walks shall be completed by the 15th day of October, 1894, and in case of the refusal or failure of the owner or owners of any of said lots to so complete the same within said time, the marshal of said town shall proceed to cause the same to be graded and planked, as by this ordinance required and as authorized by Sections 3359 and 3360 of the Revised Statute of the State of Indiana of 1881.

SECTION 4.

It is further ordered that this ordinance be published in the "Auburn Courier" of said town and that it shall take effect ten (10) days after said publication.

Passed and adopted by said board in regular session this 3d day of September, 1894.

WM. H. BAKESTRAW,
President of Board.

Attest: MILO HUSSELMAN, Town Clerk.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly." Sold by Robbins and McCord druggist Auburn Ind. 34tf

As the crowd that attended "Faust and Marguerite" in Garrett Tuesday evening were leaving the opera house, they were attracted by a lurid glare in the north end of the city, and turning their steps in that direction found a cottage belonging to a party in Ft. Wayne in flames as there is no o's ern in that locality. The old hand engine could not be used. All efforts were therefore put forth to prevent the flames spreading to another building about eight feet distant. The firemen made a noble fight, aided by the old time "bucket brigade," and were successful. The burned property was vacant, and the origin of the fire is unknown.

Last Thursday morning, Geo. Lanning, wife and little daughter, Bertha, had a narrow escape from serious injury. They were going out on the Morning Star road. As they came to the bridge, the horse shied, and began backing finally pushing the rig off the narrow embankment. The occupents were thrown out, but not seriously injured though badly frightened at what they realized was a narrow escape from death.

Mrs. Less will return from Cleveland Thursday, where she has spent the past two weeks buying goods and acquainting herself with the many new features for the coming season. She will return fully prepared to show you the very latest novelties which can only be procured by spending time sufficient to visit different openings. The fact that the Pittsburg, Detroit and New York houses were exhibiting pattern hats there this week together with the excellent display by the houses of the ably is sufficient guarantee as to the variety of styles you will see at Cowan Sisters. Come to see us and we will spare no pains in showing you our goods.

The many DeKalb friends of F. K. Blake will be sorry to learn that he has been in poor health since last spring. He is located in Chicago in the practice of law and in that line is doing well. But last spring he took a severe cold, resulting finally in an abcess of the ear. When this was at last got under control, an acute form of rheumatism got hold of him. As soon as he could be moved he came to Ft. Wayne and placed himself under charge of Dr. E. J. McOscar, an old-time Smithfield friend. Here he began to improve and was in a few weeks able to return to Chicago, where he is now at his post again. We hope his improvement will be permanent.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: I have been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy; a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the greatest medicine in the world." Ashley Times:—Engineer Horner brought to our office a relic in his family which is something of a curiosity it being the telegram announcing the death of Mrs. Horner's father of date Sept. 18, 1851. The heading of the blank used announced that it was sent over "O'Riley's Atlantic, Lake and Mississippi Telegraph." "Ohio, Idiana and Illinois Line connecting directly Cincinnati, Toledo, Chicago and Evansville and intermediate places in the Wabash and Miami Valleys." The dispatch was sent from Eaton, Ohio, Sept. 18, 1851, by J. M. Gilmore to Henry Norris (Mrs. Horner's uncle) at Peru and was delivered Sept. 27, nine days after date. That was rapidly in those days but where would such a line be to-day, patrons would kick if it took nine hours now. The blank is on a better quality of paper than is now used and the printer informs the public that it was printed on Rosser's power press which was at that time a wonderful machine, but now you find power presses in most every country office. Great has been the progress in the last forty years and is it possible for us to make as rapid and marked advancement in the next forty.

An English Home.

On entering an Englishman's house the first thing one notices is how well his house is adapted to him. On entering an American's house the first thing one notices is how well he adapts himself to his house. In England the establishment is carried on with a prime view to the comfort of the woman. Men are more selfish than women, consequently the English home is as a rule more comfortable than the American home. An Englishman is continually going home; an American is continually going to business. One is forever planning and scheming to enjoy home and to stay at home, and to get the privileges of home; while the other is more apt to devote his energies to make his business a place to go to and in which to spend himself. These minor details of domestic life put their impress upon larger matters of business and politics.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman, druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1. 3

The Institute.

The teachers' institute closed Friday noon after one of the most successful sessions ever held. The interest taken was good, and the work excellent. We feel like complimenting all concerned, and especially Mr. Merica, who of course was the moving spirit from the beginning. The enrollment was, males, 89; females, 97; total, 186, with an average of 159. Only three who will teach this winter were absent, two being reported sick.

A Cure for Croup.

Among the incidents of childhood that stand out in bold relief, as our memory reverts to the days when we were young, none are more prominent that severe sickness. The young mother vividly remembers that it was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured her of croup, and and in turn administers it to her own offspring and always with the best results. Table Talk.

In the September issue of "Table Talk" housekeepers and home-makers will be much interested, for, in addition to the regular monthly Menus, there is a digest of the manner and way of carrying them out for the first week, under the title of "A Schedule for the week" by Helen Louise Johnson. Mrs. M. J. Myer and Miss Tillie May Forney, follow up fashion's caprices in all departments of the home, besides giving much readable matter on current subjects. There is also another of the series of articles on "Old-English Silver" and to many who are sending their boys to college for the first, "Jack's College Trunk" will be most helpful. This magazine is published in Philadelphia, at $1.00 per year; 10 cents, current issue or to our readers, a sample copy will be sent free.

The Reason Why

The Wisconsin Central has become known as the popular route for tourists and pleasure seekers, is because it pays particular attention to this class of travel and caters to the comfort and convenience of its patrons. Its trains are equipped with finest Pullman sleeping cars, parlor cars, and dining cars in which the meals are unexcelled. For the "travelers choice" to all the principal summer resorts in the northwest, the Yellowstone National Park. Maps, time tables and guide books will be mailed free upon application to Jas. C. IT is estimated that the yearly passenger trips on ferry boats between New Jersey and New York number 70,000,000; that the total for the New York ferries will exceed 100,000,000; that the number of boat trips equals 1,800,000, and the number of teams carried 5,000,000. All this immense traffic is carried on with remarkable safety.

THE idea that oat meal porridge is better for the brains than pie crust needs to be knocked out. There is a school in Glasgow, Scotland, to which the United States sends annually, as a reward of merit, the pupil standing highest in the naval academy here. Every year since this rule, which was 1879, an American has stood highest in the graduating class of that school, knocking the hundreds of Scotch boys.

WHEN Queen Victoria was crowned, seventy years ago, the ruling powers of the world have been changed greatly. She has in that time seen her throne vacated at least once, some of them several times. The Premier in her own country has died by ten men, all of whom are dead, with the exception of Gladstone, the Marquis of Salisbury and the Earl of Roseberry. Beginning with Martin Van Buren, sixteen men have in turn filled the office of President of the United States during her reign, and of these only two remain, Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Harrison.

MEXICO has been invaded by the movement for the enfranchisement of woman, and just now the movement is being discussed by the Mexican press with no little animation. The immediate cause of the present interest was the refusal of one of the city courts to license a young woman law student. Leaders in the movement have long been urging the broadening of woman's sphere, and advising women to enter positions which have hitherto been monopolized by the men. They were advised to become saleswomen, stenographers, bookkeepers or telegraphers. Two years ago a young woman graduated at a medical school and was admitted to practise medicine.

HERE is a recipe for the selection of a husband: "For a man's birth look to his linen and finger nails and observed the inflections of his voice. For his tastes study the color of his ties, the pattern and hang of his trousers, his friends and his rings—if any. For his propensities, walk round and look carefully at the back of his head, and remember, girls, never to marry a man whose neck bulges ever so little over his collar. If you want a successful man, see that he has a neat foot; he will more quicker, get over obstacles faster, than a man who falls over his own toes, and trips up other folks with 'em, too. For his breeding, talk sentiment to him when he is starving and ask him to carry a bandbox down the street when you've just had a row. To test his temper tell him his nose is a little on one side and you don't like the way his hair grows—and if that won't fetch him nothing will."

NOBODY but a Chicago girl would dream of hugging a burglar. More than that, nobody but a Chicago girl would hug a burglar. New York girls, San Francisco girls, St. Louis girls, Milwaukee girls—we venture to say that all of them would scream and faint in the unexpected presence of a housebreaker. Not so with the glorious girl of Chicago. She doesn't scream and faint, not she. She walks boldly up to the horrid man and throws her arms around his neck and holds him in a fast embrace. At least that is what one of them did the other night. She was one of four feminine bachelors who occupy a flat together. At midnight they went home together to find the apartment in possession of a masked and terrible live burglar. One of them hugged him while the others prepared a barricade, and then they confined him and went for a policeman. It was not their fault that during their absence the burglar escaped, nor can we blame the burglar for escaping. He showed no disposition to depart as long as he was being hugged, and therefore his sense and his gallantry are alike above reproach. So are the brave girl's, for as long as she was hugging him she did not seek police protection. The score is even all around, and we have new evidence that the Chicago product, whether girl or burglar, is the best made.

Many French Books.

There is a story current in Parisian editorial circles to the effect that when M. Laffite, the editor of The Bien Public, transformed that paper into The Voltaire, he called one of the regular members of his staff into his room and announced that he wished to make the experiment of including in his paper a feature to be found nowhere else in the daily press. This was to be nothing less than a complete criticism of current literature.

He pointed out that while every paper devoted careful critical articles to even the slightest farce played at the least important of the theaters, the French press was content, as far as literary criticisms was concerned, merely to publish an occasional paragraph on some novel which had made a sensation. He felt sure that his project would be a success, and that the public would be grateful for an abstract and brief chronicle of the literary output, made upon the same lines as the daily record of dramatic news—in a word, for a criticism of every publication. "Of every publication? My dear Sir, you cannot mean it seriously!" was the reply of the journalist, who, I believe, was Emile Bergerat.

"Have you realized that every day there are published at least ten volumes of sufficient interest to deserve notice? You would need an army of reviewers and newspapers of thirty pages to publish their articles."—Athenaeum.

A Snake Mountain.

There is a horseshoe-shaped mountain in Manitoba which literally swarms with snakes twice every year. In the early autumn those slippery customers gather there from all directions, mostly from the prairie country of the south. In one side of the mountain there is a circular hole about fifteen feet deep, and as smooth as if it had been fashioned with a well auger, where tens of thousands of reptiles spend the cold winter months together. Persons who have tried to explore this immense snake den during the summer, when the regular tenants are absent, say that dozens of subterranean passages lead out under the mountain in all directions from the bottom of the well. An authority estimates that he has seen 300,000 snakes of all sizes knotted together and piled up in a semi-torpid state in this "Well of Serpents," as it is called in the Northwest.

WOMAN'S DEPARTMENT

At the Indiana State Fair.

The Woman's Department of the Indiana State Fair, which will be held this year September 17 to 23, promises to be more interesting than ever before in the history of the State. Many new features will be added to the already beautiful and commodious building, and the arrangments of the exhibits will be made with a view to the pleasure of the visitors. This department is always full of interest to the ladies of the State, and many competitors for premiums reside outside of our great commonwealth. The building is one of the finest of its kind in the country. It is large and constructed with a view to the best and most comprehensive exhibit of woman's handiwork.

Minor State Items.

JAMES COOLY, aged 68, of Columbus, was struck by a J., M. & I. train, and will hardly recover.

MRS. SARAH LOVELL'S dress caught fire from a cook stove at Noblesville, and she was burned to death.

CLIFF MASON'S house, at Dublin, was burned, including some of his household goods and about $50 in money.

FARMERS near Goshen are organizing to protect themselves against hunters who trail over their premises without permission.

A SERIOUS head end collision between a passenger and freight train occurred on the C. E. & I. road, near Hillsdale. Both engines were wrecked. No one injured.

SECRETARY W. E. O'HAVEN of Greenfield, announces that Company A, Fifty-third Regiment, will hold its annual reunion at Greenfield on Sept. 19. All members of company and regiment are especially invited to meet. Half-fare rate has been granted from Indianapolis and return.

WILLIAM ADAMS, a carpenter residing at Fort Wayne, boarded westbound passenger train No. 43 on the Wabash to go to Huntington, but changed his mind. While the train was passing Fairfield avenue he jumped off, rolled under the train and was almost instantly killed. He leaves a large family.

GOTLEIB FRICKE was killed by the accidental discharge of an old musket near Fort Wayne. With a party of friends he started on a shooting trip. Six miles in the country the young men stopped at a farm house to get a drink. Fricke was stepping from the wagon when his pants caught the trigger of the musket, causing it to explode. The back of his skull was blown off and death was instantaneous. The remains were brought to his home.

MRS. LIZZIE NEWTON was instantly killed in a runaway accident on the Fairland and Shelbyville road, near Fairland. She was in a buggy in company with her sister-in-law, Mrs. James Gray. The horse became frightened, turned the buggy over, and threw the two women to the ground. Both of them were dragged a considerable distance. Mrs. Gray was also seriously hurt and may die. She is about 60 years old, while Mrs. Newton was 72.

IN the war of the rebellion Indiana had 156 regiments and 34 companies infantry, 175,775 men; 13 regiments of cavalry, 21,605; 12 companies and 25 batteries of artillery, 10,096, total, 208,367. These troops were in 308 engagements. In Virginia, 90; Tennessee, 51; Georgia, 41; Mississippi, 24; Arkansas, 19; Alabama, 18; Kentucky, 16; Louisiana, 15, Missouri, 9; North Carolina, 8; Maryland, 7; Texas, 2; South Carolina, 2; Indian Territory, 2; Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana, 1 each. Total 17 States

AT a revival at Monticello recently all who paid their debts were asked to rise. The rising was general. Then those who did not were asked to stand up. One individual arose and explained that he could not pay because all the rest of the congregation were owing him.

A BODY of masked men broke in a building in Wilkinson, owned by Charles Eakin, formerly used for a saloon and rented to parties to open out again next week. The pool table and all the furniture and fixtures were completely demolished, aggregating a loss of about $300.

O. M. CARVER, a prominent farmer northwest of Greencastle, died from injuries received in an accident. He was riding a horse, which fell on him, causing internal injuries. He was 32 years old and married.

THE 5-year-old daughter of Leander Alger, five miles north of Wabash, was burned to death. With her brother and father she went out in the field burning stubble and while her father was away firing the straw the flames surrounded the child. She tried to fight her way through, but was driven back, and when her father, hearing her screams, reached her she had fallen over and was unconscious, dying an hour afterward.

MOSES ROSE, aged 14, while stealing a ride on a P., C., C. & St. L. passenger train, fell beneath the wheels and was fatally injured at Jeffersonville.

HENRY VODDE, a fifteen-year-old lad, was almost instantly killed at Fort Wayne, by falling under a Wabash train while trying to run across ahead of the locomotive.

LOUIE HATCH, aged 3, got a tobacco tag in his throat the other day, and suffered great agony. The tag was forced into his stomach, and was thrown from his stomach by an emetic.

AT the American Tin-Plate factory, Elwood, Major Stewart, employed in the tinning department, accidentally dropped some water in the acid flux, causing it to explode, flying all over his hands, head and face, and possibly destroying his sight. If he recovers he will be disfigured for life.

THE great Burton family, numbering 150,000 in the United States, and about eighteen hundred in the vicinity of Mitchell, held their annual reunion in a beautiful grove near that city. Prof. C. H. Hall of Franklin, made the annual address. At noon dinner was served by the Burton family. Many after dinner speeches were made by prominent members of the family.

A SHOCKING accident happened at the Martz canning factory, Tipton, which will result in the death of Mrs. George Teague. She was feeding the can filler and her hair caught in a line shaft above her. The entire scalp, including her forehead and one ear, was jerked off. There is not a hair on her head nor eyebrows that are left. The surgeons dressed the wounds, but they say that there is no possible hope for her recovery.

A CASE of extreme cruelty to a child came to light recently at New Albany. A few nights ago Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Harris had a fight at their home on Water street. Mrs. Harris was worsted, and in a spirit of revenge she seized her 6-year-old stepson Charles and threw him on a redhot stove. Both arms were badly burned before Mr. Harris could pull him off. He drove his wife from the house and the little boy is being cared for by relatives. Complaints will be preferred against Mrs. Harris.

SECRETARY BICKNELL, who has just returned from a visit to the Southern prisons, says the abolition of the lock-step there is regarded as a move in the right direction. Through the lock-step long-time prisoners acquired a peculiar gait that branded them all their lives as ex-convicts. The Northern prison will soon follow the example of the Southern prison in this respect. The new wall around the latter institution has been finished. It is thirty-six feet high, and extends seven feet under ground, resting on a base several feet wide. The prison is in an overcrowded condition.

THE State Tax Commission is giving attention to the allowances that have to be made to the attorneys who carried the railroad and other corporation tax cases to the United States Supreme Court. The total amount of property in controversy was over $22,000,000, said to be the largest amount ever in litigation as to taxation. The tax on this amount reached nearly $1,000,000, and the attorneys consequently expected a big fee. It is said that the board intends to distribute $26,000 among three attorneys, giving John W. Kern $10,000, W. A. Ketcham, $10,000, and A. J. Beveridge $6,000.

MR. AND MRS. BENJAMIN SHAW, residing five miles west of Somerset, were fatally injured as they were being driven home. On the road the old family horse threw his tail over the lines, and when the boy endeavored to release them the animal began to kick. The heels of the excited horse struck Mr. Shaw, breaking three ribs and tearing others loose, while he was hurt internally by the fall from the vehicle. Mrs. Shaw was thrown out of the buggy on her head and received injuries which she will not survive. Mr. Shaw is 82 and Mrs. Shaw 65 years of age.

TWO LOADED motor cars on the Hammond, Whiting, and East Chicago Electric Street Railway collided near Whiting. Chas. Mashino, motorman, and Gustav Peterson and A. E. Faulkner, passengers, were fatally injured. Several persons were more or less bruised.

ONLY eight of the ninety-two counties have reported to the State Board of Election Commissioners the number of voters in their precincts. At the last election tickets were distributed to 1,017 townships, 2,946 precincts, and 544,360 voters, two for each voter. This year tickets enough will be sent out to supply 750,000 voters with two each.

TRUTH NOT IN THEM.

REPUBLICANS MISREPRESENT FACTS REGARDING SUGAR.

False and Misleading Assertions as to the Sugar Duties in the New Tariff—Attitude of Republican Senators Towards Those Duties.

"Tell the Truth."

Several prominent journals of the Republican party are filling their editorial columns with false or misleading assertions as to the sugar duties in the new tariff and the attitude of the Republicans in the Senate toward those duties. In this way preparation for the coming Congressional campaign is made. The Chicago Inter Ocean, leading organ of McKinleyism in the West, publishes the following in an editorial article:

> By action of a Democratic President, of a Democratic Senate, and of a Democratic House of Representatives, the people will be taxed at the rate of $40,000,000 or so a year for the exclusive benefit of the sugar trust.

The Inter Ocean knows that this is not true. The revenue duty of 40 per cent. will yield "$40,000,000 or so a year" not for the exclusive benefit of the sugar trust, but for the exclusive benefit of the National Treasury. The trust has a protective duty on refined sugar aside from that, and while it will yield a large sum, that sum cannot be $40,000,000. It will be only about three-quaters of the sum realized by the trust every year out of the McKinlay tariff's protective duty on refined sugar, because the trust's duty in the new tariff is only about three-quarters of its duty in the McKinley act. We think it should have no duty whatever, but why should any one lie about it? The Inter Ocean would have its readers believe that the trust pockets all the revenue duty that really goes into the treasury.

The New York Tribune said, on the 20th inst., in an editorial article:

> Raw sugar is now practically free under reciprocity conditions. Under the Gorman bill it will be heavily taxed, and in such a way that the monopolists will be enriched at the expense of consumers.

This is another version of the Protective Tariff League's assertion that the McKinley tariff gave the people free sugar. It did not. Moreover, while it is true that the sugar trust will be "enriched at the expense of consumers" (although not so generously enriched as it has been by the McKinley tariff), it will be enriched by the duties on refined sugar, and not by the duty on raw, except so far as its stock of raw material on hand when the bill becomes operative is concerned. The trust's protective duties in the new tariff are too high—indeed there should be none whatever—but they are not so high as the trust's duties in the Republican tariff.

It is not true that the McKinley tariff gave the people free sugar. It empowered the trust to collect from the people a tax of 60 cents on every 100 pounds, and the trust admits that this tax has been collected. If 3,850,000,000 pounds of refined sugar are consumed here in a year, this trust tax in the McKinley tariff has been equivalent to $23,000,000 per annum. It to this be added the bounty paid by the people to the domestic producers, $9,375,000 year before last and about $12,000,000 last year, we have an annual tax of from $32,000,000 to $35,000,000 paid by consumers of sugar and the people generally on sugar under the McKinley tariff, a tax no part of which went into the National Treasury, two-thirds of it going to the combined refiners and the remainder to the domestic producers.

The Philadelphia Press has repeatedly asserted in the last few days that the Republicans are opposed to protective duties for the sugar trust and are in favor of "free sugar for the people," a policy "declared and embodied in the McKinley law." We have just shown that no such policy was embodied in that law, and we could prove it by fifty citations from the Press' own columns. We quote the following from the Press' recent editorial articles:

> Republicans stand ready to wipe out the inordinate trust profits.—[Aug. 18.]
> The Republican record in the tariff fight at Washington is all right. . . . Let the Republicans keep their record straight. They are for free sugar and the repeal of the Gorman bill. They are against any bonus for the sugar trust. They are against the trust monopoly and for free sugar.—[Aug. 20.]

No confirmation of this news about the Republican attitude can be found in the Congressional Record. This article of the 20th was published after the highly interesting proceedings of last Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and the passage of the Murphy resolution by Republican votes. The official record shows that the Senate Republicans strove to block and kill the House free sugar bill or any modification of it, and that they were in combination with Gorman and the sugar trust Democrats throughout the fight against this measure. We analyzed the parliamentary record of those three days on Monday last. The Republican Senators could at any time in those days have had the assistance of at least sixteen Democrats in cutting off the sugar trust's "bonus," but they preferred an alliance with Gorman and his group.

Were Gorman and his "conservative" associates "against any bonus for the sugar trust?" Were they "against the trust monopoly?" Does the Press think they were? Does it think the Republican Senators joined them and assisted them in order that they might thereby show their opposition to this "bonus" and this "monopoly?" The Republican Senators were "against any bonus for the sugar trust" as Mr. Quay, the Republican Senator from the State in which the Press is published, was against it, and it was by his vote in July last that the differential of ⅛ of a cent was saved to the trust. Their votes on last Thursday, Friday and Saturday were even more useful and valuable to the trust than his had been in July.—New York Times.

McKinleyism Doomed.

The McKinley bill is dead, never to rise again. Call the bill that has taken its place what you will, it has slain the monster of corruption and oppression that was saddled on the necks of the American public by monopolistic greed, through the agency of the present Governor of Ohio. That of itself is enough to make the nation rejoice. The blow aimed in the autumn of 1892 has fallen at last, and if through circumstances beyond the control of honest men its force has been so weakened as to save the principle of protection from annihilation, there was enough vigor in the arm that struck to demolish the chief product and expression of the odious system.

Looking at the new bill closely, it will be seen to be an important step toward a revenue tariff. Unsatisfactory as it must be to genuine reformers, it is far more distasteful to protectionists, and its most incensed critics are persons and newspapers like the New York Sun, that have persistently fought or blocked the reform movement. In nearly every item of the bill there has been a reduction amounting in the average to between 20 and 30 per cent. Important additions have been made to the free list. Even in the sugar schedule the consumer has profited, for through the tangle caused by the alteration in the manner of applying the duty on imported sugar, in spite of all that has been said to the contrary, it is apparent that sugar is much less heavily protected in the Senate bill than in the McKinley bill. The direct protection of refined sugar is reduced from 6-10 of a cent per pound to ⅛ of a cent per pound, although in various ways the trust will be able to increase the tribute. Then the bounty is wholly abolished, and that of itself saves the people upward of ten million dollars a year.

So it will be seen that in spite of the scoundrelism of the Gorman-Brice clique and the pollution of the Senate by the monopolistic tyrants whom the McKinley bill bred the victory of 1892 has not gone without reward. Some of the burden has been lifted from the shoulders of the weary people. More important still, the bill, as Mr. Cleveland suggests, is "a barrier against the return of a mad protection" and "furnishes a vantage-ground for further aggressive operations against protection, monopoly and governmental favoritism." The McKinley bill is dead. McKinleyism is doomed.—Chicago Post.

HIS FACE TOWARD THE MORNING.

CAN THEY FOOL HIM AGAIN?

Why a Reduction?

There is some talk by woolen manufacturers about reducing the wages of their employes by reason of the tariff legislation. But why should they do it? Others of their class confess candidly that the bill protects them abundantly. A prominent manufacturer, Robert Bleakie, says: "I am well pleased with the tariff bill just passed as affecting wools and woolens. As a result of this bill, I predict a degree of prosperity permanent and lasting to New England's woolen industry. I feel sure that within three years public opinion will have so changed, from the beneficial effects that will be apparent, that it will be difficult to find a woolen manufacturer in the country who will not be a convert to the new order of things."

And naturally so, when one looks at it. The interests of these manufacturers have been very well cared for, indeed. They get their raw material, wool, free from the moment the bill becomes law, and they get the full benefit of the McKinley rates on the manufactured products till Jan. 1, 1895. All the wool they import, and all they have in bonded warehouses, they get absolutely free; while, until that time, they have the full benefit of the high McKinley duties. For four months they will be better protected than ever before, and yet they threaten to reduce wages! After Jan. 1 they will have 50 per cent. protection and free wool. Is not their outlook good?—Rome Daily Sentinel.

Tin-Plate Prophets Routed.

The tin-plate industry continues to display a perverse indifference to the goings on in Washington, and is reported to be pretty active at a moment when it ought to be in the throes of dissolution. A Pittsburg dispatch says: "The settlement of the tariff has given an immediate impetus to the development of the black-plate and tin-plate industry." The settlement of the tariff, it has been freely predicted, was to sound the knell of the tin-plate business. If the dispatch from Pittsburg is to be credited, "plans that have been held in abeyance for months are now being put into effect and considerable eagerness is displayed to invest money in this direction." Three considerable projects for tin-plate establishments are named.—Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin.

The Monopolists' Idol.

The Cecil (Md.) Democrat says: "This great man (Senator Gorman) stands today the idol of the monopolist and the self-convicted agent of the sugar trust. Exalted by the Republican party, condemned by his own, winning laurels as a shrewd manipulator, losing caste as a public servant, his honor is swallowed up in the reproaches of his friends."

VAST fortunes are supposed to lie buried and forgotten in the Mexican mountains.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Wright and His Pass.

Cannot Mr. Wright see the inconsistency of accepting a favor like this from Pullman and then sitting as an examiner in a strike in which Pullman himself figures?—Toledo Blade.

Colonel Wright investigating the Pullman strike with one hand and waving a Pullman pass in the other would make a great hit as a living picture.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

The fact that Carroll D. Wright has a Pullman pass will cause many people to believe that his judgment as an investigator of the Pullman strike cannot be unbiased.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Being a "personal friend" of Pullman and carrying a Pullman pass in his pocket, Labor Commissioner Wright would have done himself honor by declining to serve on the investigating committee.—Kansas City Journal.

If Mr. Wright has a pass entitling him to ride free on Pullman cars at any time he should have returned it to the giver before undertaking the present investigation, which will prove of little value unless it is an impartial and thorough one.—Buffalo Enquirer.

If the admitted fact that he is a deadhead sleeper and a close personal friend of Sir George Pullman has no bearing whatever on his conduct in the strike inquiry, why is Commissioner Carroll D. Wright so highly incensed over its publication?—Louisville Times.

If he was called for jury duty in a case where the Pullman Company was one of the litigants the fact that he had a Pullman pass would, upon its disclosure before his acceptance, be cause for his instant rejection. If the discovery was made after a verdict it would be sufficient cause for the granting of a new trial or the setting aside of the verdict. And the same would be true if he was the trial judge.—Terre Haute Express.

The Armor-Plate Scandal.

A more disgraceful chapter of contractors' dealings with the government would be hard to find than is supplied by this investigation.—Baltimore Sun.

Both the Carnegie company and the government inspectors are handled without gloves in the report made by the investigating committee, of which Mr. Cummings is chairman.—Mercury.

The immense amount of noise about frauds in armor plates and castings of nearly every kind for the navy has resulted at last in the arrest of two contractors, charged with plugging Uncle Sam's plates and plucking his pockets.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The officials of the Carnegie company will not relish the report of the committee appointed to investigate the facts regarding the quality of armor-plate which has been furnished the government. Congressman Amos Cummings is an adept in writing sharp and stinging criticism on occasion.—Boston Globe.

The committee finds that it cannot speak concerning the Carnegie armor-plate scandal except in the superlative degree, and the burden of the Congressmen's complaint against the Pennsylvania iron-workers is "that the commission of such frauds is a moral crime of the gravest character."—Newark Advertiser.

Remarks on Mr. Pullman.

If Duke Pullman has a single friend left in Illinois the fact does not appear on record. He is the most despised man of his day and generation.—Illinois State Register.

When all this trouble shall be ended the memory of the condition of the Pullman men and the fact that the strike brought that condition to public notice will remain—a lesson for the great corporations of the future.—Grand Rapids Herald.

The Pullman company's contracts with other corporations contain a provision that all differences shall be adjusted by arbitration, and the people at large are lost in wonder why the rule does not also apply to his employes.—Springfield News.

Recent events are calling special attention to the management of the Pullman Palace Car Company, and the smaller shareholders think they are being squeezed to death by the autocratic "boss," George M. Pullman, whose arbitrary methods have immensely aggravated public sentiment against the Pullman company.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Never has any investigation into charges of official wickedness revealed so much of what appears to be horribly discreditable.—Washington Star.

The corruption is a result of Tammany methods, and its exposure will probably contribute to the downfall of that organized body.—Indianapolis Journal.

The investigation of police affairs in New York City is progressing with a vigor which is as surprising as it is certainly welcome to all honest citizens.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

It reveals that it is the lowest and most bestial class of criminals that are able to purchase protection of those who are ostensibly employed and paid by public taxation to suppress crime.—Philadelphia Times.

Tillman's Manifesto.

The drought in South Carolina will soon disappear, as Gov. Tillman says he will open the dispensaries.—Florida Times-Union.

Tillman setting up the State dispensary in South Carolina against the court's decision is a case of other spirits against the spirit of the law.—Philadelphia Times.

Just as peace has completed the spreading of her bright wings Mr. Tillman takes occasion to remind the country that the Governor of South Carolina we have with us always.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

TALLEST AND SMALLEST.

Two Business Buildings—One Is 348 Feet, the Other 10 Feet High.

To appreciate the difference between the tallest and the smallest buildings in New York City, it is necessary to know that one is 348 feet and the other 10 feet in height. The tallest building is that of the

TWO BUILDINGS.

Manhattan Life Insurance Company, at No. 68 Broadway, which is just being completed. From the building level of Broadway to its top landing it is 348 feet; other measurements are in proportion. The Manhattan represents the most splendid type of the modern "sky-scraper." Handsome architecturally, imposing in its solidity, it is one of the most striking buildings in the world. Its interior arrangement and finish are not only beautiful, but, to some extent, original. The floors, the stairs, the walls and the multitudinous passages have been constructed regardless of expense.

The smallest complete building in New York City is in Houston street, near Mulberry. It is so small, indeed, that one might question whether it is really a building in the accepted sense of the word; but since it is duly registered in the Department of Buildings, which not only issued it a certificate of inspection, but approved its construction, it must be be known as a building. By contrast with the mammoth Manhattan it is little more than a dry-goods box, but nevertheless it serves the purpose for which it was constructed. The dimensions of this liliputian structure are: Front, 7 feet; depth, 10 feet; height, 10 feet. The contrast between it and the Manhattan does not lie alone in the difference in size, but rather in the conception, in finish and in the purposes for which they are used.

Why Incense Was Used.

The sense of smell, which at the dawn of civilization was a declining one, and since then has tended to become less and less of value, would appear to have little chance of gaining an important position in any branch of human culture. And yet it came about that one characteristic of the exciting cause of odors brought them into prominence in the service of religion, and this prominence has continued in that connection up to the present day. Far back in the history of our race, at any rate long before the dawn of history, the apparently immaterial and, so to speak, ghostly nature of the exciting cause of the sensation of smell, led, it would seem, step by step, to the use of incense in the service of the gods.

When it began to be felt that the ancestral or other spirit that had to be appeased was hardly of a nature to consume the material food or drink offered to it to appease its wrath or to gain its favor, an easy step of reasoning suggested that this food or liquid would be more acceptable in the form of smoke or vapor. The gods had become of too spiritual a nature actually to eat the food, but they would still require some form of nourishment, and what could be more suitable to them than the fumes of burned flesh? This is the conception that is prominent, or, at all events, survives, in the descriptions of sacrifices in the "Illiad," where the thick clouds from the burning thighs of the slaughtered oxen, and from the fat in which they were wrapped, ascend to Olympus and cheer the assembled gods. It was but a step from this to the burning of fragrant woods and rosin to provide a less gross gratification. Moreover, by the consumption in their honor of these precious spices and fragrant gums, obtained at so much cost and trouble, another motive of sacrifice was satisfied.

The Egyptians in the preparation of their mummies had need of a vast store of spices and aromatics. This need, no doubt, was the origin of their trade with Southern Arabia—the land of Punt—a trade which attained to great importance under the eighteenth and nineteenth dynasties. That, in search of aromatics, there was also a more northern trade route, which must in early days have brought them into contact with the Hebrews, we have good proof. The Egyptians in this respect were far in advance of the Greeks of Homer. They burned their incense in a conser, using it in a similar way to the Buddhists and Christians of later days.

Strange Signs.

To the soldier on the march the frying-pan in which to cook his rations was a rare luxury, says the Old Veteran, so he learned to broil his pork or fresh beef on a stick or ramrod held over his camp-fire, an occasional fall in the ashes only making the meat more easily digestible, if not more palatable.

But the tin pot to boil the coffee in was an absolute necessity. The army surgeons ordered the soldiers to drink coffee early and often to keep off the malaria, a command the boys were willing to obey, even though the milk and sugar was not often to be had.

There was an Irishman in the company with me, illiterate, oily and good-natured; though not averse to a scrimmage at times, thoroughly honest among his own comrades, but a good hand at foraging in an enemy's country. Moreover, he had a strong prejudice against the "Dutchers," as called a Pennsylvania regiment that marched with us.

One morning Jack's tin dipper was missing, and you may be sure there was a fine row, until at last he declared the "Dutchers" had stolen it. "But," said he, "I shall know it again if I see it, and I will have it, too."

Sure enough, the next morning Jack came to the fire with his dipper all right, but the tin was almost new and untarnished, instead of being blackened by the smoke of a thousand camp-fires. The thief had scratched his initials on the handle, and as Jack could neither read nor write, he had to go to the sergeant of the company to have the strange signs interpreted. The sergeant generously responded and Jack felt both wise and content. That morning he was on hand bright and early.

"Where did you steal the new dipper, Jack?" asked some one.

"Sure, it's me same old dipper," replied Jack, "but the Dutchers brightened it up a bit, thinking they would fool me. Don't you see me letters on the handle? C. L. stands for John Kelly."

THE MINNEAPOLIS.

The Fastest War Vessel Afloat on the Waters of the Earth.

In the matter of shipbuilding the nations of the earth bow to Uncle Sam. Several European nations have stronger fleets numerically than our Government, but our infant navy for its quality easily leads the world. The test of the new cruiser Minneapolis demonstrates the fact that we have the fastest war vessel in the world, and, counting the Columbia, the two fastest ships afloat on the waters of the earth. The Minneapolis developed a sustained speed of over 23 knots and for a distance of over two knots a speed of 25.02 knots. According to the English plan of determining speed—running their vessels over a measured mile—the record of the Minneapolis would be 25.02 knots, something never approached by any foreign vessel. By the same standard the Columbia's record is over 24 knots.

This is a remarkable record, inasmuch as the United States is only in the infancy of shipbuilding. Our naval progress is watched with surprise in Europe, and a foreign writer in comparing our vessels with those of Great Britain says that, considered as all-around fighting and scouting machines, our cruisers are better than the English by not less than from 15 to 40 per cent. The Minneapolis, of which we present an illustration, is 412 feet long, 58 feet in breadth, 22 feet 6 inches in draught, has a tonnage of 7,350 and 21,000 horse power. The Columbia's dimensions are the same, but the horse power is 18,000. In design and finish the Minneapolis is entirely American.

A Clock of Birds.

The ingenuity of the scientist who established a "clock of flowers," by planting in regular specimens whose corrollas opened at specified hours, has been matched by a German who has composed a "clock of birds." This is especially a night clock. The birds and hours of their songs are as follows: The chaffinch from half past one in the morning until two; the titmouse from two to half past two; the quail from half past two to three; the redstart from three to half past three; the ousel from half past three to four; the warbler from four to half past four; the marsh tit from half past four to five; the sparrow at five. It is a curious incident, that the most celebrated of the birds, whose song has always served to mark the hour, is missing in the list. "It is not yet near day; it was the nightingale, and not the lark. . . . It was the lark, the herald of the morn, no nightingale."

No Postage Stamps Sold.

In Mexico when the mail arrives at the postoffice the names of people to whom letters are addressed are written on a slip of paper and posted on a bulletin board. Merchants go every morning to examine this announcement, and if they find their names on the list hand their cards to the delivery clerk, who hands them their mail. No postage stamps are sold, but those having letters to mail take them to the postmaster, who sticks the stamps on. In all public places men are found sitting around provided with pen, ink and paper, ready to conduct the correspondence of any one who has not the ability to do so. The number of these scribes proves that their business is a paying one.

A Variety of Hats.

Wonderful is the variety of headgear worn in the streets and parks of Paris. In most instances the station of a person is defined by the manner in which his head is covered. Maids and nurses are in white caps, often decorated with gay ribbons; peasant women, fresh from the country, appear in bonnets whose queer shapes differ according to the province whence the wearer has come; and market women wear colored handkerchiefs twisted around the head in a style they term marmotte. Workmen, tradesmen and those in the service of special companies wear on their heads the insignia of their occupations. Civil employes, police, postmen and firemen are uniformed; the drivers of omnibuses, tramways and carriages have their distinctive hats, and to a stranger it appears as if all business were under military rule. Pastry cooks' apprentices appear in caps of immaculate white linen. The drivers of private carriages have hats decorated with various bands of gold and silver, as well as cockades of different colors. Well-bred Paris poodles are shaved once a month. Men who make their living by shaving them bear the announcement of their trade around their hats. They are high, black, varnished ones, probably originally belonging to coachmen, on which are painted half-clipped poodles and half opened shears.

Merely a Speculation.

At first thought, Egypt would be the last place to look for the invention of hooped vessels, its arid climate making it especially unsuited for their employment. Possibly, however, that may have been the compelling cause of their invention. All through the East the bamboo is largely used for making hollow vessels, a section of the stem through a node securing a solid bottom, and one between the nodes an open mouth for a natural tub or bucket. In all well-wooded regions, nothing would be more natural than the employment of hollow tree trunks for the same purpose, or sections of tree stumps, hollowed out by fire or otherwise. In drying, such vessels would split and spoil, and it would require no great natural genius to repair them by means of withes or wooden bands, the primitive form of the hoop. If the users of such natural barrels should migrate to a region where timber was scarce, economy of lumber would be likely to suggest the building of barrels from pieces artificially split, in short, the use of staves, by means of which the primitive cooper would be able to make several barrels out of a block that would suffice but for a single dugout. But this is a speculation merely. It is enough to know for certain that the cooper's art, like the potter's, is one of extreme antiquity.

Increased Trade of the South.

Very significant, indeed are the figures of the bureau of statistics showing the exports from the United States in the eleven months ended May 31, 1894. The total was $834,000,000, against $782,000,000 in the like period of the preceding year, an increase of $52,000,000. But more than half of this increase was in exports from the South, showing the decided revival of business activity in that section. The exports from Southern ports aggregated $285,700,000, or $27,000,000 more than in eleven months of the year ended May 31, 1893. Baltimore's exports aggregated $73,963,000; those of Charleston, $13,028,130; Galveston, $34,985,000; New Orleans, $79,373,000; Newport News, $13,638,000; Norfolk and Portsmouth, $10,039,000; Pensacola, $3,694,000; Richmond, $3,965,000; Savannah, $24,815,000; Wilmington, $6,999,000. These totals, as respects some of the ports, are surprising. The rates of increase over last year are also surprising. Baltimore's increase was $7,400,000; that of Savannah, $5,900,000; of Newport News, $6,000,000; of New Orleans, $5,100,000; of Charleston, $4,000,000.—Baltimore Sun.

A MISTAKE ALL AROUND.

ASIDE from the fact that the cheap baking powders contain alum, which causes indigestion and other serious ailments, their use is extravagant.

It takes three pounds of the best of them to go as far as one pound of the Royal Baking Powder, because they are deficient in leavening gas.

There is both health and economy in the use of the Royal Baking Powder.

Quite a Family.

Queen Victoria's fifty-six living descendants are cast in the shade by the remarkable family of the Dowager-Duchess of Abercorn. A fortnight ago this venerable lady saw 101 of her descendants assembled at one time and in one place. It was at Montagu House, Whitehall, London, the residence of the Duke of Buccleuch, where an interesting ceremony took place in commemoration of the Dowager-Duchess' 82 birthday. To celebrate that event, the pretty idea had been acted on that all her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren—101 persons, ranging in age from 60 years to 4 months—should assemble to offer their congratulations to the venerable lady. The Duchess having taken her place in the ball-room, the various families of her descendants filed past her, headed by her eldest daughter, the Dowager-Countess of Lichfield, with her thirteen children and thirteen grandchildren.

Few Bacteria in Sewer Air.

No less than one hundred samples of air from a Berlin sewer have been examined by Dr. Petrie, and on one occasion he is said to have found no organisms in it at all. In another experiment only one bacterium was traced and three molds. Curious as it may seem, it would, therefore, appear that drain air, as regards freedom from microbes, is frequently superior to that which we inhale in our houses and compares very favorably in this respect with the air in crowded reception-rooms. Mr. Laws, commenting on these experiments, says that although the organisms of sewer air probably do not constitute any source of danger, they may contain some poisonous chemical substance capable of affecting the general vitality to a very serious extent.—Invention.

Forest Fires and Wicked Weeds.

Whenever there is a costly forest fire, or some pestilential weed overruns a territory, the first rush is to legislatures for help. It reminds one of the Æsopian fable of the wagoner stuck in the mud, and praying to Jupiter to pull the wheels out. There could be no forest fires without an accumulation of dead brush. The annual fall of leaves or dead twigs might have a yearly fire run through them, and the trees not suffer at all. Instead of employing hordes of "inspectors" at enormous salaries to dress up in uniform, to "arrest gunners or campers, who may build fires or accidentally start a blaze," the same number of "men," at half the wages, to go to work and burn dangerous material, would make forests absolutely safe.—Mehan's Monthly.

The Picnic.

Everybody knows what a picnic is, but most folks would find it hard to say how it got that name, and yet it is simple enough when you come to learn it. When a picnic was being arranged for, the custom originally was that those who intended to be present should supply the drinkables and eatables. A list of those necessities having been drawn up, it was passed around, and each person picked out the article of food and drink that he or she was willing to furnish, and the name of the article was nicked or ticked off the list. The open-air entertainment thus became known as "pick and nick." The custom is said to have dated from 1802, so that the picnic is wholly an institution of the nineteenth century.—Harrison's Monthly.
